^{ab} This third and last of the great annual feasts is called in Ex. 23. 16 the feast of ingathering, because it was observed at the close of the year, when all the produce of the fields and vineyards had been gathered in. It is here called the feast of tabernacles, because the whole people were ordered to dwell in tabernacles or booths during the seven days of its observance, so as to commemorate the dwelling of the Israelites in booths in the wilderness after their deliverance from Egypt. In Le. 23. 39 it is called emphatically the feast of Jehovah, probably because it was considered the most important or the most joyful of all the feasts.—P.

25 Ye shall do no ^aservile work therein; but ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 Also on the tenth day of ^bthis seventh month there shall be a day of atonement: it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls,⁸ and offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

28 And ye shall ^cdo no work in that same day: for it is a day of atonement, to make an atonement for you before the LORD your God.

29 For ^dwhatsoever soul it be that shall not be afflicted in that same day, he shall be cut off from among his people:

30 And ^ewhatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, the ^fsame soul will I destroy from among his people.

31 Ye shall do no manner of work: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

32 It shall be unto you ^ga sabbath of rest, and ye shall afflict your souls: in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even shall ye celebrate your sabbath.⁹

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^hThe fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the LORD.¹

35 On the first day shall be ⁱan holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein.

36 Seven^a days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: ^jon the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a ^ksolemn assembly; and ye shall do no servile work therein.

37 These are the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to so called because on the fiftieth day from the passover this feast was celebrated), why, in this feast, is the commixture of leaven directly enjoined? Let it be observed, that a principle is good or bad according to the commixture. Thus, love, commingled with the world, cannot co-exist with the love of God, 1 Jn. 2. 15; but love, commingled with the knowledge of Christ, is very God dwelling in the heart, 1 Jn. 4. 16. Love in the one combination we must expel; love in the other must abound more and more, Phi. 1. 9; 1 Th. 3. 12. It is thus that leaven representing the active principle of the sinner in a state of worse than Egyptian bondage, Ro. 6. 16, is utterly to be cast out; while leaven representing the active principle of a believer 'made free from sin,' Ro. 6. 18, is carefully to be retained. This feast being one of the harvest, the leaven might well represent the secret blessing of increase the Lord had openly given; and being a feast of thanksgiving, would also set forth the secret, yet all-pervading and increasing, quality of grace, as it is written, Am. 4. 5, 'Offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven;' and again, 2 Pe. 3. 18, 'Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.' For the kingdom of heaven, both in the heart of a single believer and of the whole church, 'is like leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened,' Mat. 13. 33. C.]

Vcr. 24. [On account of the trumpets of rams' horns employed in announcing the jubilee, Le. 25. 9, and by Joshua at Jericho, ch. 6. 4, as well as by Asaph, Ps. 81. 3 (for the Hebrew original distinguishes them from the silver trumpets, Nu. 10. 2, 10), many of the Jewish rabbins are of opinion that the feast of trumpets was a memorial of the deliverance of Isaac by the substitution of a ram, Ge. 22. 13; and because the original Hebrew in the text means a shout of a multitude, as well as blowing of trumpets, others are of opinion that it was an anniversary memorial of creation, according to Job 38. 7. Basil and Theodoret considered it a memorial of the trumpet in the delivery of the law on Sinai, Ex. 19. 16; Patrick, as a solemn celebration of the entrance of the civil new year. Both Jennings and Cruden deliver it as an admitted opinion that the Scriptures do not, as in other cases, acquaint us with the occasion of its institution. Now, this being contrary to the analogy of Scripture, in which quotation and comparison constitute (under the Spirit of God) the great instruments of interpretation, let us therefore search the Scriptures, and we will find it recorded, Ps. 81. 3, 'Blow ye the trumpet in the new-moon, on our solemn feast day. For this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob. This he ordained in Joseph (the sold deliverer) for a testimony, when he (the Lord) went out through (or against) Egypt, where I heard a language that I understood not.' Is not the trumpet sound, therefore, a memorial of the judgment of Egypt and the deliverance of Israel, and of the unintelligible Egyptian tongue? For such is the sound of the trumpet, except blown by an experienced trumpeter, and falling upon the practised ear of the soldier instructed in the secret meaning of the different calls, see Nu. 10. 4; 1 Co. 14. 8. Hence, in the New Testament, the trumpet's voice is always for judgment and deliverance, as in 1 Co. 15. 52; and in the last scenes of Revelation, during the trumpet of the seventh angel, we are told, 'the mystery of God shall be finished,' Re. 10. 7, which terminates in the succeeding chapters, see 11. 15, 18; 12. 9-12; 17. 1; 18. 1, 2, 4; 19. 6, 7, in the judgment and destruction of the mystical Babylon, and the final deliverance of the church of the redeemed. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While I consider these sacred festivals as memorials—of the finished work of creation—of Israel's deliverance from Egypt—of the giving of the law at Sinai—of the provocation of the golden calf, and reconciliation relative to it—and of the Hebrews dwelling in tents—let me also discern them as typical figures of the gospel rests in the apostolic, millennial, and eternal periods. Jesus' person, work, and fulness appear as the end and substance of them all; and the oblations then offered represent to me Jesus, my whole burnt-offering, who kept the law and glorified all the divine perfections in mysteard; Jesus, my sin-offering, who pardons every crime; Jesus, my peace-offering, whose sacrifice was acceptable to God, quiets my conscience, and comforts my heart; Jesus, my meat-offering, who is meat indeed for the nourishment of my

CAIRO FROM THE CITADEL—NEAR WHERE THE ISRAELITES SOJOURNED IN EGYPT. [Leviticus, xxiv : i.]—We are viewing this city from the Citadel, which is a small town in itself, and was built by Mohammed Ali. From the Citadel we have a fine view of Cairo. The pyramids are in the distance to the west, and the Nile is seen winding its way toward the sea between. Cairo has a population of about 500,000. It has absorbed into itself and may be called the modern representative of Memphis and Heliopolis, and the surrounding cities of ancient times. The Khedive spends part of the year here. Cairo was the home of the distinguished pasha who aided DeLesseps in opening the Suez canal. It is a strange commentary upon history that this region, once swept by the Pharaohs, should now be under the dominion of a Christian nation. The English soldier is seen on all sides in Cairo.

3 It was a typical feast. It is supposed by many that our blessed Saviour was born much about the time of this feast; then he left his mansions of light above to 'tabernacle among us,' Jn. 1. 14; and he dwelt in booths. And the worship of God under the New Testament is prophesied of under the notion of keeping the feast of tabernacles, Zec. 14. 16. For (1) The gospel of Christ is 'to dwell in tabernacles,' to sit loose to this world as those who 'have here no continuing city.' . . . (2) It teaches us to 'rejoice before the Lord our God.' Those are the circumcision, Israelites indeed, that always 'rejoice in Christ Jesus,' Phi. 3. 3. soul. Yea, they represent to me how his people, and their services offered through him, are the delight of his Father, and the joy of his own heart. In the first-fruits of barley and flour let me behold Jesus in his debasement and glory, as having in all things the pre-eminence, sanctifying the whole harvest of lost men, and all their fruits of righteousness; and as offered to be the present and endless nourishment of my soul. Let them also figure out the lovers of God, who are first-fruits to God and the Lamb; and their ready and acceptable service. In the passover I discern him as our passover sacrificed for us. In the feast of unleavened bread, I see him, as through his whole life, a man of sorrows; but holy, harmless, and undefiled. In pentecost, I behold him exhibited as the law-fulfiller in the apostolic period for the salvation of multitudes. In the feast of trumpets, I hear the gospel sound, from morning to evening of the Christian period, proclaiming a full salvation, through a crucified Redeemer, to all the ends of the earth. In the fast of expiation, I again behold him finishing transgression, and making an end of sin, the sin of a whole lost world, in one day; and having by himself purged away our sins, sitting down at the right hand of the majesty in the heavens, there to appear in the presence of God for us. And in the feast of tabernacles he is prefigured as tabernacling in our nature and world, that we might have familiar fellowship with him, particularly in the apostolic and millennial, but chiefly in the eternal period. Let me bless the Lord for such manifold memorials of Jesus; and especially that our privileges under the gospel are still more excellent, our enemies themselves being judges. Let me observe holy seasons in a holy manner. Let the Sabbaths of the Lord be kept in all our hearts, in all our dwellings, and by all under our care. Let us honour the Lord with the first-fruits of all our substance. While kind to strangers, to the poor and destitute, let us hearken to the joyful sound of salvation to miserable sinners; and, looking on Jesus Christ as crucified for us, let us afflict our souls till God himself wipe away all tears from our eyes; and when our harvest and vintage of labours are ended, then shall we commemorate with pleasure our hardships by the way, and rejoice to change them for an eternal weight of glory.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 11. Blasphemed the NAME, as it stands in the Hebrew, the words 'of the Lord' being supplied by the translators. The Hebrew for blaspheme signifies to gore, as a beast with a horn; to pierce as with a sharp instrument: so it is translated, Is. 36. 6, and well representing the mixture of contempt and hatred of God from which blasphemy springs. The name is evidently that of the Angel of the covenant, of whom God had said, Ex. 23. 21, 'Provoke him not, for MY NAME is in him:' this was he of whom the apostle spoke, Ac. 3. 16, 'There is none other name given under heaven, amongst men, whereby we must be saved.' This is he who 'by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the angels,' He. 1. 4, even 'a name that is above every name,' Phi. 2. 9. All that heard the blasphemer were commanded to lay their hands upon his head, (1) to identify his person; (2) to testify to his guilt; (3) to witness the great truth that sin is worthy of death; (4) to admit the guilt of the whole congregation, were they authoritatively to sanction sin by silence, acquiescence, or approval; and (5) to represent its transference from the congregation to the guilty individual condemned and put to death by command of God, and the concurrence of the congregation.—Note, (1) How careful should Christians be, lest by any timid silence in the sight of the wicked, Ps. 39. 1, 2, by any failure of just and loving reproof, or by any act of joining with them or approval of them, Ep. 5. 11, they should become 'partakers of other men's sins,' 1 Ti. 2. 22. (2) Let blasphemers recollect that awful intimation, Mat. 12. 36; and if 'for every idle word,' then how for every blasphemous word, will they be able to 'give account in the day of judgment?' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in Jesus' light I see light, and feed upon him, especially from Sabbath to Sabbath, let me essay to give light in his church, and be a good savour of Christ, in the feeding of his people with the true bread which cometh down from heaven. Let such as desire to enjoy gospel light never grudge the necessary expenses of it. And never let the pure oil of divine truth be adulterated with the fancies of men. What a mercy is it that they who come to God find a table spread for them in the wilderness; and that on every Sabbath ministers are to provide fresh provision for the souls of their people!—That the saints, in one generation after another, are set upon the table of the church, and especially on Christ, to the honour and delight of JEHOVAH! Let me further observe, that a graceless offspring is often the fruit of an unhallowed marriage; that quarrels usually end ill; and that judges ought to act with deliberation, and yet with impartiality and zeal. I tremble, therefore, at the load of uncontrolled blasphemy which lies unpardoned on Britain; since men have spared the heaven-daring miscreants, till they are so common, that stones would almost be 9 Strangers, as well as native Israelites, were to receive the benefit of the law declared in ver. 21, if they suffered wrong, and should suffer its penalty if they did the wrong. It seems also intended here, that strangers as well as native Israelites should suffer the punishment due to blasphemy. Henry here says, 'God would hereby show what provision he had made for man's safety, in punishing those which are enemies to him (God), which should be an argument with magistrates to be jealous for his honour, and to punish those that blasphemed his name.'—I.

5 The year of jubilee was so called from the Hebrew word jobel, which signifies primarily 'a ram's horn,' and then the sound produced by it. 'The year of jubilee' then is just 'the year of the blowing of the horn,' and is thus analogous in name to the 'feast of trumpets.' The origin of the name is stated in ver. 9. Every fiftieth year, counting apparently from the time when they obtained complete possession of Canaan, was a jubilee. The jubilee year followed immediately on the sabbatical year, so that there were two fallow years occurring together. The three principal enactments for the year of jubilee were as follows:—1. Rest for the soil of the whole country. 2. The reversion of all property to its original owners. 3. Freedom of all slaves among the Israelites. It was, therefore, a year in which God emphatically and mercifully asserted his supreme and sovereign right to, and lordship over, every creature and every thing.—P.

Ver. 10. [The Jew might be compelled to surrender his own freedom; he might sell his children, or they might be arrested in payment of their father's debt, see ver. 39; Ex. 21. 2, 7, 8; 2 Ki. 4. 1. But while this compulsory sale of freedom was intended, and admirably calculated, to prevent fraudulent debts, or punish fraudulent debtors; the law of the year of release, Ex. 15. 12, and of the jubilee, was equally calculated to prevent the granting of fraudulent credits, with a view to enslave either the debtor or his family. Viewed as a political institute, the power of parents over their children's freedom amounts not to more than the power of apprenticeship: common, and even necessary, in all civilized nations. The proclamation of liberty was a lovely emblem of our deliverance from 'the bondage of corruption' into 'the glorious liberty of the sons of God,' Ro. 8. 21; and a glorious type of our great

5 This was a very equitable law, both for the sojourner to whom the man was sold, and to the Israelite who had been thus sold. The Israelite might redeem himself, or one of his kindred might redeem him; but this must not be done to the prejudice of his master the sojourner. They were therefore to reckon the years he must have served from that time till the jubilee; and then taking the current wages of a servant per year at that time, multiply the remaining years by that sum, and the aggregate was the sum to be given to his master for his redemption. The Jews hold that the kindred of such a person were bound to redeem him, lest he should be swallowed up among the heathen; and we find from Ne. 5. 8 that this was done by the Jews on their return from the Babylonish captivity. expedients, but by eternal principles: but it is to be explained and defended on its own merits, which are these. (1) These services were bought at their just price; not from men-stealers, traffickers condemned of God, Ex. 21. 16, but from the parties themselves. (2) They might be redeemed or manumitted without any legal hindrance, as is evident from the case provided for, Ex. 19. 20. (3) They are under the protection of the law, Jos. 9. 20, 21. (4) By comparing Ju. 1. 27, 28, 30, 33, 35, with 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, the bond-service, in a most remarkable instance, will be found a mere rent-charge or tribute, either in labour or money, in return for the possession of houses or lands. And farther, from Ezr. 2. 21; Ne. 7. 5, 6, 57, 61; 10. 28, compared with Ex. 12. 44, and with the everlasting covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 12, 13, 27, it will appear that bond-servants were (as in the case of Solomon's servants) legally incorporated with the church and kingdom, and entitled to all the covenant privileges of Abraham's lineal descendants. (5) By the Mosaic law every servant, and therefore, in a special manner, the privileged bond-servant, was protected by law from every form of oppression, De. 24. 14, 18. Now a system of servitude, under these restrictions and with these privileges, cannot in any sense be called slavery, nor be employed to countenance slavery; nor does it require any apologetic explanation; for, as God authorized it, it was a system both of mercy and justice: for man's perversion of it, neither explanation, apology, nor defence can be offered. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these sabbatical years I call to mind the happiness of Adam in paradise, and by faith discern the rest, the liberty, the happiness, the common salvation of a spiritual state, of the gospel period, and of the celestial state, all accepting Jesus' atoning blood, and published and offered to us in the gospel, may I be disengaged from all undue affection to created comforts, and never hasten to be rich, but depend on God for daily bread, in following the ways of religion and charity. In view of my eternal jubilee, let me consider wisely the cases of the poor; study equity in all my dealings; and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made me free. Blessed be his glorious name—though I have forfeited all my happiness—though I have sold myself a bond-servant to Satan and my lusts—my kinsman-redeemer Christ has paid all my debt, all my ransom! And whom the Son hath made free, they are free indeed! Let me adore his goodness, that, while almost all the world are wilfully in bondage, the true and faithful, according to the Spirit, are made the Lord's freemen.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 1-46. This chapter, which mostly corresponds with De. xxviii., is a summary of the oracles and providences of God relative to the Jewish nation. In the first part of it we have a summary of much of the contents of those promises already met with, and of the whole of those hereafter contained in the Bible, with respect to the Jewish nation. All the prosperity they met with in the days of Joshua, the judges, the kings, the deputies of the Persian, Grecian, or Roman powers, were but the fulfilment of these predictions. In the second part of it we have a summary of all the threatenings which relate to their nation, whether denounced by Moses, the prophets, Christ, or his apostles. All the miseries which that nation endured under the judges, kings, Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, and Romans, for about fifteen hundred years—and all the miseries they have endured in their present dispersion among the Gentiles, which have already continued above eighteen hundred years, without any interruption—is but a literal accomplishment of them. The third part has been, in some measure, verified in some of their former deliverances; especially in the mercies which they received in their return from Babylon, and afterwards until the time of Christ. But we expect a more full accomplishment of it in the latter days, when the Jews shall be converted to the Christian faith, and replaced in their own land.

[Ver. 5. Because God's temporal promises and threatenings were so many, some have thoughtlessly asserted that he urged not the doctrine of a future state; but they who assert this omission 'do err, not knowing the Scriptures;' for when we examine the wondrous catalogue of promises commencing ver. 4, we find at least twelve distinct temporal blessings; but, in addition to these, God promises, ver. 9, his covenant to be established. Now, that covenant was everlasting, not merely with successive generations, but with Abraham individually, personally, Ge. 17. 7, 9, 10. Now, if the covenant between God and Abraham was everlasting, Abraham therein inherited everlasting life; and Israel, in the establishment of that covenant, received the doctrine and the promise of immortality, as well as of the temporal blessings with which it was accompanied, see 1 Ti. 4. 8. Then, turning to the awful threatenings that follow, ver. 16, we find God declaring, ver. 30, 'I will cast your carcasses (dead bodies) upon the carcasses of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you;' that is, you, still living—not them, the carcasses which are dead; a distinct announcement that, 'as it is appointed unto men once to die, so after that the judgment,' He. 9. 27.—Ver. 11. This was typically commenced when the tabernacle service was set up in the wilderness; really commenced when 'the Word became flesh, and dwelt (tabernacled) among us,' Jn. 1. 14; and it will be completed in the 'new heavens and the new earth,' when the great voice shall proclaim, 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men,' Re. 21. 1, 3.—Ver. 31. Sanctuary signifies a holy place;

5 And your ^ethrashing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time:⁵ and ye ^fshall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

6 And ^gI will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will ^hrid⁶ evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall ⁱchase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

8 And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight; and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.⁷

9 For I will ^khave respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and ^lestablish my covenant with you.

10 And ye shall eat ^mold store, and bring forth the old because of the new.⁸

11 And ⁿI will set my tabernacle among you: and my soul shall not abhor you.

12 And ^oI will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

13 I ^pam the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bond-men; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

14 ¶ But ^qif ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments;

15 And if ye ^rshall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break^s my covenant:

16 I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint^t over you⁹ terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain; for your enemies shall eat it.¹

⁵ Thrashing commenced on the 'floors' the moment the grain was reaped, i.e. from the middle of May to the middle of June—early in the south, and low lands, and later in the north and mountains. So abundant would the crops be that the work of thrashing could not be finished till the vintage, which commenced about the end of July; and the labours of the vintage would then occupy the whole time till 'the early rain' in the end of September would prepare the ground for the sowing of the seed.—P.

and though, after the time of David, Israel had but one divinely authorized temple, in Jerusalem, yet from the days of Moses till that time there had been several, which God sanctioned according to their unsettled circumstances, Jos. 18. 1; 1 Sa. 1. 3; 7. 2; 21. 1; 1 Ch. 6. 31; 15. 1; 16. 1. These were, all in their turn, brought into that desolation in which they still remain, a warning to Christian churches to 'repent and do the first works, lest the Lord come unto them quickly, and fight against them with the sword of his mouth,' Re. 2. 5, 16.—Ver. 35. The law of the Sabbath amongst the Jews was propounded upon the strongest of all reasons—the example and hallowing of God; was delivered with the utmost particularity of detail; was accompanied with the largest promises, Is. 56. 2; 58. 13, 14; was enforced by the heaviest penalties, Ne. 13. 18; Eze. 20. 13, 21, 33; and yet, as with their other laws, it was soon made void, Ne. 13. 15, 21; Eze. 20. 12, 13; 22. 8; Am. 8. 5. Now for this criminal violation of the divine ordinance, God sent the 'king of the Chaldees' 'to fulfil the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths,' 2 Ch. 36. 21. Now Christian nations, upon sound warrant of Scripture, have adopted the weekly memorial of the resurrection of Christ to be their Sabbath; and since the new covenant is ordered, not only upon better promises, Ilc. 8. 6, but is fenced with heavier penalties, Ilc. 2. 2, 3; 10. 24-31, it deeply interests both rulers and people to contemplate the sabbatical judgments of Israel; and 'if' (on the very account of sabbath violation) 'God spared not the natural branches, let them take heed lest he also spare not them,' Ro. 11. 21. C.—The present state of Palestine is a remarkable and melancholy commentary on this whole prophetic curse:—The 'high places' of Shiloh, Bethel, and Dan are utterly destroyed; the great cities of Samaria, Capernaum, Jericho, Caesarea, and a host of others, are waste, without inhabitant; the richest and best portions of the land—Philistia, Sharon, Esdraelon, the valley of the Jordan, Bashan, &c.—are entirely desolate; the remnant of the Israelites themselves are homeless wanderers in the lands of their enemies, while their enemies, who now occupy that country which God gave to Abraham, are astonished at its desolation. P.—Ver. 38. A threatening wonderfully verified in the loss of the ten tribes, 2 Ki. 17. 6, who have been sought for in vain both by Jews and Christians: the proofs in favour of the Affghans and American Indians being very questionable, and, at best, accompanied with no approach to certainty: see Simon's Hope of Israel; Wolff's Journal, 1831-34; Rose's Scripture Researches; Cotton's Tour to the American Lakes, &c.—Ver. 41. As circumcision was the sign and seal of God's covenant with Abraham, Ge. 17. 11; Ro. 4. 11, an uncircumcised heart was on them that had not received the grace signified, 'the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh,' 1 Col. 2. 11.—Ver. 45. That the threatenings against the Jews have been fulfilled to the uttermost, is a visible and undeniable fact; that the promises will likewise be fulfilled, God has pledged his covenant word; that Christians should feel more deeply, pray more fervently, and sacrifice more liberally than hitherto for the conversion of Israel to Jesus the Messiah, is acknowledged. From the sign of awakened and increasing interest in their behalf, there is reason to 'thank God and take courage.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How strict is the connection between holiness and happiness! Manifold are the blessings of those who, in a gospel manner, obey God's laws, and great is the favour of God towards them, and intimate his presence with them. His celestial influences produce spiritual gifts and holy dispositions, and the peace of God keeps their hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Their enemies, sin, Satan, the world, and death, are vanquished in him, and the covenant of God stands fast with them for ever and ever. But how dreadful the punishment of such as are obstinate in wickedness! While they wickedly proceed from evil to worse, the judgments of God justly increase in their number and degree; and such as remain unhumiliated under afflictions from God, and convictions from their own conscience, have nothing to expect but wrath to the uttermost. Such as dare to contend with their Maker will find the struggle most in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

29 And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.⁵

30 And I will ^mdestroy your high places, and ⁿcut down your images, and ^ocast your carcasses upon the carcasses of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you.

31 And I will ^pmake your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will ^qnot smell the savour of your sweet odours.

32 And I will ^rbring the land into desolation; and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

33 And I will ^sscatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

34 Then ^tshall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye ^ube in your enemies' land; ^veven then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did ^wnot rest in your sabbaths when ye dwelt upon it.

36 And upon them that are left ^xalive of you I will send a ^yfaintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

37 And they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

38 And ye shall ^zperish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

39 And they that are left of you shall ^apine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.⁶

40 ¶ If they shall ^bconfess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me;

41 And ^cthat I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then ^dtheir uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity:

42 Then will I ^eremember my covenant with 6 A modern historian, if summing up the history and sufferings of the Jews during the past eighteen centuries, could scarcely use language more accurate and graphic than that contained in these verses. The persecutions they endured in Spain, Italy, France, Russia, and Britain, have wonderfully realized the prophetic statement: 'Ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.' Their utter helplessness, their shrinking timidity, their abandonment of every attempt or even thought of defence, have proved the literal truth of the words: 'The sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; they shall fall when none pursueth; ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.'—P.

They are still preserved a distinct people, evidently for that end.—L.

9 It ought to be observed that the prophetic curses are temporal and physical, and that they have been literally fulfilled. The land has been wasted; the cities have been desolated; the people have been dispersed; their enemies have persecuted them in all lands. By all sound canons of interpretation, therefore, the promises contained in the same prophecy, and uttered in language of the same character and structure, must be understood in a literal and physical sense.—P.

Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I ^dwill remember the land.

43 The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity; because, even because they ^edespised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, ^fI will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant⁷ with them: for I am the LORD their God.

46 These^h are the statutes, and judgments, and laws, which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel in mount Sinai, by the hand of Moses.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 He that maketh a singular vow must be the Lord's. 3 The estimation of the person. 9 Of a beast given by vow. 14 Of a house. 16 Of a field, and the redemption thereof. 28 No devoted thing may be redeemed. 30 The tithe is holy, and may not be changed.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When a ⁱman shall make a singular vow, the persons shall be for the LORD by thy estimation.¹

3 ¶ And thy estimation shall be of the male, from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be ^jfifty shekels of silver, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

4 And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be ^kthirty shekels.

5 And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels,² and for the female ten shekels.

6 And if it be from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male ^lfive shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver.³

7 And if it be from sixty years old and above, if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels,⁴ and for the female ten shekels.⁵

8 But if he be ^mpoorer than thy estimation,

How certain the ruin of impenitent sinners! Aggravated is their guilt whom mercies cannot engage or corrections deter: and God will be just to give up those to despair, and death, in sin, who give up themselves to work wickedness with greediness. But behold how all who return to God, even though late, are graciously received by him! It is his grace, concurring with his afflictive providences, that softens the stupid and hardened heart, and humbles the sinner; that renders him patient under his troubles, but earnestly anxious to escape from his sins; renders him more solicitous to have the end of afflictions answered than to have the burden of them removed; and then marvellously God remembers mercy in the midst of judgments; and opens to the believing mind a firm foundation of hopes, and gracious source of blessings, in Jesus and his promise of grace! Amidst such fullness of merit, and freedom of promise, none need despair, relying thereon. Blessing God for my pious ancestors, and the benefits I enjoy through them, following in their steps, let me deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.

SCENE IN GIZEH MUSEUM—SHOWING A STATUE OF RAMESES II., ONE OF THE OPPRESSORS OF THE ISRAELITES. [Leviticus, xxvii.]—In room 25 of the Gizeh Museum there is among many magnificent statues of different Egyptian celebrities a black granite head of a colossal statue of Ramses II. taken from Luxor. Ramses II. is known as one of the oppressors of the Israelites. This picture was taken April 17th, 1894. The man you see standing to the right of the statue is the guide, E. Brugsch Bey, appointed to conduct our party through the Museum. He was very intelligent and very attentive. This head of Ramses II. was chiseled out of granite 1333 years before Christ was in Egypt with Joseph and His mother. We place this picture here as we have used other pictures to illustrate other chapters in this book because it furnishes a scene from the land of Moses, and by so much as we know the country and the civilization in which he grew up will we be the better able to form a conception of the character of the leader of God's people.

then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

9 ¶ And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy.⁶

10 He⁹ shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

11 And if it be any unclean beast,⁷ of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest:

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: as thou valuest it, who art the priest,⁸ so shall it be.

13 But if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

14 ¶ And when a man shall sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

15 And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

16 ¶ And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD *some part*⁹ of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: an homer¹ of barley-seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.²

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubilee, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

18 But if he sanctify his field after the jubilee, then the priest shall reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubilee, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

19 And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more.³

⁹ Though the words some part are supplemental, they are generally admitted to be necessary, as it was not lawful for a man to alienate in this manner his whole patrimony. Good-will to the house of God he was allowed to express, but he was not to impoverish his family.—I.

⁸ This conditional penalty was for the purpose of preventing fraud in the performance of religious duties, and the fulfilment of vows. Properly speaking it was the produce and not the soil which was dedicated by vow to God. The land remained with the proprietor, who cultivated it, and paid to the sanctuary the valuation price. The owner might neglect to cultivate, and the land would thus be worthless; or he might sell to another till the year of jubilee—the buyer paying a stipulated sum to the sanctuary, and appropriating the surplus. In either case the land itself would be forfeited, and would pass over into the possession of the priests at the jubilee. The object of the measure was to compel the owner to redeem the property at once, so that the sanctuary might receive the full amount of the vow.—P.

The value of the shekel was fixed before, Ex. 30. 13; and whereas there had been some alterations, it is again fixed in the laws of Eze-kiel's visionary temple, Eze. 45. 12, to denote that the gospel should reduce things to their ancient value.—I.

Such things could not be thus sanctified, being already dedicated to God, Ex. 13. 2. C.—That is to say, 'consecrate by a singular vow,' because the firstling was the Lord's already; it would have been a solemn mockery to have pretended so to sanctify it, it being already appointed to be sacrificed, if clean; if unclean, the owner might redeem it with its value in money, adding to it a fifth part.—I.

⁷ The Jews interpret this phrase of a rod, which they say was tinged with ochre, which the door-keeper of the fold held up, and with which he marked every tenth beast indiscriminately as it passed out. It may well be understood of the ordinary shepherd's crook, still in use in pastoral countries; this sense is countenanced by Mi. 7. 14.—C.

21 But the field, when it goeth out in the jubilee, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field devoted; the possession thereof shall be the priest's.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of his possession, 23 Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubilee: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

24 In the year of the jubilee the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

28 ¶ Notwithstanding no devoted thing that a man shall devote unto the LORD, of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD.

29 None⁷ devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.

30 ¶ And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD.

31 And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof.

practical Christian rule, there could be no want of witnesses to the heathen, nor of support to them and their families.—Note, We are all devoted in baptism to Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; many at the Lord's table; while many are doubly saved—first, by the 'Lamb without spot,' 1 Pe. 1. 19: secondly, by the 'goodness and mercy that, through his grace, have followed them all the days of their lives,' Ps. 23. 6. Now, as the Jew devoted was brought to the priest to be estimated, let us as 'partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the High-priest of our profession, Christ Jesus,' He. 3. 1; let us come to be estimated, though in utmost poverty, Re. 3. 17, 18; he will not demand beyond our ability, while he supplies the very gifts we are appointed to employ. C.]

Ver. 10. [To promise, to resolve, and to act, not by fixed principles, but by sudden impulses, is dangerous, as it often brings strong temptation to instability and change—two things against which God's children are solemnly guarded, both by example, Ge. 49. 4, and precept, 1 Co. 15. 48; 2 Pe. 3. 17; and against which this ordinance fixes an impassable barrier. C.]

Ver. 29. [It is difficult to imagine how any one, from these words, could have ignorantly or wickedly inferred that the Scripture authorized human sacrifice, or invested any parent with the power of devoting his children to death: surely the merciful law that would not empower a master to injure a servant's tooth ('And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake,' Ex. 21. 27), would not enable a parent to take away his child's life. Let it be observed then, in explanation, that in ver. 28 the law speaks of man or beast devoted to the Lord, but in ver. 29 it speaks of those who are devoted of men, or from among men, whether devoted by God himself, as were the wicked nations for the crimes of child-murder, idolatry, and total dissolution of morals, Ex. 22. 20; De. 7. 1, 2; 20. 10, 17; 25. 19; 1 Sa. 15. 3; or devoted by the Israelites for similar crimes and implacable enmity, Nu. 21. 23. For these, as for other murderers, the law of God provides no pardon—a terrible emblem of that time and state when 'there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation,' He. 10. 27. Thoughtless sinner, think! self-dependent sinner, trusting to to-morrow's repentance, read the awful records, Mat. 25. 10; Lu. 13. 25, and beware lest, at the time of thy purposed return, 'the master may have risen,' and 'the door be shut!'—Note, Some interpret 'be put to death,' not of the actual infliction of that sentence, but of the continuance of service till death; but the words do not seem capable of such translation. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—While in these devoted things I, with wonder, behold Jesus voluntarily devoted, irredeemably devoted to his Father's service in our stead, and saving us by his precious blood, let me be always cheerful and liberal in his work; but let me never be hasty in my vows, lest I involve myself in difficulties, and repent of my rashness. Never let me

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED NUMBERS.

This book is so called because it so largely represents the repeated numbering of the Hebrew warriors, Levites, spies, punished transgressors; their oblations, booty, and their journeys, &c., in the wilderness. It contains (1) The principal articles of their history for thirty-nine years; particularly of the numbers, stations, and marching-order of their tribes, i.—iv. ix. x.; the oblations of their princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, vii.; the consecration of the Levites, viii.; observation of the second passover, ix.; departure from Sinai, x.; destruction of the murmurers by a fiery pestilence, and the flesh for which they had lusted—appointment of seventy elders to assist Moses, xi.; Miriam's leprosy and cure, xii.; the search of Canaan by spies, and their punishment for a contempt of that promised land, xiii. xiv.; the punishment of Korah and his companions, and of the people who murmured at it, xvi.; the budding of Aaron's rod, xvii.; the misbehaviour of Moses and Aaron when the people murmured at Kadesh—refusal of a passage by the Edomites—and the death of Miriam and Aaron, xx.; the victory over Arad—plague of fiery serpents, and cure of their bites—conquest and division of the kingdoms of Sihon and Og, xxi. xxxii.; the repeated attempts of Balak and Balaam to curse the Israelites, and God's defeating of them, xxii.—xxiv.; the enticement of the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry by Midianitish women, and the revenge thereof in the death of twenty-four thousand Israelites, and the almost utter destruction of the Midianites, xxv. xxxi.; a third numeration of the Israelites, xxvi.; a rehearsal of their journeys, xxxiii.; a delineation of their territory in Canaan, and an appointment of twelve princes to divide it, xxxiv. (2) With these narratives is intermingled a variety of laws concerning the ejection of unclean persons from the camp—suspicion of wives for adultery, v.; Nazariteship—priests' blessing the people, vi.; lighting of sacred lamps, viii.; observance of the passover in the second month, ix.; making and blowing of silver trumpets, x.; and concerning meat-offerings, drink-offerings, heave-offerings, sin-offerings—stoning for breach of the Sabbath—fringes on the borders of their garments, xv.; sacred portion of the priests and Levites, xviii.; purification by the ashes of the red heifer, xix.; inheritance and marriage of heiresses, xxvii. xxxvi.; oblations at sacred festivals, xxviii. xxix.; vows, xxx.; manslaughter and cities of refuge, xxxv.

[The book of Numbers has been pronounced the most perplexing in sacred history, and what has perplexed the believing inquirer has afforded ample field for infidel objection: but as to the very being, providence, and attributes of God, there have been, and still are, many alleged objections; we are not to be surprised if similar assaults be made upon any part of his word, nor are we to be discouraged by the perplexities of believing inquirers: the real difficulties of Scripture, for such there are, exhibit the analogy between God's word and works, while they afford the happiest employment to the intellect, inculcate humility, exercise patience, and call to prayer, Ja. 1. 5; Lu. 11. 13; Jn. 14. 26. The chief difficulty of this book arises from the population returns. Jacob's family at their entrance into Egypt amounted but to seventy-five; at the exodus, in little more than two hundred years after, the men are estimated about 600,000, Ex. 12. 37; 30. 26; and at the military census afterwards made, they amount to 603,550, ch. 1. 46. Now, as these numbers would, on the most moderate computation, give a total for the Jewish caravan, independent of the 'mixed multitude,' Ex. 12. 38, that accompanied them, of about 2,400,000; the question arises, How can we credit this increase? To a humble inquiring believer it will be something to be reminded of God's peculiar promise to Abraham, Ge. 15. 5, and here he might rest; while the sceptic and the infidel, if they really sought for truth, not for cavilling, might find a ready answer in ordinary political statistics. Do they not know, that in the average of circumstances, population doubles at least in twenty-five years? That in favourable rural districts it doubles in fifteen years? that Euler calculates its doubling under thirteen, and that Sir W. Petty fixes it at ten years? Now allowing the Mosaic narrative the advantage of these calculations—and candour cannot deny it the most favourable—the imaginary impossibility of the increase from 75 to 2,400,000 totally vanishes; and while the promise to Abraham is seen fulfilled in the numbers of his posterity, the result requires not for its solution a continuous miracle, but merely that providential blessing of fruitfulness which God invariably bestows on peaceful, temperate, and industrious habits. But while the soundness of this solution cannot, upon any historical ground, be statistically gainsaid, all possibility of cavil is removed by considering that the national name and privileges of Israelites were not confined to the lineal descendants of Abraham. This will be evident from the following considerations. (1) Abraham, when childless, expects the son of a servant 'born in his house' to be his heir, Ge. 15. 3. (2) His house-born servants at that period amounted to 318 adult males, Ge. 14. 14. (3) When God renewed his promise, Ge. 17. 13, 27, all his then existing house-born servants, as well as his future purchases, were 'grafted in,' Ro. 11. 17, were naturalized, so to speak, by the sign of the everlasting covenant. (4) Isaac, Abraham's son, so far from declining in family prosperity, 'waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great;' and especially had 'great store of servants,' Ge. 26. 13, 14. (5) Jacob, at his return, Ge. 35. 27, had, besides his own children, 'men-servants,' Ge. 32. 5, perfectly able to protect themselves and their cattle, Ge. 33. 15. What accession of property Jacob obtained by the death of his father we are not told; but an incidental statement proves it must have been very considerable. For soon after, Esau removed 'from the face of his brother, for their riches were more than that they might dwell together, and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle,' Ge. 36. 6, 7. (6) Jacob came down to Egypt, not merely with his seventy-five personal descendants, but 'with all that he had,' Ge. 46. 1; see also 47. 1–12. (7) At the new institution of the passover, lest a new dispensation to the seed of Abraham should be construed into the abrogation of the ancient privileges of house-born servants or strangers, the naturalization clause, for so in modern phrase it is named, was explicitly renewed; and 'every man's servant' bought for money, and every conforming 'stranger' was invested with the same rights as 'one born in the land,' Ex. 12. 44, 48. (8) The reality and extent of this privilege of naturalization is still farther illustrated by the special exclusion of the Ammonites and Moabites 'for ever,' De. 23. 3; and still farther by the probationary period prescribed to an Edomite and Egyptian, who might 'enter into the congregation of the Lord in their third generation,' De. 23. 8. And thus, it is evident, the law was understood in the time of Nehemiah, ch. 13. 1–3, for he separated the 'mixed multitude' of Ammonites and Moabites, while the record of the genealogy of 'Solomon's servants,' originally Canaanites, 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21, is faithfully preserved, Ne. 7. 57–61, and they are included in 'the congregation,' ver. 66, and join in the national covenant for reformation, according to the Scriptures, ch. 10. 28.

But if we may thus legally commence our calculations with more than the seventy-five descendants of Jacob, why are they particularized? The answer is easy—to lay a distinct groundwork for the development of providence and the fulfilment of prophecy, and specially to furnish the necessary preparation and evidence for the manifestation of Christ. And when any do farther sceptically ask, 'How could Egypt contain and support so many inhabitants?' the reply is, Measure its extent and observe its unparalleled fertility. 'How could the Egyptians govern so many discontented subjects?' the reply is, Calculate in ancient or modern slave states the small proportion of masters to slaves. 'How could Pharaoh expect to subdue such a numerous host?' the answer is, Calculate how many regular troops would fearlessly assail an unarmed multitude. 'What line of march did they occupy?' the reply is, Who would think of marshalling them in a single line? Not as that by divine instruction ordered the encampments in the wilderness, see ch. ii. But of answering such groundless cavils 'there is no end.' Better for the believer to see in Israel a family carried down with a famishing father in search of food, to a land where they are sustained by the filial love of a son, and the forgiving generosity of a brother; where they become as the sand in number, and yet are enslaved by a cruel tyrant, and from whom they are delivered by the destruction of all their enemies and the blood of a sacrifice—where, in a word, 'Christ is all in all,' exhibited wherever there is salvation, temporal, spiritual, or eternal. C.]

CHAPTER I.

1 God commandeth Moses to number the people. 5 The princes of the tribes. 17 The number of every tribe. 47 The Levites are exempted for the service of the Lord.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in ^athe wilderness of Sinai, ^bin the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first ¹day of the second ^cmonth, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Take ^dye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, ²with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are ^eable to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be ^fa man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: ^gOf the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; ^hNahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 These were the ⁱrenowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel.³

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took ^jthese men which are expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month; and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.⁴

5 The Mosaic census has been called in question, because its several items terminate in ciphers; and well-meaning but inconsiderate expositors have had recourse to various conjectures, founded on admitted or discovered additions of ciphers to historical dates and numbers in Grecian and Hindoo history. But such conjectures and parallels are utterly to be repudiated. The solution of the difficulty, if such it seem, lies in the record itself. Moses in the first census expressly declares, not that the men were 600,000, but that they were 'about' 600,000. Ex. 12. 37. Neither in the present census is the exact amount of men 'fit' to go forth to war ever given, but 'those that were numbered of them,' and as the Jewish armies were uniformly officered and mustered by 1000, 100, 50, and 10, the quota of each tribe must necessarily terminate in a cipher. Nu. 31. 15. De. 1. 15.—Note. As the census for march and for battle is in equable numbers and ranks, but enumerates, for property, each individual, Ezr. ii. Ne. vii., so in our sojourning and warfare, the church moves in order and communion, and each is concerned for the welfare of his companion, Ro. 14. 7; but in entering into judgment, 'every man of us shall give account of himself to God,' Ro. 14. 12, and claim the heavenly inheritance only by his personal relation to Christ, 2 Co. 5. 17.—C.

CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—In this numbered people I discern the true Israel of God, numerous as the sand by the sea-shore; all numbered of Jesus, and written in his book of life; all under his government and laws, declared by his prophets and apostles; all ranked in goodly order in their respective generations, for the wars of the Lord; and all honourably distinguished from the world that lieth in wickedness, and from the mixed multitude of hypocrites. Here likewise I may observe, that ministers and magistrates ought to take heed to every one of the flock over whom the Lord hath made them overseers; that the TOMB OF SULTAN BARKUK — ONE OF THE MODERN PHARAOHS OF EGYPT.

 [NUMBERS, i.]—We continue through this book of Numbers to illustrate the life of Moses by pictures taken from the land in which he grew up. The Tomb of Sultan Barkuk is really a mosque or place of Mohammedan worship. There stands above it two superb domes and two minarets. Under the dome at the north are the tombs of the male, and under the dome at the south are the tombs of the female members of the family. Barkuk belonged to the family of the Circassian Mameluke Sultans who reigned in Egypt from A. D. 1382 to 1517. The limestone pulpit in this mosque and the two minarets are beautiful specimens of stone work. Barkuk was a Circassian slave who raised himself to the throne by setting aside Haggi, a boy of six years and great grandson of Mohammed-en-Nasir. The reign of Barkuk was not peaceful. His intrigues and treachery so exasperated the Emirs that they conspired against him and finally dethroned him in 1389, but he was soon restored and reigned until 1399.

of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

31 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

32 ¶ Of the children of Joseph, namely, of the 'children of Ephraim,' by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

33 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

34 ¶ Of the 'children of Manasseh, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

35 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Manasseh, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

36 ¶ Of the 'children of Benjamin,' by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

37 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Benjamin, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

38 ¶ Of the 'children of Dan, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

¶ ch. 2. 18, 19; 26. 35-37, with Ge. 48. 19, 20; 46. 20. This tribe was more numerous and honoured than that of Manasseh.

7 Jacob, on his death-bed, had foretold the superiority of Ephraim the younger to Manasseh the elder. He guided his hands wittingly, putting his right hand upon Ephraim's head; and when Joseph would have interfered, desiring to appropriate the greater blessing to the elder, his father refused, saying, 'He also shall become a great people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.' Ge. 48. 19. We see the fulfilment of the ancient prediction now very distinctly begun. Ephraim is here put before Manasseh, and the tribe of the former outnumbered that of the latter by several thousands. The superiority, as we shall afterwards see, is continued at a future period. Moses, in the blessing wherewith he blessed the children of Israel before his death, says, 'They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh, De. 33. 17. 'Known unto the Lord are all his works, even from the beginning of all that he hath spoken: one jot or one tittle cannot fall to the ground.'—I.

8 At the time when the patriarchs went down to Egypt with their father Benjamin, it would seem, had more children than any of his brethren; he had ten sons, Ge. 46. 21. Yet, when this census was taken, his tribe was less numerous than any of the rest, except that of Manasseh. On the other hand, Dan had but one son when they went down, and now his tribe exceeds all others but that of Gad. It was thus that the Lord, who giveth no account of his doings, although all events, even the most minute, are according to infinite wisdom, fulfilled his promise to Abraham of a seed more in number than the stars of heaven.—I.

9 The tribe of Judah was much larger than any of the others. Dan stood second, but had 12,000 fewer than Judah. Ephraim and Manasseh together were within 2000 of being equal to Judah. Manasseh was the smallest of the twelve, and Benjamin came next to it. It will be seen by a comparison with the census recorded in ch. xxvi., which was taken at the close of the wilderness journey, that the relative strength of the tribes changed very much during the forty years' wandering.—P.

1 Moses does not inform us what the standard or ensign was. The Jewish rabbis, however, who may sometimes be safely followed, inform us that the ensign of Judah was a lion, of Ephraim an ox, of Reuben a man, and of Dan an eagle. This description is somewhat countenanced by the vision of the cherubim, Eze. 1. 10, and still further by the vision of the throne of God, Re. 4. 7. Still, as the Scriptures are silent, we may not positively affirm, nor draw any doctrine from these alleged figures; but with certainty we may consider the standard and ensign as a prophetic emblem of 'that day when there shall be a root of Jesse, who shall stand for an ensign of the people,' Is. 11. 10, and of that gracious promise to his church still in the wilderness, that, 'when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him,' Is. 59. 19. C. The 'standard' was the banner of each of the four great divisions of the Israelites mentioned below, while 'the ensign' was the smaller flag borne at the head of each subdivision of a tribe.—P.

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.⁹

44 ¶ These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men: each one was for the house of his fathers.

45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered were six hundred thousand, and three thousand, and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But the 'Levites, after the tribe of their fathers, were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel;

50 But thou shalt appoint the Levites ^dover the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

51 And ^ewhen the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down; and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and ^fthe stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

53 But the Levites shall ^hpitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did ⁱaccording to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

more honour any one hath conferred upon him, the more active he ought to be in well-doing, according to his station; and to do without delay whatever the Lord requires of him. When I see the numbers of the respective tribes so little proportioned to their families at their entrance into Egypt, about two hundred and fifteen years before, I cannot but think how little even outward things go by common probabilities, and how unstable all created comforts are. When I read the sum total, I see how truly and marvellously God, in a few years, fulfilled his promises in multiplying the patriarch's posterity, notwithstanding all that the Egyptians could do to diminish them. Who likewise but must admire the liberal kindness of God, in forty years' miraculous maintenance of such multitudes of sinners; while he discerns the destructive nature of sin, which, in forty years, buried them all but two in the earth, and all in the wilderness! When I see the Levites distinguished from the rest, let me think how honourably God rewarded their honest zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf; and that ministers ought to be more holy than ordinary saints, to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the sins of others; and that, though they are not to entangle themselves in worldly business, or in intimacy with carnal men, yet they are not to be idle, but spiritual soldiers of Christ, set for the defence of his church and gospel.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 3. From Ge. 17. 5, in the instance of Abram changed to Abraham, we learn the doctrinal and prophetic intent of Scripture names. This is farther illustrated, Ge. 32. 28, in the case of Jacob changed to Israel. It is applied in the name of Jesus, given to our Lord, Mat. 1. 21, 23, and is applied in the case of Melchisedec, He. 7. 1, 2, which Paul interprets as descriptive of his office. It is therefore right

3 The Israelites, it appears, encamped in four great divisions, with the tabernacle in the centre. The form of the camp was quadrangular, containing, according to the most careful calculations, something more than 12 square miles. Under each of the four divisions three tribes were placed under one general standard. Between these four great camps and the tabernacle were pitched four smaller camps of the priests and Levites, who were in immediate attendance upon it; the camp of Moses and of Aaron and his sons being on the east side of the tabernacle, where the entrance to it was. Judah was placed on the east, and under him he had Issachar and Zebulun. On the south was Reuben, and under him Simeon and Gad. On the west was Ephraim, and under him Manasseh and Benjamin. On the north was Dan, and under him Asher and Naphtali. Every tribe had its particular standard, probably with the name of the tribe embroidered in large letters. See Josephus' Ant. i. xviii. c. 7.—I.

7 The prescribed order of encampment was to regulate the order of march. Judah and the other two tribes attached to his banner marching first, Reuben and those attached to his banner marching next, and so forth, as is afterwards specified.—I.

8 ch. 1. 20-25; 10. 18-20; 26. 5-7.

9 There is nothing to be observed respecting this camp, but that the tribe of Reuben had the honour to pitch in the midst of it; and the tribes of Simeon and Gad lay on either side of him under his standard or banner, just as Issachar and Zebulun did on either side of Judah. There was, says Patrick, 'an evident congruity in this, Simeon being his next brother, and Gad the eldest son of Zilpah, the handmaid of their mother Leah, Ge. 30.10, 11.—I.

7 After the fore-named camps, the tabernacle was to follow, between those two that went before, and the camp of Ephraim and the camp of Dan that came after. They did not therefore march as they lay pitched; for then there was a camp on each side of the tabernacle: whereas when they marched there was none on the sides, but two camps went before it, and two followed it. It is said, 'as they encamp so shall they set forward,' which may refer either to the Levites, the sons of Kohath, or to the two camps forenamed, enjoining that they should march in the same order in which they lay encamped, Judah, e.g. in the midst of Issachar and Zebulun, they being either before and behind, or on either side of him.—I.

13 ch. 1. 42, 43; 10. 27; 26. 48-50. These three tribes were the descendants of Jacob's concubines, and so less honourable.

14 The order of encamping and marching as here prescribed, is briefly as follows:—Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun encamped on the east of the tabernacle; Reuben, Simeon, and Gad on the south; Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin on the west; and Dan, Asher, and Naphtali on the north. The tabernacle was placed in the centre of a hollow square; but between it and the general encampment were four divisions of the tribe of Levi: the sons of Aaron on the east, before the door; the Gershonites on the west; the Kohathites on the south; and the Merarites on the north. When the camp was broken up the order of march was as follows:—The division of Judah led the van; Reuben with his division followed. Then came the tabernacle surrounded by the Levites. Next followed the division of Ephraim, and the division of Dan formed the re-re-guard.—P.

15 ch. 1. 46; 26. 51. Ex. 12. 37; 38. 26. If to this number we add the Levites, and all the women and children below twenty years of age, it will make about three millions of Israelites, besides the mixed multitude.

17 ¶ Thenⁱ the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward, with the camp of the Levites⁷ in the midst of the camp: as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place, by their standards.

18 ¶ On^k the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim, according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud.

19 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred.

20 And^l by him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the captain of the children of Manasseh shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

22 Then^m the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideoni.

23 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

24 All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand, and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies: and they shall go forward in the third rank.

25 ¶ Theⁿ standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side, by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

27 And^o those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ocran.

REFLECTIONS.—What a God of order is our God in all the churches! With unreserved submission ought we to refer to him the choice of our inheritance for us, and the fixing of the bounds of our habitation. Our life on earth is a movable as well of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers: all those that were numbered of the camps, throughout their hosts, were six hundred thousand, and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

33 But the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

34 And the children of Israel did *accord-*ing to all that the LORD commanded Moses: so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

CHAPTER III.

1 The sons of Aaron. 5 The Levites are given to the priests for the service of the tabernacle, 11 instead of the first-born. 14 The Levites are numbered by their families. 21 The families, number, and charge of the Gershonites, 27 of the Kohathites, 33 of the Merarites. 38 The place and charge of Moses and Aaron. 40 The first-born are freed by the Levites. 44 The overplus are redeemed.

THESE also are the generations of Aaron¹ and Moses, in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

2 And these are ^bthe names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the first-born, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, the ^cpriests which were anointed, whom he consecrated² to minister in the priest's office.

4 And^a Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office, in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Bring^e the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation,³ before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep ^fall the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 And^g thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron, and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they ^hshall wait on their priest's office: and ⁱthe stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

a Historical account of their tribe, Ge. 2, 4; 5, 1; 10, 1. Mat. 1, 1.

1 Aaron is placed before Moses, not on account of the priestly dignity, but simply because he was three years older than Moses, and so was entitled to the place of first-born, which he had neither sold nor forfeited. See Ge. 7, 7.—Note. When the characters of Moses and Aaron are contrasted, the natural superiority of Moses is unquestionable. Yet Moses assigns to Aaron and his family for ever, superiority of rank and office; an undeniable evidence that he acted by God's command. Had he been a mere pretender to a divine commission, he would have sought the aggrandizement of himself and his family—for never has there been an unambitious and disinterested impostor: his not yielding but adjudging the superiority to his brother and his brother's family goes, as far as mere character can go, to prove, not only the absence of selfishness, but the presence of that humility which never was produced by any power but that of the Spirit of God, 1s. 57: 15. 7 From this and the following chapter we learn the very severe labour to which the Levites were subjected while the journeyings of the Israelites lasted. There was not less than 14 tons 266 lbs. of metal employed in the tabernacle, Ex. 38, 24, besides an immense weight of skins, hangings, cords, boards, posts, &c. Of course it must have been no easy matter to transport it from place to place. The Gershonites, who were in number 7500, had to carry the tent coverings, veil, hangings of the court, cords, &c., ver. 25, 26. The Kohathites, in number 8600, carried the ark, table, candlesticks, altars, and instruments of the sanctuary, ver. 31. The Merarites, in number 6200, bore the boards, bars, sockets, and all matters connected with these belonging to the tabernacle, with the pillars of the court, their sockets, pins, and cords, ver. 36, 37.—P.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 12 And I, behold, I have ^ktaken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the first-born that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

13 Because ^lall the first-born are mine: for on the day that I ^msmote all the first-born in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast; ⁿmine they shall be: I am the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying,

15 Number the children of Levi, after the house of their fathers, by their families: every male ^ofrom a month old and upward shalt thou number them.⁵

16 And Moses numbered them, according to the word⁶ of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 And^o these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And^p these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; Libni and Shimei.

19 And^q the sons of Kohath by their families; Amram and Izhar, Hebron and Uzziel.

20 And^r the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli and Mushi: these are the families of the Levites, according to the house of their fathers.

21 ¶ Of^s Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them, were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall ^tpitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

25 And ^uthe charge⁷ of the sons of Gershon, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall be the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, 26 And the hangings of the court, and the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and the cords of it, for all the service thereof.

as warlike condition. Here we have no continuing city; let us seek for one to come, which hath foundations, and whose builder and maker is God. But surely it is a high honour to have the presence and ordinances of God amongst us here below. Happy are all his ransomed tribes; they have equal access to him; they all are so marshalled in the church as best answers their abilities; and have God's tabernacle and ordinances placed among them. And it is pleasant and amiable when magistrates, and every one beside in their stations, become protectors and encouragers of the church; and when everything, both in church and state, is regulated exactly according to the command of God.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 2. In a former note (see ch. 2, 3) we have seen the Scripture authority for interpretation of names. In the names of the tribes, there was a national lesson, addressed to rulers; in that of the Levites, an ecclesiastical lesson, addressed to pastors and teachers. Aaron, teacher, mountain of strength. —Note, When Christ, in risen humanity, declared 'All power is given to me,' he immediately added, 'go ye therefore, teach all nations,' Mat. xxviii. The mountain strength of the church lies in faithful teaching.—Nadab, prince, free gift. Abihu, he is my father. The first a title of dignity in the state, the second of productiveness and superiority in the family, yet, for want of attention to paternal teaching, both are cast down from their office and die childless. A warning to the teachers of others to 'ask for the old paths'—the old paths, not of men inventing novelties, but of the Spirit speaking in the Scriptures. The teachers, and fathers, FLOCK OF GOATS, BEDRASHEN, NEAR MEMPHIS—WHERE MOSES WAS BROUGHT UP. [NUMBERS, iii:1.]—"These also are the generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the Lord spake with Moses in Mount Sinai." This picture is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses, for it illustrates a place near Memphis where Moses was brought up. Bedrashen covers a part of the site of Memphis. On the ground lying around this village, a part of which we see the goats now browsing, and a part farther on where we see the palm trees standing, once stood the proud city of Memphis. Memphis was one of the oldest cities of history, and was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. The tract of country in the midst of which Memphis stood has been praised by ancient writers for its fertility. Diodorus speaks of its green meadows intersected with canals and their pavements of lotus flowers. Pliny says there were trees there of such girth that three men could not span them with extended arms.

27 ¶ And² of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch⁹ on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And ²their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And ²Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

33 ¶ Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihail: these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle ⁹northward.

36 And ²under the custody and charge⁷ of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, 37 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords.

38 ¶ But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, ²even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, ²keeping the charge of the sanctuary for the charge of the children of Israel; and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

39 All⁷ that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males, from a month old and upward, ⁹were twenty and two thousand.⁸

8 This is one of the chief 'perplexities' of the book of Numbers, inasmuch as the sum total does not agree with the items. The Gershonites were numbered 7500, the Kohathites 8600, the Merarites 6200, total 22,300. To account for this discrepancy, Houbigant supposes an error to have crept into the text of ver. 28, which Kennicot transfers to ver. 22. Either supposition would rectify the accounts, but such summary and unsupported suppositions of error are to be examined with great jealousy, and never to be received without high MS. authority: this is here totally wanting. Let us therefore seek the solution of the perplexity in the law. (1) In this narrative, ver. 6, the tribe of Levi was to be brought near, a phrase in the original, admitted to signify sacrificial offering. See ch. 8. 6-22. (2) In ver. 14, 16 Moses alone enumerates the tribe, and gives the absolute sum total. (3) In ver. 39 we have a new account of all that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the Lord. Now Aaron is not omitted in the one case, nor conjoined in the other, without good cause. (4) We inquire in the law what this cause may be, and whence arose this arithmetical imperfection? Not, we apprehend, from any imaginary error either in the detail or summing up, but from legal impurities disqualifying from being offered to God. These might arise, in children, from touching their mother during the forty days of her separation, Le. 12. 2, 4; comp. with 15, 19, 26, 27; in adults from any similar legal im-purify, ch. 22. 2. (5) It is now almost superfluous to add, that as every offering must be 'without blemish,' this typical requirement applied to the Levites would produce the typical imperfection of their numbers when examined by Aaron before being 'brought near,' or offered to the Lord for redemption of the first-born of the tribes, a view which is in strict accordance with the words of the apostle, 'The law made nothing perfect,' He. 7. 19.—C.

9 But Aaron and his sons, and all the first-born of the Levites, numbered he not, as they were already the Lord's peculiar property.

1 Why are the first-born among 'so many brethren' so few? Are we here to search after another arithmetical error? No. The solution of the difficulty lies in the Jewish system of family government. (1) Families of daughters were not reckoned. (2) Many families, as in the case of Jacob's twelve separate families, reckon but one first-born, Ge. 49. 3. (3) In many families the first-born would be dead. (4) In some the Jewish law permitted absolute sale, disfranchisement, or substitution, Ge. 25. 32; 19. 29, 37. 1 Ch. 5. 1. These, without any other causes, are quite sufficient to account for the fewness of the numbers recorded.—C.

2 It was a singular circumstance, and indicative of the overruling providence of God, that the number of the males of the Levites and the number of the first-born males of all the other tribes should have so nearly coincided. It was so ordained, however, that the coincidence should not be exact. Of the latter there were two hundred threescore and thirteen more than of the former, and for this odd number the redemption money must be paid according to the law. This money, we may suppose, would be given out of a common fund.—I.

50 Of the first-born of the children of Israel took he the money; ²a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

study: 'the secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but these things (and these only) which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever.' De. 29. 29. By the prohibition of touching, ver. 15, or seeing, ver. 20, it was not the intention of Moses either to undervalue or degrade the Kohathites, but to teach that real honour lies neither in office nor privilege, but in fulfilling the part to which Providence has appointed us. If Christ, though 'a son over his own house,' He. 3. 6, 'yet took upon him the form of a servant,' and learned obedience by the things which he suffered,' He. 5. 8, how much more should we beware of 'thinking of ourselves more highly than we ought to think,' Ro. 12. 3, and how anxious to learn that happy lesson, 'in whatever state we are therewith to be content,' Phil. 4. 11.—C.

How much one man may be the guilty cause of a whole nation's sin, the case of Jeroboam is a melancholy witness. How many judgments and 'cuttings off' he brought upon them, history and providence attest till this day. The unworthy celebration of the Lord's supper, recorded 1 Co. 11. 30, was the cause that 'many were weak and sickly, and many slept.' 1 Moses, by the command of God, appointed the Levites to their office from thirty, but this seems not to accord with ch. 8. 24, where the Levites are required to 'go in to wait upon the service' at twenty-five. There is, however, no contradiction. At twenty-five they went in to the internal service of the tabernacle when localized; but, at thirty, they were appointed to the additional service of the 'burden' when the people journeyed. David afterwards fixed the commencement of the Levites' term of service at twenty, 1 Ch. 23. 24-26. This change was made because, under David, the church had attained a state of rest; and the Levites had no more to bear the burden of the tabernacle. This change may, however, appear rather a grievance than a privilege, and so it would be to carnal men, who desire liberty that they may use it for a cloak of licentiousness; but to the true Levite, the man held captive by Christ, and associated with him, an early call to the service of God, and an early separation from the world, is but an earlier relief from prison and from pain, and an earlier advancement to office and to honour. Blessed are they who, like Jeremiah, Je. 1. 5, have been sanctified from the birth, and who, like Timothy, have known from childhood those Scriptures which are able to make wise unto salvation, 2 Ti. 3. 15.—C.

Ju. 10. 3, 28; 17. 12. 3 The charge of the burden of the sons of Merari was by far the heaviest of all, the particulars of which are enumerated in ver. 31, 32; but at the same time it was so ordered in the providence of God, that the proportion of those in this family who were able to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation was greater than in either of the other families.—I.

3 Though the sum total of effective Levites was very small compared with that of the other tribes, yet there would be far more than could be employed at one time in this service. But they might carry by turns, and thus ease one another, and do their whole business expeditiously and cheerfully. It is also to be noticed that besides the service of the sanctuary, they had their own tents to remove, and their families to take care of.—Scott.

In every point of view this exclusion of certain diseases from the camp is an admirable institution. (1) As a measure of precaution against the spreading of infection. eternal salvation: it is therefore necessary that we should give the strictest attention to the directions of Scripture. Distressful is the paucity of God's faithful servants; yet are they in his hand, and he proportions their number and ability to their work. But let me especially rejoice, that the whole care of the churches, and of all men, is upon our redeemer: not Levites, in the power of their might, but the almighty Jesus bears and carries us and all our concerns: not the prudent sons of Aaron, but the only wise Son of God rears and dissolves particular churches on earth; rears and dissolves the particular frames of our spirit; dissolves our bodies in death, and again rears them up in the resurrection. He hath destroyed the veil and face of the covering cast over all people; that it is not now death, but life, for us sinful men to behold, and even enter by faith into the holiest of all. Let us therefore, whether ministers or private Christians, draw near with boldness, and behold, as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, that we may be changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS. — In these figures I discern that the church of God on earth ought carefully to be purged from scandalous persons and crimes; and that polluted and dishonest sinners shall be excluded from the celestial mansions. How necessary then to put away all filthiness of the flesh and spirit; and to avoid even the most distant approaches towards dishonesty, particularly with respect to Jesus Christ and his ministers! For those who preach the gospel must live by the gospel. Yea, let me avoid everything which may beget dishonourable suspicions; and, on the contrary, beware of indulging them without sufficient ground. But innocence is the surest comfort and support under the most malignant accusations. How dreadful it is when God's curse is the seasoner of sensual pleasures! Vain is every attempt to conceal our transgressions; for, though waters of jealousy are no more, the eye of God can see, and the voice of conscience will speak out. Yea, often God most strangely brings to light the hidden things of

ROAD TO HELIOPOLIS—NEAR THE SITE OF THE UNIVERSITY WHERE MOSES WAS EDUCATED. [NUMBERS, v.]—This picture was taken on Saturday, April 14, 1894. It is a scene on the road from Cairo to Heliopolis, and is fittingly placed in connection with the name of Moses. For it is generally agreed that Moses was educated at Heliopolis. In that ancient City of the Sun there once stood the most renowned university of the ancient world. And it was in this celebrated school that Moses was trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. There is a fanciful tradition told to tourists, who are supposed to believe everything, that Abraham was professor of astronomy in this university, and taught the Egyptians what he had learned of the stars in Chaldea. The road from Cairo to Heliopolis is about six miles in length, and the view we get of it in the above picture shows us some acacia trees on either side with a couple of camels and their attendants. The view is characteristic, and one is liable to meet such a company of peasants any hour of the day.

³ This law is founded upon three principles. (1) Confidence in the miraculous interposition of Providence, when appealed to in a manner not invented by the fancy or presumption of man; but distinctly prescribed by God himself. (2) That the accuser must not act upon light surmise, but be so far convinced that he testifies his belief in the necessity of the appeal to God, ver. 30. Mal. 3. 5. That no case of an appeal to this law is upon record, may be accounted for on two grounds. (1) That this appeal could not be made, but in the absence of all other proof: a case that could very seldom occur. ¹ Or, make themselves Nazarites.

² Nazarite—a person separated from the world, and dedicated, either for life or for a specified time, to the service of God. Those for life were sometimes so dedicated by their parents, as Samson, Ju. 13. 5. Samuel, 1 Sa. 1. 11, and the Baptist, Lu. 1. 15. Samson is expressly called a Nazarite; Samuel and John are not so called, but the law of the Nazarite being applied to both in the passages quoted, the conclusion that they were Nazarites seems unavoidable.—C.

20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee besides thine husband;

21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing; and the priest shall say unto the woman, The LORD make thee a ^acurse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth ^amake thy thigh to rot,⁹ and thy belly to swell:

22 And this water that causeth the curse shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot. And the woman shall say, ^aAmen, amen.¹

23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book,² and he shall blot them out with the bitter water:

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse; and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy-offering out of the woman's hand, and shall ^twave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar.

26 And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the ^umemorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.

27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, ^athat the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be ^aa curse among her people.

28 And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean, ^athen she shall be free, and shall conceive seed.

29 This^a is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another instead of her husband, and is defiled;³

30 Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law.

31 Then shall the man be ^bguiltless from iniquity, and this woman shall ^cbear her iniquity.

1 The law of the Nazarite. 22 The form of blessing the people.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ^aeither man or woman shall separate¹ themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite,² to separate themselves unto the LORD;
3 He shall ^bseparate himself from wine and darkness; and however they may escape present censure or punishment, whoremongers and adulterers God will judge, and dreadfully punish! Let me therefore abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul: and if I am unjustly accused, let me commit my cause to God, who judgeth righteously, that he may bring me to the light, and cause me to behold his righteousness. Meanwhile let me, with the utmost accuracy, examine how far I am chargeable with spiritual whore-

PILGRIMS FROM THE TOMB OF MOSES—SEEN JUST OUTSIDE THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. [NUMBERS, vi.]—In the fifth and sixth verses of the thirty-fourth chapter of Joshua, it is said that "Moses died in the land of Moab, and was buried in a valley in the land of Moab over against Bethpeor, but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day." Notwithstanding the plain teachings of Scripture on the subject the Mohammedans pretend to know where the grave of Moses is. They claim that it is to the south of the road between Jerusalem and Jericho. So, as we were leaving Jerusalem for Jericho, on the 25th day of April, 1894, just outside the walls of the Holy City we met a large number of pilgrims coming in from the so-called tomb of Moses. Upon this occasion the pilgrims appeared to be in a bad humor. They were firing pistols, and talking in a loud tone of voice as though they might be ready for mischief. Our dragoman told us that they were always especially fanatical and irritable on their return from these pilgrimages to the graves of their saints.

strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his separation³ shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine-tree,⁴ from the kernels even to the husk.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall ^acome at no dead body.

7 He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the consecration⁵ of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the⁶ LORD.⁷

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall ^eshave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And ^fon the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring ^ga lamb of the first year for a trespass-offering: but the days that were before ^hshall be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite: Whenⁱ the days of his separation are fulfilled, he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

14 And he shall offer ^khis offering unto the LORD, one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish for peace-offerings,

7 The law of the Nazarite during his vow, included five things. (1) Abstinence from all excitement in drink or food, the two means of living, ver. 3, 4. (2) From all cutting of the hair, ver. 5, in which was life without feelings, weakness made strength, Ju. 16, 17. 2 Co. 12. 9. (3) In separation from the dead, ver. 6-9, even where kindred was nearest. (4) Sacrifice, even for the most unexpected and involuntary breach of vow, ver. 9. (5) The loss of past time, and its necessary recommencement, in case of any infringement of the vow, ver. 12. (6) Sacrifice after his vow has been legally fulfilled. In every point of this law, the necessity of holiness, and the utter unprofitableness of our best services, is plainly and explicitly set forth, Lu. 17. 10. The whole law is a beautiful and expressive type of Christ, who was 'separate from sinners'—who really paid his vow, He. 10. 5-7, and offered himself the sacrifice that perfects for ever them that are sanctified, He. 10. 10.—C.

2 This was apparently the formal 'blessing' or 'benediction' which the priests were to use on all solemn occasions when the people met in public assembly. It is comprehensive and most cheering. It consists of three distinct parts. The first part embodies simple preservation. The second progresses to favour, and favour specially developed in grace or pardon. The third part advances still farther to love—love evidenced in the beaming countenance, and love realized in the peace which the God of love implants in the soul. Preservation is the peculiar work of God the Father; pardon, of God the Son; and peace, of God the Holy Ghost.—P.

dom or apostasy; and particularly observe whether the cross of Christ, and the afflictions of the gospel, are to me a savour of death unto death, or of life unto life.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—In these Nazarites let me behold the blessed Jesus solemnly separated by himself and his Father to the service of God in our redemption:—Jesus, never defiled with carnal comforts or pleasures, nor intoxicated with sinful lusts or worldly cares, nor polluted by his connection with sinners naturally dead in trespasses and sins:—Jesus, who, for Nazarine hair, hath the most noted graces and good works; yea, hath his people growing up into him as their head:—Jesus, never failing, but persevering in his work, and finishing it in his all-comprehensive offering of himself for us; and, in his resurrection, laying aside every token of continued subjection to a just God or broken law. In these Nazarites let ministers also, let saints, separated to the service of God, learn to deny themselves, mortify the deeds of the body, renounce this world and the pleasures of sin or sense, and behave as solemnly consecrated to God alone. Let every breach of their vows, through fellowship with dead and unfruitful works of darkness, occasion repeated application to Jesus' purifying blood, and to more diligence in duty. And, after finishing their course, let them thank God for his gracious assistance, account themselves unprofitable servants, and trust only to Jesus' all-sufficient sacrifice of himself as the ground of their hope and joy.—In this priestly benediction of the Hebrews let me behold Jesus, appointed of God to bless sinful men; yea, becoming blessings to them;—and God discovering his grace, by rendering his ordinances, apparently simple in themselves, gracious for blessing us with all spiritual blessings in Christ. Let me therefore look only to God for what blessings I need; and by faith hold communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in order to the enjoyment of them.

computation of Fortunatus Scacchus seems very reasonable. He supposes that the tabernacle being erected on the first day of the first month of the second year after they came out of Egypt, seven days were spent in the consecration of it, and of the altar, &c. On the eighth day Moses began to consecrate Aaron and his sons, which lasted seven days longer. Then the fifteenth day of that month was the first day of unleavened bread, which God commanded (as we read in chap. ix.) to be observed in the first month, and lasted till the two and twentieth. The rest of the month, we may well suppose, was spent in giving, receiving, and delivering the laws mentioned in the book of Leviticus. After this, on the first day of the second month, he began to number the people according to the command in the beginning of this book, which may be supposed to have lasted three days. Then on the fourth the Levites were numbered. On the next day, we may suppose, they were offered to God, and given unto the priests; and on the sixth day they were expiated and consecrated, as we read in the next chapter. On the seventh day their several charges were parted among them (of which we read in ch. iv.) After which the princes, he supposes, began to offer upon the eighth day of the second month, for the dedication of the altar, which lasted till the nineteenth day inclusively; and on the twentieth day of this month they moved, as we read in ch. 10. 11, 12, from Sinai to the wilderness of Paran.—Farrick.

8 From the numerous sacrifices, and from the value of the gifts of gold and of silver offered by each of the princes, it has been conjectured that these were not their own private gifts, but rather the contributions of their several tribes. It is not improbable that others may have aided the princes with their contributions.—I.

9 These sacrifices were much more numerous than the burnt-offering or sin-offering, and for this reason perhaps, that both the princes and people had a share of them, on which they feasted before the Lord.—I.

45 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

46 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

47 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

48 ¶ On the seventh³ day Elishama the son of Ammihud, prince of the children of Ephraim, offered:

49 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary;⁴ both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

50 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

51 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

52 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

53 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Elishama the son of Ammihud.

54 ¶ On the eighth day⁵ offered Gamaliel, the son of Pedahzur, prince of the children of Manasseh:

55 His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

56 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

57 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

58 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

59 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

² As the offerings proceed from day to day, it is worthy of remark that they never change either by addition or diminution or quality. The prince of the smallest and poorest tribe offers the largest and richest. Had it been otherwise, 'emulations,' Ga. 5. 20, would have been the immediate result, and the pride of man would soon have mingled in the service, where nought but humility can approach with acceptance, Mat. 18. 4. Ja. 4. 10. C.—It is observable that the offerings of all the princes were alike, each presenting the same amount of silver and gold, and an equal number of sacrifices. This equality in their offerings may have been the result either of agreement among themselves, or of the appointment of God, that there might be no unholy emulation, nor any unseemly boasting in so sacred a transaction. In contributing to the work of God, no motive can be more unbecoming than an ostentatious desire of being thought superior to our brethren. We may also observe that Moses, acting under the inspiration of God's Spirit, thought fit to set down distinctly, and at length, the offerings of the princes of every tribe (as he does here and throughout the chapter), though they were the very same, without any difference; that an honourable mention being made of every one apart, none might think themselves neglected. But how consoling is it to reflect that, in God's estimation, the widows' mite is as valuable as the rich man's offering.—I.

³ Le. 14. 10. He. 1. 9. 1 Jn. 2. 27. Re. 6. 6.

³ Surprise has been expressed by both Jewish and Christian writers that this work should have gone on upon the seventh day, which they suppose to have been the Sabbath. But there is no proof that this seventh day of offering was a Sabbath-day, or if it had, could the people be better employed than in thus consecrating themselves and this service to the Lord? It has already been remarked, that every act in this matter was a religious act, and we can scarcely suppose any day too holy for the performance of such acts as are here recorded.—I.

⁴ There were three shekels: the royal shekel, valued at fifteen pence; the shekel of the sanctuary, twice as much; and the common shekel, which differed not from our shilling, Ge. 23. 15. Ex. 30. 13. 2 Sa. 14. 26. Je. 32. 9. Eze. 4. 10. Ne. 5. 15. Am. 8. 5.

⁵ Ex. 29. 41. Le. 2. 1.

⁵ Upon this day the rebellion and death of Nadab and Abihu occurred, Le. 9. 1; 10. 1. Now the day of this melancholy occurrence is one of the most remarkable in the Jewish dispensation. For example, the eighth was the day of circumcision, Le. 12. 3. The eighth was the day of dedicating the first of the young of animals, Ex. 22. 30. The eighth was the day for cleansing the leper, Le. 14. 10. The eighth was the day of most solemn assembly and peculiar sabbatism, Le. 23. 36, 39; and is called the great day of the feast, Jn. 7. 37. Yet, on this very day, when so many associations combined to honour it, Satan prevails upon pride to render it dismal and disastrous.—C.

⁶ From the narrative contained in this chapter Scott remarks, that they whom Providence distinguishes as princes, nobles, or wealthy persons, should take the lead and set the example in every good work—with liberal hearts devising liberal things. But a liberal heart should be under the direction of prudence and discretion; and the circumstances of the times, the state of the church and its ministers, and the necessities of those around them, should be considered, that nothing be wasted in useless expense or vain projects.—I.

⁸ Heb. on the days of the eleventh day, ver. 78. The Hebrew form of expression here, and in ver. 78, has something curious in it. It may be literally rendered, in the day the first and tenth day, and in the day two and tenth day. But this is the idiom of the language; and, to an original Hebrew, our almost anomalous words eleventh and twelfth, by which we translate the original, would appear as strange as his, literally translated, would appear to us.—Dr. A. Clarke.

⁹ It is instructive to observe the solemn fact so frequently recurring, that, with all his offerings, each brought an offering for sin.—I.

60 ¶ On the ninth day Abidan the son of Gidconi, prince of the children of Benjamin, offered:⁶

61 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering.

63 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

64 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

65 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Abidan the son of Gideoni.

66 ¶ On the tenth day Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai, prince⁷ of the children of Dan, offered:

67 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

68 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

69 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

70 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

71 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

72 ¶ On the eleventh day⁸ Pagiel the son of Ocran, prince of the children of Asher, offered:

73 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil, for a meat-offering:

74 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

75 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

76 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:⁹

77 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Pagiel the son of Ocran.

78 ¶ On the twelfth day Ahira the son of Enan, prince of the children of Naphtali, offered:

79 His offering was one silver charger,¹ the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after service without receiving hints of changes and removals death not excepted. Liberal hearts devise liberal things, and are never weary of giving to the Lord.

But in our dedications to God we ought carefully to consider what is like to be most useful in his service; and, amidst all, to implore pardon through Jesus our sin-offering. And while every one is careful to do that which is proper in his station, God honourably records the good deeds of his people in the most par-

A PROACH TO THE NILE BRIDGE. [NUMBERS, viii : 1.]—No view, perhaps, could be in greater contrast from the Egypt of Moses' time than the one given above of the approach to the Nile Bridge. Up to 1863, passage of the Nile was made by small ferry boats. Now we have a bridge of iron 1260 feet long, with stone buttresses. A pair of British lions sitting at the entrance of the bridge bespeak the fact that Egypt has passed under the influence of modern times and modern ideas. Across this bridge tourists now always pass to the pyramids. It perpetually presents a scene of life and color. There are donkeys and camels and carts and carriages going and coming throughout the day. Most tourists who visit the pyramids now go from Cairo in carriages, though occasionally a traveler prefers the old time method of traveling on a donkey.

the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat-offering:

80 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

81 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

82 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering:

83 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year. This was the offering of Ahira the son of Enan.

84 This was the dedication of the altar (in the day when it was anointed)² by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold;

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:³

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.⁴

87 All the oxen for the burnt-offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat-offering; and the kids of the goats for sin-offering twelve:

88 And all the oxen, for the sacrifice of the peace-offerings, were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he-goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty.⁵ This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

89 ¶ And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with Him,⁶ then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy-seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he⁷ spake unto Him.⁸

CHAPTER VIII.

1 How the lamps are to be lighted. 5 The consecration of the Levites. 23 The age and time of their service.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou lightest the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light over against the candlestick.¹

3 And Aaron did so: he lighted the lamps thereof over against the candlestick; as the LORD commanded Moses.

4 And^b this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold; unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was beaten work: according particular manner, and takes pleasure in manifesting his gracious acceptance thereof. But might not these twelve solemn days prefigure the apostolic and spiritual periods, in which princes and nations did, or shall, dedicate themselves and substance to Jesus Christ, our great tabernacle and altar; yea, the glorious fulfiller of all the Levitical dispensation?

7 The perpetuity of the cloud in such a climate, during so many years, and in sight of such a gain-saying people, Ro. 10. 21, not one of whom ever attempted to question the fact, presents now an unanswerable attestation to the truth of the Mosaic history, as it presented then an unquestionable symbol and evidence of the divine presence.—C.

8 When the cloud was taken up they decamped; followed so long as it went before them, ver. 12, and Ex. 13. 21, and pitched their tents when the cloud became stationary over a particular place. To this the star at Bethlehem seems to have corresponded, when it 'went before' the wise men till it came and stood over the place 'where the young child was,' Mat. 2. 9.—C.

6 ¶ And there were certain men who were ^adefiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day; and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day.

7 And those men said unto him, We ^aare defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not ^aoffer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will ^ahear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you, or of your posterity, shall be ^aunclean by reason of a dead body, or ^abe in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The ^afourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, ^aand eat it with unleavened bread and bitter ^aherbs.

12 They shall leave³ none of it unto the morning, nor break any bone of it: according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that ^ais clean, and is not in a journey, and ^aforbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from his people: because he brought not the offering⁴ of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin.

14 And if ^aa stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger,⁵ and for him that was born in the land.

15 ¶ And ^aon the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, ^anamely, the tent⁶ of the testimony: and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire until the morning.

16 So^a it was always:⁷ the cloud covered it ^aby day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And ^awhen the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.⁸

churches; and if faithful and diligent while their strength continues, their people ought to support them decently when they become old and infirm, and Jesus Christ will for ever reward them in the heavenly state.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—We need repeated excitements to the most pleasant and solemn services of God; though it is an infinite favour, that, in these deserts of trouble, we may keep the Lord's solemn feasts. Those who know their value will delight in the observance, and rejoice to see others hungering and thirsting after God's ordinances, even when hindrances are laid in their way. Ministers ought ever to be careful in debarring scandalous sinners from the seals of the covenant; yet, on the contrary, ever cautious and attentive to God's word in determining particular cases. But here let me reflect on the mercy, that though we Gentiles were of old afar off, and in our uncleanness, God hath brought us nigh by the blood of his Son, and hath provided a second, a gospel passover for us! If then we be unavoidably disappointed of public ordinances, let us take the first opportunity of approaching his house or table. Providential hindrances may disappoint us of the means, but cannot, if our hearts be right, deprive us of the grace thereof; God will amply supply our wants some other way: while such as reject God's ordinances will as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

19 And when the cloud tarried long⁹ upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud abode¹ from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel abode² in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.²

23 At^a the commandment of the LORD they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

be rejected by him. Habitual neglect of the Lord's supper is a fearful sign of a naughty heart.—Let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be our pillar of cloud, to direct our motions and rests; and let us be always obedient to his tokens: no safety can be had in going before him; and no comfort can be had in loitering behind him. Let me be ready, with comfort, to see this cloud remove into the eternal state, where I expect a more abiding habitation; that when death comes, I may have nothing to do but to remove: and, even by the way, let God fix my residence and lot as he pleases; and there let me contentedly pitch my tent.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—In these trumpets I discern the pure and precious gospel of Christ, and hear its joyful sound proclaiming the sufficiency and suitableness of Jesus and his righteousness, calling sinful men to him and his ordinances, and encouraging them in their journey heavenward, and in their spiritual warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. Let me also observe, that even Sinai-visits, the most noted opportunities of intimacy with God, come quickly to an end; and that, in this world, we but remove from one wilderness to another. While, in the Hebrews' orderly march I discern the ransomed of the Lord, directed by the Lion of the tribe of Judah, and having his Father's presence among them, march-

It would seem that when Reuel (or Jethro) went back to his own country, as stated in Ex. 18. 27, his son Hobab remained with Moses, and abode in the camp during the whole period of the sojourn at Sinai. Now when the Israelites approached the borders of Midian proper, Hobab determined to leave them and go to his own country; it would seem, however, that on the earnest persuasion of Moses he remained with the Israelites and acted as their guide.—P.

1 The burning at Taberah is quenched by Moses' prayer. 4 The people lust for flesh, and loathe manna. 10 Moses complaineth of his charge. 16 God divideth his burden among seventy elders. 31 Quails are given in wrath at Kibroth-hattaarah.

AND when the people complained,¹ it displeased² the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled: and the fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the ^autmost parts of the camp.³

2 And the people ^bcried unto Moses; and when Moses ^cprayed unto the LORD, the fire was quenched.⁴

3 And he called the name of the place Taberah:⁵ because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

4 ¶ And the ^dmixed multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also wept⁶ again,⁷ and said, ^eWho shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember ^fthe fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now our soul is ^gdried away: there is nothing at all, besides this manna, before our eyes.⁸

7 And ^hthe manna was as coriander-seed, and the colour thereof⁹ as the colour of bdellium.

8 And the people went ⁱabout and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and ^kbaked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when the ^ldew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.¹

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent; and the ^manger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou ⁿafflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, ^oCarry them in thy bosom (as a nursing-father beareth the sucking child) unto the land which thou swarest unto their fathers?

ing in goodly order to their heavenly Canaan, let me exert myself to gain others, particularly my relations, to God and glory. There is in him enough for us all. And happy are they, if grace make them forget their father's house, and their own people, to go to the Lord! While, therefore, we have his ordinances with us, let us strive together in prayer for his presence therein; that it may be our effectual defence against enemies, and a source of every necessary comfort.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. The cause of complaint is not stated. It may have been from the length and the difficulty of the journey. They were now in the most sterile part of the wilderness of Sinai. It would seem too that the complaints were in a great measure confined to the strangers or slaves, called 'the mixed multitude,' who followed them from Egypt, and who marched not in the midst, but on the skirts of the camp. Upon these the 'fire of the Lord' fell. P.]

Ver. 5. [The murmurings began with the strangers, and soon extended to the Israelites. We can scarcely wonder at men long accustomed to the flesh, the fish, the acid vegetables, and luscious fruits of Egypt, wearying with the sameness of the somewhat insipid manna. Cucumbers, melons, and onions were, and still are, very abundant in Egypt. They form the staple articles of food among the lower classes; and are well suited to the natural wants of man in a hot and dry climate. P.]

Ver. 8. [In Ex. 16. 31 it is said the manna 'was like coriander-seed, white;' here it is said it was like coriander-seed, and in colour like bdellium. The two descriptions agree:—In form the manna resembled coriander-seed; but in colour it was white, like the transparent pale-coloured gum called bdellium. In Exodus the taste is said to be 'like wafers with honey;' here it is compared to 'fresh oil.' There is no discrepancy:—the former description applied to it as fresh gathered; this, as ground, and beaten, and baked. P.]

Ver. 10. [This unmanly, this childish 'weeping' of Israel was addressed, not to God in prayer, but to Moses, ver. 13, in unreasonable petition, or ungrateful reproach; therefore God's anger is 'greatly kindled.' But there are those who are offended when anger is ascribed to God: and why? because the anger of sinful men is often unreasonable, without cause, violent, unjust, and destructive—must therefore the anger of a holy God be necessarily of the same character? To deny that God is angry with sin and sinners because human anger is generally evil, were just as unreason-

13 Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not see my wretchedness.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee:

17 And I will come down and talk with thee there: and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: (for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt:) therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you; because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said, The people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

24 ¶ And Moses went out and told the people the words of the LORD, and gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied, and did not cease.

5 To prophesy commonly signifies to foretell ere a thing comes to pass; but it also is employed to signify the explanation of a thing already announced. In this sense it is said, Ex. 7. 1, 'Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet'; that is, not a foreteller of future, but the expounder of thy sentiments to Pharaoh. Like Aaron, then, these persons began to expound, apply, and enforce the divine word, in exhortation, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness.—C.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

fountain of Hudherah, which lies about 40 miles north-east of Sinai, in the midst of a wild, bleak, and barren desert. There is a larger fountain, called Ain, some distance to the north, and probably the camp may have extended to it. It is on the direct route from Sinai to Kadesh. P.]

SITE OF ANCIENT MEMPHIS—WHERE MOSES PASSED HIS YOUTH. [NUMBERS, xii: 1.]—Memphis was the royal residence of the Pharaohs of the sixth dynasty. It was an old capital of Egypt. It was founded by Menes, the first king of Egypt. Here was the temple consecrated to the worship of Isis, and here was the temple of Apis. To-day it is in utter desolation. Nothing remains above ground but ruins, and these overgrown with palm trees. Material for building old Cairo was brought from Memphis. The most interesting thing connected with this once splendid city is that it was here that Moses was brought up. The great cemetery near the site of Memphis contains the tombs of the ancient empire, that is, the tombs built during the first eleven dynasties. Among these is the celebrated Step Pyramid.

From the melancholy records of our Redeemer's trial before Caiaphas, Mat. 26. 67; 27. 30, it seems to have continued as a mark of condemnation; and almost every eastern traveller in modern times has noticed and recorded the prevalence and permanence of the custom.—C.

reason; for ingratitude is the basest vice. Discontented persons loathe their very blessings, and seem solicitous to make themselves miserable; readily preferring the worst things which God withholds to the best which he bestows, and even the filthy pleasures of sin and sense to his unspeakable gift of grace.—It is a fearful mark of the curse of God upon the heart when men repine amidst plenty! Those who follow the people of God for base and carnal ends, quickly become murmurers when they meet with disappointments. A mixture of carnal and self-seeking men are ruinous to the church; and a mixture of carnal affections are the plague of the renewed heart. Through these it is that even the greatest saints are apt to lose their temper, extol their service, quarrel with the disposals of Providence, and distrust the power and kindness of God, when they meet with great provocations from their fellow-creatures—and to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when they are especially called to reprove them by a contrary conduct. But God often tries his people, chiefly in respect of their most eminent graces, to humble them, and to prove them, when he finds them wanting; for the meekest are ready to wish themselves freed from trials, rather than to glorify God under them; nay, to wish death, when their temper is very unfit for it. But how richly God qualifies men for work when he calls them to it! Let me then never grudge to any the honours for which God hath fitted him; never condemn the government which God hath appointed; never forbid those who act for the honour of God, even though they follow not with us; nor ever neglect to accept the assistance which God affords me in my work, though it should eclipse my renown! But let me always remember that a curse or frown attends even God's granting of that which men ask in a murmuring and peremptory manner, and that he can easily render created comforts a tremendous and destructive plague!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. Or Cushite—Cush was the son of Ham, Ge. 10. 6, and father of Nimrod, who founded the first great empire: and this wife is supposed to give offence as a descendant of Ham—whereas Zipporah, who is generally supposed to be now dead, is considered as a descendant of Midian, the son of Abraham by Keturah, Ge. 25. 2. But from Ex. 18. 5, 6 it appears that Zipporah had been brought to the camp, at most, a very short time before this event; and as there is no mention of her sudden death, an occurrence not likely to be overlooked, so there is no reason to suppose that Moses had married another wife; but that the offence is taken at Zipporah's real or imaginary influence with her husband. Ethiopia, as a geographical term, is one of very indefinite and general application in Scripture, unquestionably extending both to Asia and Africa, Ge. 2. 13; Eze. 30. 5; 38. 5. But if the name Ethiopian, or Cushite, be taken, not from the country, but the lineage of the woman, Moses had violated no law by his marriage: as God's prohibition on that head extended only to the Canaanites, De. 7. 3. C.—'Ethiopian' is in the Hebrew Cushite. There were two divisions of the Cushites: one settled in Arabia, and mingled with the Joktanites and Ishmaelites; the other crossed into Africa and colonized Ethiopia. The wife of Moses—doubtless a second wife—was not necessarily an Ethiopian; she was probably an Arabian Cushite. Zipporah was a Midianite, and could not therefore be termed a Cushite. P.]

Ver. 3. [These words, as so highly commendatory of Moses, are by some supposed an addition of Ezra, or some other inspired writer: but why indulge suppositions without evidence? The word translated meek may be justly rendered broken, afflicted, in which sense it would be an accurate description of his condition with his relatives and the whole people. But taking the word meek as descriptive of placidity of temper, there is no offence against modesty: because there is no offence against truth. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Too common, but very sinful, are contentions among saints; nor doth anything produce hotter disputes than jealousy of power. Grace, natural affection, duty, and safety, are all trampled under foot when men strive for grandeur and rule. But God takes a peculiar pleasure in vindicating and honouring his faithful ministers or people. He remarks exactly, and justly punishes, the injuries done to those who, from a meek regard to his law, will not avenge themselves. It is dangerous therefore to revile God's servants: they who do it shall at last be obliged to bow to them, and confess their sin. Yea, often God deals most sharply with his principal children when they offend him; and marks the abominable nature of their sin in the filth, pain, or shame of their punishment. But it is becoming when offending saints make the deepest submissions. And acceptable to God, honourable to us, and effectual for our neighbour's advantage, are sincere and affectionate intercessions for those who have injured us. But even while our sins hinder our heavenly journeys, the Lord will take care of our honour and comfort, if once we be penitent and humble.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 17. 'Go up there (or thither) by the Negeb, and ascend the mountain.' The Negeb was the proper name of the region lying along the southern border of Canaan. The mountain was also a descriptive name given to that tract which lay between Jerusalem and Hebron. In going to Canaan from Kadesh their direct course was up the Negeb to the mountain, or, as it is called in the New Testament, 'the hill country.' P.]

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called Oshea⁴ the son of Nun, Jehoshua.

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way ⁹southward, and go up into the mountain;

18 And see the ^hland, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strong holds;

20 And what the land is, whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein or not:⁵ and be ye of ^ggood courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. (Now the time was the time of the first-ripe grapes.⁶)

21 ¶ So they went up, and searched the land, from the wilderness of ^kZin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

22 And they ascended by the south,⁷ and came unto ^hHebron, where Ahiman, Sheshai, and Tahnai, the children of Anak, were: (now Hebron was built seven years before ^mZoan in Egypt.)

23 And they came unto the ⁿbrook of Esheol,⁸ and cut down from thence a ^obranch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two⁹ upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook ^pEshcol,¹ because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after ^qforty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of

(2) Natural state of the soil, good or bad. (3) Habitations of the people, whether cities, tents, or fortifications. (4) Cultivated state of the soil, fat or lean. (Observe, in agriculture, a soil may be naturally good, yet through over-cropping, or want of manure, it may be lean, and therefore there are two inquiries into its qualities in ver. 18, 20.) (5) Whether the country was wooded or cleared. (6) An order for specimens of the soil and climate in some of the chief productions. — Note. ³⁰ 'Eateth up the inhabitants,' that is, unhealthily. Yet this is immediately followed by an exaggerated description of the inhabitants, all are of great stature—giants. Every passion in weak and sinful man undervalues, exaggerates, or misrepresents, nor pauses at falsehoods or impossibilities. 'We were in our own sight as grasshoppers.' Surely if this may be excused as a figure expressing comparative littleness, it will not explain how they could tell the thoughts in the minds of the Anakim, with whom, as spies, it is not probable they sought to converse. — C.

1 The people murmur at the news. 6 Joshua and Caleb labour to pacify them. 11 God threateneth them. 13 Moses intercedeth with God, and obtaineth pardon. 26 The murmurers are deprived of entering into the land. 36 The men who raised the evil report concerning the land die by a plague. 40 The people that would invade the land against the will of God are smitten.

AND all the congregation ^alifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night.

2 And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses, and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, ^bWould God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or, would God we had died in this wilderness!¹

REFLECTIONS.—It is hazardous to indulge our own senses and reasonings, rather than simply to submit to the revelations of God; for often the Lord chooses men's delusions, and permits them to be ensnared by their own unbelieving devices. How often are most of those who are employed in the most important transactions, evil and wicked; and get themselves remarked, chiefly to their lasting dishonour! Yea, the manifold experience of the power of God, and the frequent repetition of his promises, are of little avail with such as have abandoned themselves to the rage of their unbelief. The cowardly heart magnifies every object, and increases every difficulty: and unbelief obstinately concludes every enemy too mighty for us; while zeal for God dares every danger, and faith makes men confident of success. Credit therefore, O my soul, what the Lord hath spoken concerning the heavenly Canaan, and my entrance into it. Let me live by faith, not by sight. Let not unbelief and carnal sense, but faith and hope, be my spies, to enter within the veil. And let repeated tastes of grapes from Eshcol, repeated tastes of intimate fellowship with God, make my heart desire to depart, and be with Christ, which is far better.

4 And they said one to another, ^aLet us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt.²

5 Then Moses and Aaron ^efell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And ^fJoshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, ^gwhich were of them that searched the land, ^hrent their clothes:

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is an ⁱexceeding good land.

8 If ^jthe LORD delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey.

9 Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they ^kare bread^k for us: their defence is departed from them, and the ^lLORD is with us: fear them not.

10 But all the congregation bade ^mstone them with stones.³ And the ⁿglory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^oHow long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have showed among them?

12 I will ^psmite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them; and will make of thee a greater nation, and mightier than they.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, ^qThen the Egyptians shall hear ^rit; (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

14 And they will tell ^sit to the inhabitants of this land: ^tfor they ^uhave heard that thou, LORD, ^vart among this people; that thou, LORD, art seen face to face, and ^wthat thy cloud standeth over them; and ^xthat thou goest before them, by day-time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now, ^yif thou shalt kill ^zall this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will ^{aa}speak, saying,

And, as the attribute of power is always the most observable, Moses therefore 'reasons' with God, Is. 1. 18, showing, that if judgment prevail over mercy, the heathen will attribute it not to want of will, but of power, and so be confirmed in the worship of their worthless idols, to whose superior influence they would attribute Israel's destruction.—C.

It appears that while the spies were searching the land, and the people deliberating after their return, the warlike inhabitants assembled in force in the great valley north of the camp to intercept their passage. CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 5. Falling on the face was a customary act, either of worship to God, or obedience to man, Ge. 17. 3; Re. 11. 16; Ge. 50. 18. The act of Moses and Aaron is expressive of profound respect for their brethren; which, in such a case, nothing but divine love could have produced—and of earnest entreaty to avert their foolish and wicked resolution of returning to slavery.—Note, Those who would benefit men must bear with their caprice and ingratitude; and entreat, when they should reprove or command. C.]

Ver. 39. [Mourning is good or evil, according to its fountain and object. Springing from a due sense of sin, and apprehension of mercy, it is 'godly sorrow working repentance to salvation;' but springing from a mere sense of disappointment or loss, it is 'of the world, and worketh death,' 2 Co. 7. 10. C.]

Ver. 40. [The strange resolution to evade or frustrate a threatening by pleading a promise, is not peculiar to rebellious Israel—there are thousands that continue in sin, because they hope for mercy.—For we have sinned—that is, in appointing a captain to return to slavery, Ne. 9. 17. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The headstrong and unmortified passions of sinners hurry them furiously on to their own ruin: and such as are discontented with God's providence, and resolve to mend themselves, always make the matter worse and worse. Unbelieving murderers are prone to charge God himself with the most base and malicious designs, and to wish for misery, under a pretence of care to avoid it. What an infinite advantage is God's presence and favour! But if he leave us, we become an easy prey to every invader. How noble is it when the abused servants of Christ in meekness instruct them that oppose themselves: if God, peradventure, will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth! though often they draw upon themselves barbarous treatment from such as they labour to save. But God tenderly remarks the dangers of his faithful servants, and interferes for their relief in the critical moment. What a blessing to a nation are those who can effectually plead their cause at a throne of grace; wrestle for mercy and forgiveness; and fill their mouth with arguments from God's own honour, power, declared mercy and patience, and their own former experience thereof! God is ready graciously to hear and answer such intercessions, even when he will not forbear showing his indignation at the sins which have provoked him. He keeps an exact account of men's conduct, that he may reward or punish it in due time. Terribly offensive to him is the contempt and discrediting of his promises, and most effectual for provoking him to abandon the guilty to irretrievable and everlasting ruin! But ringleaders in guilt, and presumptuous adventurers, in opposition to God's express command, often fall under distinguished marks of his wrath, and are made pledges of the final destruction of those whom they have seduced to or encouraged to sin. Take heed, therefore, O my soul, lest I be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin; lest there be in me an evil heart of unbelief, departing from the living God: and fear, lest a promise being left me of entering into his rest, I should seem to come short of it through unbelief! but let me be a man of another spirit than the world, and let me singly cleave to and fully follow after the Lord. If for so doing men revile and persecute me, God will amply reward me with an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

29 Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me,

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I swore¹ to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.²

31 But your ^hlittle ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall knowⁱ the land which ye have despised.

32 But^k as for you, your carcasses, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children shall wander in the wilderness ^lforty years, and ^mbear your whoredoms, until your carcasses be wasted in the wilderness.

34 After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even ⁿforty days, (each day for a year,) shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years; and ye shall know ^omy breach of promise.³

35 I the LORD have said, ^pI will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, ^rdied by the plague before the LORD.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of the men that went to search the land, lived still.

39 And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: and the people ^smourned greatly.

40 ¶ And they ^trose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned.

2 From Jos. 14. 1; 22. 13, we learn that Eleazar and others now present did afterwards enter into Canaan. Is not this a contradiction? No, for in ver. 29 God particularizes the excluded as the 'numbered' from twenty years and upwards. Now, from Nu. 1. 3 it appears these were the men of the twelve civil and military tribes, to the exclusion of Levi, the ecclesiastical, Nu. 1. 47, and who were subsequently 'numbered' from a month old and upwards, Nu. 3. 15.—C.

3 The phrase translated 'breach of promise' occurs but this once, so that there is no resource in comparison. The meaning must therefore be sought in the word itself, and the analogy of other divine truths. To say, with some, that the promise being conditional, and the Israelites having failed in their part, God means to tell them he is not bound to his part of the engagement, is really to explain nothing. For even admitting the phrase 'conditional promise,' still it is merely an abbreviated name for both a promise and a threatening implied or declared, the one to the believing and obedient, the other to the unbelieving and rebellious; and as the fulfilment of the promise would be no annulling of the threatening, so the fulfilment of the threatening would be no 'breach' of the promise. The literal translation will best explain and convey the meaning of the passage: 'Ye shall know my rising up against you, my displeasure, my indignation, which sense of the words is confirmed by the following verse.—C.

5 Now commenced the thirty-eight years' wandering. Of their journeys during this long period, and of the 'great and terrible wilderness' into which they were driven, not a single record has been preserved. The name Tih, 'wandering,' which the desert south of Palestine still bears, seems to be the only local memorial of it. Sacred history remains silent until, after the lapse of the thirty-eight years, another generation, under the same aged leaders, however, appear once more around the sacred fountain of Kadesh.—P.

1 The date and place of the divine communications contained in this chapter are not mentioned. It would seem from ver. 22, 23 that it must have been a considerable time after the giving of the law on Sinai, and consequently it could not have been during the first sojourn of the people at Kadesh. The regular diary breaks off at the close of chap. xiv., and is not again resumed till chap. xx. It is probable, but still not entirely certain, that the revelations made and the incidents recorded in ch. xv.—xix. took place during the thirty-eight years' wandering, though neither time nor place is indicated.—P.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^aWhen ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

3 And will make an ^boffering by fire unto the LORD, a burnt-offering, or a sacrifice in performing² a vow, or in a free-will-offering, or in your solemn feasts, to make a ^csweet savour unto the LORD, of the herd, or of the flock;

7 And for a drink-offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

8 And when thou preparest a bullock³ for a burnt-offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow or peace-offerings unto the LORD;

9 Then shall he bring with a bullock a meat-offering of three tenth-deals of flour, mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink-offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one, according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a stranger⁴ sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

one law. The ribband, lace, or rather thread of blue, surrounding or pervading the whole, represented the one principle of the law—the unchanging love of God. And being the chief-priestly colour—for the robe of the ephod was all of blue, Ex. 28. 31—it reminded

TOMBS OF THE MAMELUKES—IN THE REGION WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL SPENT SO MANY YEARS IN EGYPT. [NUMBERS, xv.]—Beyond the citadel in Cairo there are a number of beautiful tombs extending along the eastern side of the city, known as the tombs of the Mamelukes. The ruins of these tombs bear traces of great artistic merit, some of the minarets being exceedingly beautiful. From the galleries in the minarets the muezzins summon the faithful to prayer five times a day. The muezzin in a kind of sing-song tone utters the following: "Allah is great! I testify that there is no other god but Allah! And Mohammed is the prophet of Allah! Come to prayer! Come to worship! Allah is great! There is no god but Allah!" These tombs are now falling to decay as all things belonging to the civilization of Egypt are falling to decay. This ancient land of the Pharaohs and the children of Israel, by the strange mutations of history is now under the dominance and influence of a Christian nation.

15 One⁹ ordinance⁵ shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One law, and one manner, shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,⁶

19 Then it shall be, that when ye eat of ^hthe bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave-offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the ⁱfirst of your dough for an heave-offering: as ye do ^kthe heave-offering of the thrashing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave-offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have ^lerred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even ^mall that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward, among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, if ⁿought be committed by ignorance,⁷ without the knowledge of the congregation,⁸ that all the congregation shall offerⁿ one young bullock for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat-offering, and his drink-offering, according to the manner,⁹ and one kid of the goats for a sin-offering.

25 And the ^opriest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin-offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

⁸ There are two laws for sins of ignorance, Le. iv. Nu. xv. The first for the wilderness, the second for Canaan. But why are there two laws for the same case? They are not for the same case. The law in Le. 4. 2 is enacted for cases where the congregation, priest, or ruler, or people have ^lerred, and ^lnot observed^l all the commandments, that is, for any mere neglect arising from ignorance. The law in Nu. 15. 22 is enacted for cases where the sin of ignorance is ^lagainst any of the commandments of the Lord; not a mere neglect, but a direct ^linfraction. The distinction is well expressed in these words:—'We have left undone the things which we ought to have done; and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.'—C.

God to have his ministers decently provided for! But chiefly behold the agreeable nourishment and heart-cheering consolations of the Holy Ghost, which attend the offering of our Redeemer once for all! Behold the kindness of God in inviting the Gentiles to his church, and presaging their entrance into it in due time in such a multitude of laws, favourable to strangers! Behold how the Lord must be honoured with the first-fruits of all our substance! But especially behold the indispensable necessity of Christ, as our propitiation for sin, however inadvertently it be committed; and the infinite danger of wilful and presumptuous sinning exemplified in this violation of the Sabbath! Is it not shameful that we should need memorials of obedience to the laws of God, so great and gracious—nay, God, even our own God! Enter then, my soul, into the spirit of these things. While I live on Jesus' flesh and blood, and rely on his atonement alone, let me cheerfully give myself, and all that I have, to the Lord. Never dare to sin against light and love; to violate the Sabbath of the Lord my God, by thinking my own thoughts, speaking my own words, doing my own ways, or finding my own pleasures. But let his law be written on my heart; and every providence, every enjoyment, be improved by me as an excitement to holy obedience!

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS.—It is hard for the best of characters to stand before envy. Unsanctified honours often puff up men to their own destruction: and if God exalt them above most of their brethren, they can endure to be in subjection to none. Yea, God permits unsanctified professors, especially ministers and magistrates, to go often the most fearful lengths in sin. Every act of disobedience to or contempt of God's viceregents in the church or state, is by him accounted rebellion against himself: and often would sinful nations be utterly ruined, were it not for the intercession of those saints whom they abuse and persecute. But God can, and sometimes does, execute upon presumptuous sinners the most terrible correspondent justice. And though, with care, he distinguishes between the more and the less guilty, yet he sets up proper memorials of his judgments, that others may hear and fear to do wickedly. But notwithstanding, hardened sinners, who survive, forget the most awakening alarms, and return to their persecution of God's servants! Yet still, in the most endearing manner, ought we to promote the welfare and salvation of those who have injured us; and when we are maliciously accused, the greatest comfort is the testimony of a good conscience. How like unto their master Christ do ministers act, when they expose their very lives to prevent the ruin of such as abuse them! And quickly the Lord repents him of the evil, when, earnestly entreated by such as, along with himself, are abused by sinners. Let me now, with trembling, remember my faults this day.—How often have I, as these rebels, gone about to establish my own righteousness, and refused to submit to the laws of Christ; and and that ye seek not ^cafter your own heart, and your own eyes, after which ye use to go a whoring;

LORD: and ^kwhat is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?⁶

12 ¶ And Moses sent to ^lcall Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up ^mout of a land that floweth with milk and honey to kill us in the wilderness, except thou ⁿmake thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover, thou hast not brought us ^ointo a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou put out⁷ the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was ^pvery wroth,⁸ and said unto the LORD, ^qRespect not thou their offering:⁹ I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.¹

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, Be thou and all thy company ^rbefore the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow:

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

20 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, 21 Separate^u yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them ^vin a moment.

22 And ^wthey fell upon their faces, and said, O God, the God of the ^xspirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, ^yGet you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.³

25 And Moses rose up, and went ^zunto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, ^{aa}Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side:

thus attempted to thrust him from his office of priest and king over the people of God, in order that I might usurp his place! How often have I refused to come at his call, and offered strange incense before him?

How often, the moment in which I had witnessed the awful justice of Heaven, and obtained a distinguished deliverance, have I returned to my former iniquities! And remarkably is it of the Lord's mercies that I am not consumed! not swallowed up alive into hell by an opening earth! not burned with fire from heaven! But here let me admire the wonderful zeal and love of my great High-priest, when he ran from his throne of glory,

COLUMNS OF THE TEMPLE SERAPEUM, PUTEOLI—A TEMPLE BUILT OF MARBLE TAKEN FROM THE COUNTRY IN WHICH MOSES GREW UP. [NUMBERS, xvi.]—This picture of the temple of Serapeum, at Puteoli, standing near the place where St. Paul landed upon his first missionary journey to Italy, is placed in connection with the name of Moses in this chapter because it was a temple built in honor of an Egyptian god. Plutarch asserts that Serapis was Osiris after he had passed into the subterranean world. As if to complete the idea of a temple to an Egyptian deity the Corinthian pillars found in this marble structure are from Africa. This temple consisted of a square court enclosed by forty-eight marble and granite columns with forty-three small chambers adjoining. The portico rested on six Corinthian columns, three of which remain. In the center of the court stood a circular temple surrounded by sixteen marble pillars. By four flights of steps the interior was approached where statues of Serapis, now in the museum at Naples, were found.

and Dathan and Abiram came out, and ^dstood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do ^aall these works;⁴ (for I have not done them ^fof mine own mind;)

29 If these men die the common death⁵ of all men, or if they be ^gvisited after the visitation of all men, then the LORD hath not sent me:

30 But if the LORD ^hmake a new thing,⁶ and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit, then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that ⁱappertained ^kunto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them ^lfled at the cry of them:⁸ for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there ^mcame out a fire⁹ from the LORD, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.¹

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are ⁿhallowed.

38 The censers of these ^osinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar; for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be ^pa sign unto the children of Israel.²

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar:

40 To be ^qa memorial unto the children of Israel, that no ^rstranger,³ which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD, that he be not as Korah, and as his company; as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

^t The infatuation and waywardness of this generation of the Israelites are astonishing. Some have supposed that they imagined Moses and Aaron to have used some secret arts for the destruction of the rebels, and they speak of them as the people of the Lord, as if their death had not been a judgment from God. It is more probable, however, that the ground of their charge was a belief that Moses and Aaron might, by their prayers, have prevented their awful punishment.—C.

^{aa} Of the precise nature of the plague we are not informed. It may have been in the form of a sweeping epidemic—such as the disease commonly called Indian cholera—which is still seen to select, as it were, particular localities; and to be restrained by Providence at particular boundaries; or it may have been inflicted by a destructive wind, whose ravages are directed and confined in particular currents.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, ^hBehold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

13 Whosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 The charge of the priests and Levites. 8 The priests' portion. 21 The Levites' portion. 25 The heave-offering to the priests out of the Levites' portion.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, Thou, and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall ^abear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou, and thy sons with thee, shall bear the iniquity¹ of your priesthood.

2 And thy ^bbrethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee, and minister unto thee: but thou, and thy sons with thee, shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle; ^conly they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they nor ye also die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: and a ^dstranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And ^eye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar; that there be no^f wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

² Heb. a rod for one prince, a rod for one prince.

⁵ Never was the evidence of a miracle more complete. (1) A dead rod not only buds, but blossoms, and bears fruit, at once. (2) The princes examined all, and each took his own rod. (3) They were rebels that examined, and ambitious of the honour to be conferred on Aaron by this decision. (4) Aaron's rod was publicly deposited as an evidence of the fact recorded against the rebels. (5) They acquiesced in the evidence, and never murmured upon this head again.—Note. When infidelity denies miracles, it must deny them either upon a theory that asserts the impossibility of a miracle, or the insufficiency of the evidence. But such a theory is unphilosophical, being a mere assumption without proof; and if the evidence for this miracle be insufficient, then is there no sufficient evidence for any historical fact. Into this conclusion, no doubt, infidelity is driven; and then it is madness, and reasoning with it is vain.—C.

Aaron was among them,' there were in all thirteen rods. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is very desirable to prevent all disputes among the people of God; but often very difficult to extinguish some men's pretensions to what was never theirs. Abundant is the grace of God, who will even work miracles to prevent the sin and ruin of such as have rebelled against him: and what a mercy is it when a minister's call to his office is manifested by his success therein; and if sinners, even at the last, be brought to repentance! Nothing, surely, but a remarkable bestowal of gracious influence will effectually stop all murmurings against the dispensations of God, and bring sinners to submit to them. But in this budding rod let me not only behold the fruitfulness of the Aaronic priesthood, in its usefulness to the people, and the certain succession of priests while the ceremonial period continued, with the speedy justice which overtook the invaders thereof: but let me chiefly remark the eternal, the sole high-priesthood of our Lord Jesus, manifested by the blessed effects of the gospel rod of his strength in the conversion, sanctification, and comfort of sinful men.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the "wave-breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 All "the heave-offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: it is a "covenant of salt⁶ for ever before the LORD unto thee, and to thy seed with thee.

P.—Salt was absolutely required in every offering, Le. 2. 13, and from its power of preserving dead flesh from putrefaction, so that it might be offered 'of a sweet savour' to the Lord, it became an impressive emblem of the incorruptibility of God's covenant, and the perpetuity of man's obligation. This emblematical use of salt seems to have passed by tradition into the manners of the Arabs, and some other oriental nations—with any of whom, should even an enemy have eaten salt, the person with whom he has so eaten is bound to become, for the occasion, his friend and protector.—C.

besides the performance of all duties and service within the tabernacle, whether in the holy or the most holy place. No Levite could enter the tabernacle on pain of death. In most cases 'the veil' means the curtain which separated the holy from the 'holy of holies'; here, however, it is taken for the outer veil or door of the tabernacle. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The ministerial work is necessary and important; and the greatest care and diligence is necessary to render a person faithful in it. He must not only put away sin from himself, but take all care to prevent it in others. And extensive is the account that must be given to God, not only for himself, but for others under his care. How needful then is it that all in their stations, particularly parents, masters, and magistrates, should exert themselves to render the ministry comfortable and successful! God will have his servants decently provided for in the church, and in the heavenly state; nor will ever a godly people fail to make a liberal provision for a gospel ministry. But base are the minds of those ministers who, having a competency, entangle themselves with the affairs of this life, or desire to excuse themselves from being charitable out of what God hath brought to their hand! And may I not also, in all this, discern the extensive charge, faithful labours, and glorious rewards of my Redeemer; and his improvement of all to his Father's honour and his people's good!

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—Behold how polluted are men, dead in trespasses and sins—much more abominable than the beasts that perish! To carnal reasoning, some of God's ordinances appear absurd. How strange is it to make ashes, mingled with water, the mean of purification from the deepest defilement! But it is infinitely dangerous to condemn the least of his institutions. These ceremonies are indeed insufficient to take away sin; for the most remarkable of them for atonement or purification spread the defilement! But the meaning here is concerning Christ and his church. Being apprehended by the chief priests and elders of Israel, slain without the camp, burned in the furnace of his Father's love; and his blood, his life, offered to God for the completion of his justice: the virtue of his death, connected with the clean water, the pure influences of his Spirit, doth, in all generations, purge his people's consciences, and all their concerns, from dead works to serve the living God. Let it then be the care of my soul to begin, continue, and end my life, with a believing applica-

MOUNT OF OLIVES, FROM THE TEMPLE PLATEAU—A VIEW CHRIST WITNESSED MANY TIMES. [NUMBERS, xix: 3.]—"And ye shall give her unto Eleazer the priest, that he may bring her forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face." The bodies of those animals offered for the sin of the congregation were burnt outside the camp, teaching that sin had no proper place in the city of God. In accordance with this view our Lord suffered without the gate. "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth unto Him without the camp bearing His reproach." Above is a picture of the Mount of Olives from the Temple Plateau in Jerusalem. Upon the spot where this picture was taken the rites and ceremonies were perfected of which Jesus Christ was the living fulfillment.

ward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.²

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place; and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation:³ it is a purification for sin.⁴

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

11 ¶ He that toucheth the dead body of any man⁵ shall be unclean seven days.⁶

12 He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent; All that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days:

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And for an unclean person they shall take of the ashes⁷ of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and running⁸ water⁹ shall be put thereto in a vessel;

18 And a clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

19 And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day; and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut

2 The heifer was not brought to Aaron the high-priest, but to Eleazar his son, for the high-priest must not render himself unclean, Le. 21.10-12. In this distinction Aaron was the emblem of our High-priest Jesus; while Eleazar represents those who, like Paul, acknowledging themselves to be 'chief of sinners,' 1 Ti. 1.15, yet having, like him, 'obtained mercy,' 1 Ti. 1.13, are commissioned to lead fellow-sinners to the 'blood of sprinkling,' and the 'washing of regeneration,' Tit. 3.5-C.

3 Literally, 'water of impurity.' Because it cleansed those that were impure it was considered as itself contracting impurity. All the great sacrifices which were offered for sin, though they purified those for whom they were made, became themselves impure. The sins of those that offered them were laid upon them. In all this they were typical of him who was made sin for us, though he knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God by him. —I.

1 The diary or regular narrative of the acts and travels of the Israelites is here taken up again after an interval of thirty-eight years, and taken up on the same spot where it had been dropped. A continuous history is given from this time till they entered Canaan. This second visit to Kadesh appears to have been prolonged like the first. It was signalized also by some solemn incidents. The first was the death of Miriam. The next was a murmuring of the people because the supply of water failed. The sacred spring could not meet the wants of such a multitude, especially as the flocks and herds were now assembled at it. A second time God gave them water by a miracle.—P.

3 It is said in ver. 12 that Moses did not believe God fully in this instance. The nature of his sin, and the manner in which incredulity manifested itself, are not very clearly shown; but probably they may be indicated in the last clause of ver. 10. It is plain that Moses was in a state of great excitement. His customary meekness had deserted him. He spoke to the people in passionate language:—'Hear now, ye rebels.' The words which follow ought to be thus translated:—'Can we fetch you water out of the rock? Have I power to do this? There is want of faith here. Then he acted passionately, striking the rock twice, instead of merely speaking to it, as if physical force would be required to bring the water.—P.

off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean.

CHAPTER XX.

1 The children of Israel come to Zin, where Miriam dieth. 2 They murmur for want of water. 7 Moses smiting the rock bringeth forth water. 12 God is displeased with Moses and Aaron at Meribah. 14 Moses at Kadesh desireth a passage through Edom, which is denied him. 22 At Mount Hor Aaron resigneth his place to Eleazar, and dieth.

THEN came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh; and Miriam died there, and was buried there.¹

2 ¶ And there was no water for the congregation: and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

3 And the people chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died when our brethren died before the LORD!

4 And why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle² should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they fell upon their faces: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock; and he said unto them, Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?³

tion thereof. It is death, it is despair, if I neglect it. Having fellowship with him in his resurrection, by justification and regeneration, I shall, in due time, enter on his eternal Sabbath, without spot, or wrinkle or any such thing.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 1. This was in the first month of the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt, comp. ch. 33.38; ver. 28 of this chapter, and De. 1.3. The intermediate thirty-seven years Moses passes over in silence. The reason of this silence may be collected thus:—Moses wrote, not for curiosity, that he might satisfy it; nor for national vanity, that he might flatter it: but for God, that he might glorify him; and for man, that he might instruct him. Moses wrote, as the historian of providence and redemption: by the one to show how the world is governed, how sin is restrained, overruled, and punished; by the other,

11 And Moses ^mlifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water^m came out abundantly; and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye ^obelieved me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye ^rshall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 This^a is the water of Meribah;⁴ because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was ^rsanctified in them.

14 ¶ And Moses ^ssent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us;

15 How ^tour fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And ^when we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt; and, behold, we are in ^aKadesh,⁵ a city in the uttermost of thy border.

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, ^rthrough thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells; we will go by the king's high-way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

⁵ Kadesh presents one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Mosaic itinerary. Maj. and commentators generally agree that Kadesh-barnea and Kadesh are two distinct and distant places. Kadesh-barnea they place on the frontier of Palestine, about midway between the southern extremity of the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean; and Kadesh, where Miriam died, in the mountains of Edom, about midway between Ezion-gaber on the Red and Zoar on the Dead Sea.

This point of geography, it must be observed, is altogether conjectural, there being no certain landmarks nor continuous historical records, as in other instances, by which the locality can be determined. A high probability, however, is derived from ch. 33. 36, where it is said, 'They removed from Ezion-gaber (which is in the Elanitic Gulf of the Red Sea) and pitched in the wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh,' and 'removed from Kadesh and pitched in Mount Hor.' Now this Kadesh is evidently in the direct or most convenient road to Mount Hor, but the Kadesh-barnea of the ordinary scriptural maps lies far to the north-west. Again, we find the Israelites, when the spies returned from Canaan, encamped in Kadesh, ch. 13. 26, and from De. 1. 19, 22-24 we find this Kadesh identified with Kadesh-barnea. Upon the whole, therefore, we are induced to conclude that Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea are two names, not for one spot or town, but for one extensive district, and that, according to Eusebius, it was in the neighbourhood of Mount Hor, near Petra, the capital of Arabia Petrea, and where the tomb of Miriam was still pointed out in his time.—C.

⁶ Edom had a conventional but not a moral right to refuse the passage. The conventional right was founded on will and power—the moral right on kindness and mercy—the one was of man, the other of God, and therefore should have predominated. But even a moral right is not always to be enforced: so Israel 'turned aside,' but neither from fear nor weakness, but at the commandment of God, De. 2. 4, 5, and in the exercise of that charity that 'seeketh not her own,' but 'suffereth long and is kind,' 1 Co. 13. 4, 5.—C.

^z We will go by the high-way; and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only (without doing any thing else) go through on my feet.

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through.

^a And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel ^turned away from him.⁶

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, 24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah.

25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that how mercy is exhibited, sin pardoned, and holiness established. C.]

Ver. 12. [The sin of Moses and Aaron is recorded, but not particularized, unless in so far as it may be inferred from the narrative. Amongst the internal evidences of the divine mission of Moses, we must rank the unparalleled candour with which he records his sin and his punishment. No hypocrite, imposing upon others—no enthusiast, imposing upon himself—has ever recorded or admitted his own errors. The deceiving hypocrite cannot afford to let in the light. The self-deceived enthusiast has not discovered his own darkness. The sin of Moses seems to have consisted, (1) In angrily and provokingly calling the people 'rebels.' (2) In going beyond the divine command, ver. 8, merely to 'speak unto the rock,' and smiting it twice, either in anger or unbelief, or both. (3) In strange and unaccountable unbelief in the promise of God, of which he had had so many trials. (4) In the expression, 'must we fetch water?' he seems to attribute the miracle to himself and Aaron, rather than to God. Lord! what is man! Moses thy servant, meekest of men, is chafed into unseasonable anger, and he that talked with thee face to face has fallen under thy deserved displeasure! 'Let us fear therefore, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of us should seem to come short of it,' He. 4. 1. C.]

Ver. 16. [Kadesh, the 'holy' place or city, was originally called En-Mishpat, 'the fountain of judgment.' It is described as being in the 'Wilderness of Paran,' and also in the 'Wilderness of Zin.' Paran was the general name of a large region; Zin the specific name of a section of it. There is no trustworthy evidence to show that Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea were different. They were different names for the same place. The site of Kadesh is now marked by the fountain of Weibeh, at the foot of the hills on the eastern side of the great valley of Arabah, opposite the highest peaks of Edom. P.]

Ver. 21. [The Israelites were prevented for some reason from entering Canaan from the south, and were therefore compelled to pass along the eastern side of the Dead Sea, and cross the Jordan. The territory of the Edomites lay between the camp at Kadesh and the east bank of the Jordan. If not permitted to pass through Edom, a long, dreary, and dangerous journey must be undertaken through the desert of Arabia. Hence the message to the King of Edom, and the fair and urgent request for permission to pass through his land. When refused they were obliged to turn due south so as to sweep round the southern border of Edom. P.]

Ver. 23. [Mount Hor was within Edom. The camp of the Israelites was stationed doubtless in the great valley, at the western base of the range of which Hor is one of the peaks. The traditional tomb of Aaron still exists on the rocky summit of Mount Hor. It is a rock-hewn cave, surmounted by a small domed building. On the west it looks down into the Arabah where the encampment lay; on the east it looks into the wild and strange ravine and ruins of Petra. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Much of our time is spent as a tale that is told, passed away in God's wrath, without anything worth remarking. And death at length makes quick and repeated inroads in families which have been long forborne. Miriam, Aaron, and Moses now die all in one year. And as it was with them, so God often writes indignation upon the death of his own people, who are saved in the Lord their God: for in the chastisement of his choicest saints he is severely strict, as, indeed, their sins dishonour him in a distinguished manner. Children readily imitate their parents in their wickedness. Bad customs and tempers cleave close to men, and show themselves whenever an occasión presents itself: and those are often ready to wish for death who are very unfit for it. Men's principal friends are often treated the worst; but the mercy and power of God are exerted for the relief of sinful rebels against him. Yet, alas! how prone are the best of men to unbelief under long or repeated trials, and to passion under great provocations! and often reproaches, just in their matter, may be very sinful in their manner. How lasting are quarrels between families and nations! and how inveterate the hatred of Edomites of the world against the church and people of God! little of earthly comforts can we hope for in our way to the Canaan above! but when believers look most beautiful on the borders of the grave, and when faith disarms death of all its terrors—when they depart deliberately and cheerfully into the joy of our Lord—how comely and how comfortable! And it is a peculiar joy to dying ministers to see the cause of God transmitted into the hands of zealous and faithful successors. But let me not bid adieu to Aaron, the saint of God, till I behold in him, as in a figure, Jesus, the great High-priest of my profession! Seasonable and divinely solemn was his call to his work! with an unmeasurable unction of the Holy Ghost, and perfect purity of nature, was he prepared for it. By his miracles; his destruction of his Jewish and Gentile opposers; by the marvellous influence of the gospel rod of his strength, is his office confirmed and ratified of God! He delivers all believers from spiritual slavery; justifies and sanctifies them; leads them up through this wilderness world; and he can well speak to their respective cases and doubts. He is our sole High-priest, and the spiritual Father of all such as are made priests unto God: and with amazing holiness, courage, labour, patience, and pity he executes his work. At the expense of his life he averted the plague of infinite justice from his unreasonable abusers: and having finished his work of g This seems inconsistent with Jos. 12. 14, in which the destruction of Arad is ascribed to Joshua at a subsequent period; and also with Jos. 23. 5, where the work of 'driving out' the Canaanites is declared to be still incomplete. There is, however, no contradiction. In ch. xii. Joshua merely recapitulates what had been done, without any reference to time; and by the Canaanites, in the text, is meant not the entire nation, but the 'people of Arad and its cities, called in ver. 2 'this people.'—C.

l The kingdom of Sihon extended along the mountain range and plateau east of the Jordan, from the river Arnon on the south to the Jabbok on the north. It thus intervened between the place where the Israelites were now encamped and the river Jordan. Moses therefore was compelled either to obtain by diplomacy or to force a passage through it. The region now occupied by the Amorites had formerly belonged to the Moabites; but the latter were driven out by Sihon.—P.

12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in the ^qvalley of Zared.⁸

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for ^rArnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

obedience, he publicly and willingly, upon Mount Calvary, resigned himself unto death, leaving his robes of finished righteousness to all who believe.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 1. The word translated 'spies' is in the Syriac and other ancient versions rendered 'places.' The Septuagint and other authorities consider it a proper name, and render it 'the way of Atharim.' There seems, however, no good reason for departing from our English version. For if, contrary to the ordinary opinion of geographers, it be incorrect—an opinion, be it observed, of no more than conjectural authority—and if Kadesh and Kadesh-barnea be but two names for one place, see note ch. xx., then Israel, now at Kadesh, would naturally enter Canaan 'by the way of the spies.' C.—When the people were encamped at Kadesh it would seem that the warlike inhabitants of the Negeb and southern Canaan had established an army of observation in the mountains near them, prepared to defend the passes, and to make an attack on any favourable opportunity. The opportunity offered when the Israelites turned southward. Then the enemy attacked them in the rear, and took some prisoners. But they paid dearly for a temporary advantage. P.]

Ver. 5. [The line of march from Mount Hor was down the great valley to Ezion-gaber at the northern end of the Gulf of Akabah; then eastward across the mountain ridge to the plateau of Arabia. Here they encountered their greatest difficulties. The plateau is destitute of verdure and water. It is a dreary undulating expanse, covered with flints and debris of limestone, exposed to the parching heat of an unclouded sun. The Israelites traversed it at the very worst season, about the end of August. P.]

Ver. 9. [It signifies such a pole as was the banner-staff of the tribes, to which they were accustomed to look in decamping and marching.—He lived. The sending of the serpents was an acknowledged judgment, the cure an evident miracle. There seems no good reason for denying the serpent to be a type of Christ, Jn. 3. 14, on the alleged ground of its being a name of Satan. Christ was made sin and a curse for us, 2 Co. 5. 21; Ga. 3. 13, and appeared, not a sinner, yet in the very 'likeness of sinful flesh,' Ro. 8. 3. The sight of this serpent healed—so, says our Lord, 'Look unto me, and be ye saved,' Is. 45. 22; He. 12. 2. C.]

Ver. 10. [It ought to be observed that only a very few of the stations are here mentioned. A pretty full list is given in Nu. xxiii. On reaching Oboth the worst of the journey was passed: they were on the borders of the rich pasture-land of Moab, east of the Dead Sea. P.]

Ver. 14. [Book or narrative. There is no necessity for translating it book, and then conjecturing whether the passage be a quotation from a Moabitish poem, or Mosaic book of directions to Joshua, and now lost.—Wars of the Lord, that is, wars directed by his providence and word, for punishment of wicked nations.—Red Sea, or as some think 'at Suph,' which they suppose the name of a place in the neighbourhood. Does it not more likely mean the Red Sea as in the text, and particularize it as the place where the wars of the Lord began, and closing with Pisgah, from which Moses viewed the full extent of the promised land? C.]

Ver. 16, 18. [They went is supplied by the translators. The correctness of the insertion is questionable, as the passage seems rather to commemorate the progress of the wars of the Lord than the journeys of Israel. The words, 'by direction of the lawgiver, with their staves,' are rendered by some high authorities, 'by a decree upon their borders.' The authorized version is, however, admitted to be literal; and the mention of staves perfectly intelligible, as intimating the providential ease with which the work of digging was accomplished, and abundance of water obtained. C.—Ver. 18. This spirited ode was sung by the people, and appears to have been inspired by some signal act of divine power and mercy on the banks of the Arnon.

MOSQUE OF OMAR AND JEWISH QUARTER—WHERE CHRIST DROVE THE MONEY CHANGERS FROM THE TEMPLE. [NUMBERS, xxi:8.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that everyone that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live." The Mosque of Omar now stands upon the site of the ancient Temple. The Temple summed up in itself all the meaning of the tabernacle. Jesus Christ, who taught in the Temple and drove the money-changers from the Temple, and claimed it as His Father's house, summed up in Himself all the meaning of the tabernacle and the Temple, and was the full living expression of the entire process of type and rite and shadow and sacrifice which preceded Him as so many means of training, and object lessons in the history of the Jewish race.

23 And^e Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border; but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And^f Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages^g thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.^h

27 Wherefore they that speak inⁱ 'proverbs² say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

28 For there is a^j fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon: it hath consumed Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

t Bashan lay north of Gilead. It extended from the river Hieromax on the south to the territory of Damascus on the north, and from the Jordan valley on the west to the Arabian desert on the east. The greater part of it is flat table-land, of extraordinary fertility, and celebrated for the richness of its pastures. Edrei, one of its capital cities, stood near the centre of the kingdom, on a rocky promontory which shoots out from the south-west corner of the wild and rugged province of Argob. Its ruins are from two to three miles in circuit, and still bear the ancient name. Og, King of Bashan, was the last remaining in that region of the giant Rephaim, who were the aboriginal inhabitants of Bashan.—P.

hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

35 So they^o smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

CHAPTER XXII.

2 Balak's first message for Balaam is refused. 15 His second message obtaineth him. 22 An angel would have slain him, if his ass had not saved him. 36 Balak entertaineth him.

AND the children of Israel^a set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab,¹ on this side Jordan² by Jericho.

2 ¶ And Balak the son of Zippor saw^b all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

3 And Moab was sore^c afraid of the people, because they were many; and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

4 And Moab said unto the^d elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all^e that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He^f sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor, to^g Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his^h people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, theyⁱ cover the face^j of the earth, and they abide over against me.

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, ^kcurse me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.⁵

7 And the elders of Moab, and the elders of Midian, departed with the^l rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here this^m night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me. And the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

Perhaps it was the discovery of a copious spring by which the thirst of the fainting multitudes was assuaged. The Hebrew words may be thus rendered:—

'Spring up, O well! Sing ye unto it!
The well, the princes digged it.
The nobles of the people excavated it;
With the sceptre—with their staves.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Continued courage and dependence upon God are highly necessary, that at last we may prove more than conquerors. Religious vows, when properly conducted, are likewise sometimes profitable. But upon what inconsiderable temptations, prevailing lusts, formerly punished, again break forth! Often the long continuance of God's mercies with men render them cheap in their eyes. But let us remember it is hazardous to offend God, who hath so many instruments of justice at his beck; and that sufferings for sin should lead us to repentance for it; especially since God is so ready to forgive the penitent, and to turn away his wrath. But, oh unspeakable mercy! as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so Jesus Christ, the Son of man, was lifted up on the cross, and is now lifted up in the gospel, for the cure of all those deadly maladies contracted from the seduction of the old serpent the devil—when we look to him by faith!

In all our wanderings on earth God can grant us wells of comfort, and fill our mouths with his praise: he can bestow noted victories in favour of his people, even on this side death. And what easy work it is to conquer the strongest enemies when God's time is come, and he helps us by his grace! Yet in these victories let me observe, that they who intend mischief to others, often fall into the pit which themselves have digged; that worldly possessions are changeable and frail; and especially that ill-gotten gain is seldom long enjoyed.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 4. Midian, in which Jethro the father-in-law of Moses was priest, was situated near Horeb. How then do the Moabites, who lay at a great distance to the north, enter into consultation with the Midianitish elders? Some think there were two Midians, and it may have been so. But as Moses gives no note of distinction, this opinion does not seem probable. Those who reflect in how many parts of the world the British people are settled, will easily comprehend how the Midianites may have had possessions both at Horeb and in Moab. Nor are we to be surprised at the special consultation with the Midianites. The history of Jethro sufficiently testifies his political sagacity, Ex. 18. 10-12, 14, 29, and it is by no means improbable that his kindred in Moab may have been distinguished by similar qualities. C.— See note on Ex. 2. 15. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Relations by blood are sometimes the bitterest enemies to one another, and seek to ruin those who might expect kindness from them. The most awful things in religion, imprecations of divine wrath not excepted, are often transformed into ordinances of the devil: and sinners, with great expense and toil, court the assistance of hell, when they might have freely from heaven whatever they need. Yea, great men, who scorn to worship their Maker, frequently cringe as slaves to the very slaves of the devil! What inestimable value do carnal men put upon earthly riches and honours, as if these were sufficient to determine to anything! And there is great need to realize eternal things, that nothing temporal may be able to decoy us. But religion is sometimes put on as a cloak by those who have no real regard to it. And the most presumptuous claims to God, and pretence of high regard to his will, are used when they would gladly counteract it. Wicked messengers indeed rarely report the whole of the truth as it really is: and the Lord often apparently indulges dissemblers in their sinner may be in their evil work, or liberally kind to such as they hope will assist them in it.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 23. That ignorance and superstition may coexist with the profession though not with the light and power of true religion, is a well-known and melancholy fact. Ignorance and superstition are always prone to seek and to expect to accomplish their ends by some mysterious charm of their own invention, or derived from dark tradition. Such seems the state of Balaam, professing, and to a certain extent uttering and obeying, the truth, but ignorantly and superstitiously superadding a belief in enchantments, and seeking by repeated experiments to render them efficacious against Israel. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — What a costly parade in religion will the worst of men make, in order to obtain their wicked ends? But fearful is their disappointment who think to make God their debtor by their services. All instruments are in his hands, and he can indulge to hypocrites the most amazing manifestations of himself, when it is for the advantage of his people; or make use of the worst of instruments to carry on his most excellent works. But beautiful is the appearance of God's church, when everything therein is regulated according to his prescriptions. Happy and safe are they who have the gracious, the almighty, and faithful God for their protector and portion: though troops overcome them, they shall overcome at the last; and be more than conquerors, through him that loved them: he will make their enemies to acknowledge the sovereign dominion, unchanging care, and almighty power of their God, till they who hate the life will wish to die the death of the righteous. But, alas! how obstinate and unwearied are sinners in their wicked courses, and in 26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, 'Told not I thee, saying, All that the LORD speaketh, that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, Come, I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence.

¹ Balaam, leaving divinations, prophesieth the happiness of Israel.
¹⁰ Balak in anger dismisseth him. ¹⁵ He prophesieth of the Star of Jacob, and the destruction of some nations.

running from one refuge of lies to another! And it is always necessary for the saints to watch and pray, since, unknown to them, their enemies may be adding one attempt after another to destroy them.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 1. He would not again, in his magical and superstitious manner, consult God, but resolved to curse them without asking God's leave. —[Superstitious confidence in the repetition of a few words was common amongst the heathen, and constituted the principal part of their prayers, Mat. 6, 7.

The Jews, in times of their ignorance, entertained, and many of them do still entertain, a similar belief; hence they have as ignorantly, as superstitiously and falsely, accused our Lord of stealing the Tetragrammaton, or mysterious name of JEHOVAH, out of the temple, and working his miracles by its repetition. Many have seen, even in professing Christian countries, a few words from the New Testament, or from some vain tradition, written on parchment or paper, and hung around the neck or on the shoulders for the cure of diseases. Such superstitious belief seems to have influenced Balaam, until, having now made three experiments by sacrifice, he is compelled to give up the vain attempt at enchantment. C.]

Ver. 3, 4. Balaam, whose power to curse was so much relied on, whose will was so much inclined to it, and whose knowledge and manifestations of God are so remarkable, must and will confirm it, that Israel shall be blessed.

Ver. 6-8. These predictions not only respect the glorious state of the Jews under Joshua, David, Solomon, Asa, Jehoshaphat, &c.; but also represent the [NUMBERS, xxiv : 17.]—Balaam's Prophecy of Christ: "I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel." Just a little way from Nazareth as you pass toward Cana of Galilee, you reach a little village where there is a fountain and an ancient sarcophagus. These sarcophagi, found in many places in Palestine, are said to date from the time of the Romans. This picture is given here because it illustrates a scene in the neighborhood of Nazareth, often passed over by Christ when he was a boy. It illustrates the prophecy by Balaam which refers to Christ. This is a characteristic scene. We have the thorny cactus, the olive trees, the donkey and the little Arab boy.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

extent, flourishing state, remarkable increase, and marvellous power of the spiritual kingdom of Christ.

—[Ver. 6. Trees of lign-aloes, ahalim (Aquilaria Agallochum of botanists), is a tree which grows in Northern India and Central Asia. Its wood is very fragrant, and was much prized on this account by the ancients. It is entirely different from aloes. An essence is obtained by pounding the wood, and then pouring boiling water upon it, when the essence floats. P.—Ver. 7. 'Waters shall flow out of his two buckets; and his posterity shall be by many waters.' The meaning is—that Israel is likened to a man carrying two pails of water, after the eastern mode, upon his shoulders; and out of these water, the emblem and source of all richness, flows abundantly. His posterity too would grow up by many waters—in the most fertile regions of the earth. P.—Agag was king of the Amalekites, 1 Sa. 15. 8, and it is probable it was the hereditary title of the monarchs of this people. For Israel to be higher than Agag, is to have power over the most inveterate of their enemies.—Ver. 8. The animal meant is uncertain—the rhinoceros, such as was seen by Campbell in South Africa, the head of which is lodged in the museum of the Missionary Society of London, seems to answer best both to the name unicorn, and to mighty strength: which is described as his distinguishing attribute. C.]

Ver. 17-19. These predictions had their accomplishment in the victories and conquests of the Hebrews over the Moabites or Edomites, and neighbouring nations, in the days of Ehud, Gideon, and Jephthah, Ju. iii. vii. xi.; David, 2 Sa. v. viii. x.; Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch. xx.; 2 Ki. iii.; Uzziah, 2 Ch. xxvi.; and after the Chaldean captivity, in the time of Hyrcanus and Alexander Jannæus; and perhaps may have a further literal accomplishment when the Jews take possession of Canaan. They may also relate to the conquests of the heathen nations to Jesus Christ under the New Testament.

Ver. 20. The Amalekites were once one of the principal nations around Canaan, and were the first who attacked the Israelites; and therefore gradually destroyed by them in the days of Gideon, Saul, David,

Hezekiah, and Esther.—[This statement has reference to antiquity and power. The Amalekites were a very ancient race, and they were among the most powerful of the clans of Western Asia. They have long disappeared, and not a trace of them remains. P.]

Ver. 21. Perhaps these Kenites were not the posterity of Jethro, but rather an Arabian tribe who were neighbours to the Amalekites, and were at last carried captive by the Assyrians, about the time of Hezekiah or Manasseh.

Ver. 24. This was fulfilled when first the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, invaded Asia, subdued Assyria, Canaan, and the places about; and when their respective empires were, not long after, brought to ruin: the Greeks about one hundred years before Christ, and the Romans about A.D. 476; and will be more fully accomplished in the ruin of the Popish and Turkish empires.—[Eber is generally supposed to have given name to the Hebrews, though some eminent authorities assign a different etymology. It appears from Ge. 10. 25 that he had two distinguished sons, who became the heads of many distinguished tribes; for 'he also' Boothroyd reads 'they also,' viz. the Assyrian land force, and the naval power of Chittim, shall perish for ever. The Assyrian monarchy has already perished, so likewise have the Greek and Roman powers by which Eber (the Jews) was 'afflicted.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Wretched indeed are those who are, by their conscience, excluded from the carnal enjoyments of this world, and notwithstanding live in these lusts which will exclude them from heaven: for great light may abound in the head, when there is nothing but naughtiness in the heart. Often sinners are proud of those gifts which God bestows upon them for the benefit of his people: and their knowledge, being cursed, is an effectual hindrance of true wisdom. But numerous and large are the blessings which God bestows upon faithful people! they may be an eye-sore to Satan and his agents; yet God lays an effectual restraint upon their most inveterate enemies; and he will at last convince his opposers of the emptiness and folly of all their devilish devices for thwarting his pur-

the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, (while he was zealous for my sake among them,) that I consumed not the children of Israel in my jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

13 And he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood; because he was zealous for his God, and made an atonement for the children of Israel.⁶

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri the son of Salu, a prince of a chief house⁷ among the Simeonites.⁸

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, poses, or annoying his people. What infinite knowledge is there in God! he perfectly discerns every circumstance of nations and persons, ages unnumbered, before there is the smallest appearance thereof. He sees all changes to the end, all the destruction and havoc which sin will make in the world of one nation after another. But blessed be the Lord, who hath raised up a Horn of salvation in the house of his servant Jacob;—a Star to enlighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of his people Israel;—a Captain of salvation to go forth conquering and to conquer. But let me not dismiss this eastern sorcerer Balaam, with his high pretences to religion, his glorious speeches, and his noted intimacy with God, without seriously inquiring, What am I—what have I—what do I—what desire I—more than he?

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—If the devil's agents prevail not against the church one way, they will try another. But let us remember, that no enchantment can hurt us but that of our own lusts; that one sin leads to another; and that few temptations are more dangerous than the lustful love of women. If once the heart be ensnared, the miserable slave of lust and beauty may be enticed to anything sinful. Nothing more endangers the soul's final apostasy from God than yielding to the solicitation of fleshly lusts: nor doth anything more effectually secure the justice of God and despair of hell. Yea, general distempers and loathsome diseases are the fruit of general and loathsome iniquities: and such sinners quickly become impudent in their crimes. It is necessary therefore to punish sins with great impartiality, as the higher men are the more aggravated and hurtful is their offence. A well-timed and prudent zeal for the honour of God, in opposition to prevailing abominations, is a remarkable blessing to nations and churches. And God greatly honours and rewards such as dare to be bold and impartial in his cause for ridding a land of sin, and rescuing it from plagues. But friendship in sin quickly issues in mutual hatred and ruin; and tempters to sin are tormented with trouble. But in Phinehas may I not discern Jesus, whose zeal for his

AND it came to pass ^aafter the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,

2 Take the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, ^bfrom twenty years old and upward, throughout their fathers' house, all that are able to go to war in Israel.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them in the ^cplains of Moab, by Jordan near Jerieho, saying,

4 Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD ^dcommanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.¹

9 And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram which were ^gfamous in the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD:

10 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah,³ when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men: and they became a ^hsign.⁴

⁹ The assertion that the spirit of this Mosaic commandment is opposite to the Christian precept of 'loving our enemies,' is founded either in inexcusable inatten-tion, ignorance, or perversity. To vex a wicked man by opposing, thwarting, exposing, and disappointing him, is no breach of charity:
but an exercise of it in favour of his victims. To 'smite' the seducer of innocence, the demoralizer of youth, is so far from being contrary to love, that it is frequently a merciful exercise of it, even towards the guilty, whom it serves to arrest in his career of evil.—C.

C.—The remarkable difference of the rate of increase and decrease in the several tribes, might give occasion for much curious investigation.
The most striking points are the astonishing increase in Manasseh, and the still more astonishing decrease in Simeon.
The former, from being numerically the lowest of the tribes at the former census, is at this become the sixth; and the latter,
from being the third,
has become the lowest of all, having lost not very much less than two-thirds of its former numbers. For the increase of Manasseh it is difficult to discover any other cause than the Lord's blessing upon the house of Joseph; but as to the decrease in Simeon, it is not without reason conceived that this tribe sustained the principal loss in the matter of Baal-peor.—*Pict.

v Increase, 1700. C.

—This was a vast number to spring from one man, considering that Benjamin, who had ten sons, wanted nearly 20,000 of this number. We may here give, at one view, the results of a comparison between the census at Mount Sinai and the present. The total number was nearly the same. They were now 1320 fewer than they were then; but seven of the tribes had increased in number. Judah had increased 1900. Issachar, 9900. Zebulun, 3100. Manasseh, 20,500. Benjamin, 10,200. Dan, 1700. Asher, 11,900. The other five, however, had decreased. Reuben had decreased 2770. Simeon, 37,100. Gad, 5150. Ephraim, 8000; and Naphtali, 8000. From this comparison, Henry remarks, 1. That all the three tribes that were encamped under the standard of Judah, who was the ancestor of Christ, were increased, for his church shall be edified and multiplied. 2. That none of the tribes had increased so much as that of Manasseh, which in the former account was the smallest of all the tribes, only 22,200; while here it is one of the most considerable; and his brother Ephraim, which then was numerous, is here one of the least. Jacob had crossed hands upon their heads, and had preferred Ephraim before Manasseh, which perhaps the Ephraimites had prized themselves too much in, and had trampled upon their brethren the Manassites; but when the Lord saw that Manasseh was despised, he thus multiplied him exceedingly, for it is his glory to help the weakest, and raise up them that are cast down. —L.

Total increase, 59,200.

Total decrease, 61,020, leaving a comparative decrease of 1820. C. —The relative strength of the tribes was now very different from what it had been at the exodus. Judah still held the first place, and Dan the second; but Simeon, which originally stood third, was now last of all, having dwindled down to less than one-third of its former number. Manasseh, too, was now far more powerful than Ephraim, having risen from the lowest to the sixth place among the tribes. —P.

6 They were numbered from twenty years and upwards; therefore, adding the forty years now nearly spent in the wilderness, the oldest man in the whole Jewish nation, with the exception of Moses, Caleb, and Joshua, was under sixty years of age; and it is evident, from the dispositions of those who came up from Egypt, that few would exceed forty years. In the midst of the judgments thus executed upon the rebels, we see the wisdom of God in removing a timid, murmuring, and dissatisfied race of pampered though oppressed slaves, Ex. 16. 3, and rearing up a generation of hardy and courageous freemen specially made free by their knowledge of the Lord, Jos. 24. 31; men accustomed to all the privations and hardships of the desert, and not one unfitted by age for encountering the toils and the dangers upon which they were about to enter. —C.

62 And those that were numbered of them were twenty and three thousand,⁵ all males from a month old and upward: for they were not numbered among the children of Israel, because there was^k no inheritance given them among the children of Israel.

63 ¶ These are they that were numbered by Moses and Eleazar the priest, who numbered the children of Israel in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho.

M EJDEL ESH-SHEMS — NEAR WHERE MOSES AND ELIAS APPEARED ON THE MOUNT. [NUMBERS, xxvii: 12-23.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel," etc. Mejdél esh-Shems is on the road from Banias to Damascus. It is a Druse village, and is at the foot of Mount Hernon, near the place where, according to tradition, Christ was transfigured when Moses and Elias appeared with Him. It is true that Moses was not permitted to cross the Jordan, but it is a striking evidence of the truth that our career does not end with death that Moses, though buried on the other side of Jordan, appears upon this side during this crisis in our Lord's life, when before His disciples He seemed to hold back the veil that separates time from eternity, and disclosed the glories of the spiritual world.

was not left a man of them, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

1 The daughters of Zelophehad sue for an inheritance. 6 The law of inheritances. 12 Moses, being told of his death, sueth for a successor. 18 Joshua is appointed to succeed him.

THEN came the daughters of ^aZelophehad, the son of Hopher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh the son of Joseph; and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah.

2 And ^bthey stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes¹ and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

3 Our^c father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD in the company of Korah; but died in his own sin,² and had no sons.

4 Why should the name of our father be done^a away³ from among his family, because he hath no son? Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

5 And Moses ^ebrought their cause before the LORD.

6 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

7 The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

8 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

9 And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren.

10 And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren.

11 And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his ^akinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel ^ba statute of judgment; as the LORD commanded Moses.⁴

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^cGet thee up into this mount Abarim,⁵ and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel.

1 They presented themselves before the highest court of judicature, consisting of Moses, the high-priest, and the heads of the congregation. It would seem that this court was held close by the tabernacle, and also, perhaps, that Moses might the more readily consult the Lord in any difficult case. It is said that in after times the Sanhedrim used to follow the tabernacle, always holding their judicial meetings in the place where the tabernacle rested. It is good to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways.

2 Rosenmüller translates the passage 'In the company of Korah who died in his own sin;' our English version seems, however, the true meaning of the passage. The daughters do not deny that their father died in the wilderness as a just punishment for his early unbelief or murmuring, but evidently intimate and plead his penitence, as he had not joined the party of Korah at a time when the opposition to Moses and Aaron, and defection from the worship of Jehovah, were on the point of becoming universal, ch. 16. 19.—C.

4 The Jewish law of inheritance provides, (1) That on the demise of the father, the land descends to the sons. (2) If there be no sons, it descends to the daughters. (3) If no daughters, the brothers of the deceased become heirs. (4) If no brethren or paternal uncles, the land passes to the grand-uncles, or brothers of his father. (5) If there be no grand-uncles, then the nearest of him succeeds. The law states nothing beyond the fifth degree, as in a nation constituted as Israel was, an heir could scarcely fail to be found within that degree.—C.

these daughters of Zelophehad let me manifest a strong faith in the promises of God, a strong desire after the better country, and a tender regard to my parents' honour; so shall my labour not be in vain in the Lord. While I observe, that it is appointed for all men once to die: that God's faithful children are often most severely chastised for their sin: but that in death believers retire to their best friends, to their unchanging and eternal rest;—while I profit by the death of others, whom I have seen depart before me in peace and comfort:—let me, with Moses, kindly accept God's warnings of my own death.—Let me manifest a deep concern for the welfare of the church after I am gone; and rejoice that Jesus liveth, and is appointed of God as her Governor, to put all true believers in possession of the promised rest.—And let me, with Joshua, cheerfully comply with God's call to the hardest work, and always act according to his inspired directions.

CHAPTER XXVIII. [Ver. 1. It is remarkable that Moses does not refer back to these commands as already given, but proceeds to deliver them as if promulgated for the first time: the reason is obvious—Moses not only means to show the things to be observed, but to exemplify God's method of teaching; which, like all other teaching, consists largely of repetition, see Jn. 14. 26. It is also worthy of remark that the book of Leviticus is generally delivered as a directory how the ordinance is to be observed; here we have a positive command that it must be observed in due season. The phrase due season renders it probable that during the journeyings in the wilderness religious ordinances had been greatly neglected; indeed there is a constant tendency, even in spiritual men, to 'weary in well-doing,' and many an admonition and promise do they require to persuade them that in due season they shall COLUMN AND STATUE OF THE VIRGIN, NAZARETH—NEAR THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY. [NUMBERS, xxviii and xxix.]—In the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth chapters of Numbers we have the round of sacrifice daily, weekly, monthly, and annually drawn out in its fullness and symmetry. The sacrifices of the Old Testament combined regularity with variety; there was some sacrifice for every day, and for every week in its seventh day, and for every month in its first day, and for every year in its seventh month. Through these and their great festivals, all the interests and events of life were embraced, showing that the whole of life was to be consecrated to God. So Christ, who summed up all this meaning in His own life, died for us that it might be possible for all to make a perfect self-surrender to God. We give, to illustrate these two chapters, the column and statue of the Virgin at Nazareth, in the city of our Lord's boyhood.

7 It is observable that there is not so much as one peace-offering ordered in all this chapter, which was a sort of sacrifice that was most for the benefit of those that brought them to the altar; but all burnt-offerings (except a few sin-offerings), which were wholly for the honour of God, and acknowledgment of his sovereign dominion over them, and of the duty they owed him. And as the sin-offerings were shadows of that great sacrifice of God's own Son, which was one day to be offered for the sins of men, out of his own infinite love to them; so the whole burnt-offerings (which were always of the most perfect creatures, the finest flour, the choicest fruits of the earth, and the best liquor) were shadows of that excellent degree of piety, which the Son of God intended to bring into the world, which would move men, out of love to God, to give themselves wholly up to him, and devote all they had, even their own lives, to his service.—Patrick.

REFLECTIONS.—Fully, yea, infinitely answerable is Jesus Christ and his fulness to the wants of every day, every week, every month, every year, every ordinance, and every case. Let me therefore spend each hour, each period of my time, in beholding him as my God—honouring, sin-pardoning, peace and comfort procuring sacrifice! let me always live on him, and to him; and bless the Lord that, these shadows being done away, he is set before us evidently as crucified in the gospel.

³ The special offering of this feast consists of only ten animals, there being but one bullock, whereas in the sacrifices directed in ch. 28.11,17,24 there were two. The reason why this number was chosen and appointed by God upon this occasion is most probably to be found in a reference to the ten plagues of Egypt, from which Israel was protected, and by the infliction of which they were delivered from bondage. ⁵ The afflicting of the soul on the tenth day, and the offering of ten animals, seems here a memorial, not merely of protection and deliverance, as in the former case, but a recognition of the ten commandments the Israelites had covenanted to observe, yet perfidiously violated, and which violation they here sacrificially acknowledge with sorrow and humiliation. —C.

⁷ In ver. 17,20,23,26,29,32, the bullocks decrease by one each day. The meaning of such sacrificial peculiarities is sometimes revealed by Moses or explained by Paul; at other times, where neither give any explanation, we must have recourse to analogy, which, to a certain limited extent, is a safe guide; and at times, though the 'veil of Moses' be taken from our face, we must yet acknowledge that we 'see as through a glass, darkly' in the present case there is no small difficulty in giving any reason for this diminution, as the Scripture is everywhere silent on the point. Still, it seems highly probable that the bullock, as the emblem of labour, Fr. 11. 4. being the animal daily subtracted from the sacrifice, might be intended to remind the offerers that every day of sacrifice to God was diminishing their amount of labour, and bringing them nearer to rest in God. Some have imagined the daily diminution in the sacrifice to shadow forth the gradual disappearance of the Jewish dispensation, but there appears neither authority nor emblematic analogy by which this conjecture can be supported; though certain of the Jewish rabbins consider it as pointing to the gradual diminution of the nations, until all shall have come under the rule of Messiah, and there shall remain no more sacrifices but those of thanksgiving, prayer, and praise.—C.

⁸ It is worthy of special remark, that in each of these feasts there is a peculiar sacrifice for the day, but to every day is invariably retained 'the continual burnt-offering.' This is a most wise and admirable appendage, and originating from a deep insight into the human heart. Religious excitement, like every other excitement, has a continual tendency to engross the heart, and to render it negligent of ordinary duties. Therefore, both before and after these august and impressive ceremonies the ordinary, the everyday business of religion is scrupulously enjoined, even to the minutest particular. —Note. The little things of religion—if we so call any parts of religion—do not set us free from 'the weightier matters;' neither do the greater things of religion supersede our attention to the little. ⁹ This is called 'the great day of the feast,' Jn. 7. 37, yet the sacrifices were fewer than upon any other of the feast-days. This might well serve to teach the Israelites not to trust to the multitude of their sacrifices for pardon, peace, or other blessings, but to the one offering for atonement, to which, since the days of Abel, the eye of faith had always been directed He. 11.4. The Jewish rabbins affirm that upon this day it was customary to draw water from the pool of Siloam, and to pour it mixed with wine upon the sacrifices. This custom is not intimated either by Moses or any of the prophets, though the rabbins attempt to deduce it from Is. 12.3. And it is not improbable that our Lord alluded to it when he cried, 'If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink;' thereby turning an unauthorized, pompous, and useless ceremony, into an occasion of calling the attention of the people to spiritual duties enjoined and the spiritual privileges promised by God.—C.

and lambs was double the number offered at the pass-over and feast of pentecost, the number of oxen was fivefold: for, instead of fourteen, there were seventy offered during the seven days. This multiplication was distributed in such a way, that instead of there being ten offered every day, there were thirteen on the first day, twelve on the second, and so on, deducting one every day, so that on the seventh day there were exactly seven offered; the arrangement being probably made for the purpose of securing the holy number seven

REFLECTIONS.—In these numerous and complex oblations, and their often-repeated occasions, I remark the insufficiency of the Jewish ceremonies. Yet I cannot but behold and admire the one oblation of the Redeemer himself, so fully completing all justice, pardoning sin, procuring peace, and securing life and comfort for every believer. In virtue and usefulness so answerable to, but in glory so infinitely transcending, them all.—But while I travel through such groups of typical feasts and oblations, let me, illuminated by gospel light, stop to behold in them the blessed new promise of grace; let me view it in its gracious origin, glorious power, wonderful construction, important parts, condition, and promise; its wise, effectual, and infinitely useful administration, and its delightful properties; as all my salvation and all my desire! Here let me contemplate Jesus in his savoury and saving names, his wonderful natures, his glorious person as God-man, his endearing excellences and qualifications, his saving offices of Mediator, Saviour, Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, and his heart-captivating relations to God and men; let me consider his infinitely diversified but necessary states of humiliation and exaltation, his delightful labours of love in undertaking for us, assuming our nature, obeying and suffering in our stead, rising from the dead, ascending to glory, appearing in the presence of God as our advocate, and returning to judge the world, to complete and carry to the highest our eternal salvation; while I admire all his fulness, natural or communicative, as lodged in him for sinful men. Let me behold the ten commandments as a broken covenant of works fulfilled, magnified, and made honourable for me, in having the Lawgiver himself its obedient subject, fulfilling at once both its precept and penalty in the highest degree, and in the most disadvantageous circumstances, amidst poverty, reproach, distress, persecution by men, temptation and harassment by devils, and under an infinite load of sins borne, will of God fixed, and pain inflicted on him.—Thus all my sins, all the sins of a lost world, were borne by the Son of God, suffered for by him, removed from him and from us in our respective justification, destroyed in us by sanctification, marvelously improved by providence for our good, and their fruits shall be finally and perfectly abolished in our glorification. Thus a great and everlasting salvation was effected for sinful men—for ME—devised in God's everlasting deep love, secured with the blood of his Son, freely offered in the gospel, powerfully applied by the Holy Ghost, and in time and eternity is enjoyed in full right of marriage, law, and sonship, and in the most delightful possession. Thus the spirituality, self-existence, infinity, eternity, unchangeableness, independence, greatness, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth of the most High, the great JEHOVAH, are vindicated from all reproach, all the injury done to them by sin is fully resented, and themselves glorified to the highest; and in consequence hereof they all appear smiling and breathing forth unbounded love and mercy to sinful men—to sinful me. Thus a redeeming Godhead, in all his persons, perfections, purposes, works, fulness, and property, is offered to, bestowed on, enjoyed, and to be for ever enjoyed, by rebellious men—by rebellious me—as my ALL and in ALL.—Let me then observe, that my whole life, whether I fast or whether I feast, whether I weep or whether I rejoice, ought to be a life of faith on the Son of God, who loved me, and thus gave himself for me; and that, while I study to have as many solemn feasts on his death as I can, I ought never, morning or evening, to neglect the daily service of God in my closet and my family.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—In order to our more perfectly obeying what the Lord requires of us by his gracious authority, it is often useful and necessary that we bind ourselves by new bonds of self-engagement: and the obligation of such engagements is solemn and awful, and therefore should be made with great deliberation, and care be taken that the

1 The Midianites are spoiled, and Balaam slain. 13 Moses is wroth with the officers for saving the women alive. 19 How the soldiers, with their captives and spoil, are to be purified. 25 The proportion whereby the prey is to be divided. 48 The voluntary oblation of the officers unto the treasury of the Lord.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,¹
2 Avenge^a the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou^b be gathered unto thy people.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and^c avenge the LORD of Midian.

4 Of every tribe a^d thousand,² throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war.

5 So there were delivered, out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and^e Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand.³

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and^f they slew all the males.

1 The frequent repetition of this or some similar form of expression, affords one of the strongest incidental evidences of the divine inspiration of the Pentateuch. Everything done by Moses is done in accordance with an express divine command; everything enjoined by him is preceded by the important introductory phrase, 'The LORD spake unto Moses, saying.' The whole record, therefore, must be inspired; or the author must have been guilty of deliberate and systematic deceit.—P.

fulfilment thereof no way interfere with any relative duty. God hates robbery for burnt-offering, and pays the strictest attention to the peace and order of families. Let therefore all my vows be well considered and important. Let them proceed from a serious consulting with Jesus Christ, as my father and husband, in solemn prayer and careful searching of his word. In all my religious concerns let me pay the strictest regard to relative duties; and having opened my mouth unto the Lord, never dare to go back again from my vows.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 2. This is one of the passages against which infidelity has uttered its fellest and fiercest assaults. We may not pollute the page, nor the reader's eye, with its foul speeches. But we may ask the infidel, Do you believe God to be the moral Lawgiver and Ruler of the world? If you deny, we cease to argue with the madness of atheism. But if God be acknowledged as the Lawgiver and Ruler, then has he not a right to enforce his own laws by appropriate penalties? Nature, as it is called—though surely nature is but another name for the will, laws, and government of God—nature has often swept away by earthquake, pestilence, or famine, her tens and hundreds of thousands; yet surely nature has not been arraigned for the deed! Why then should God be arraigned at the bar of a proud and unholy infidelity for punishing a wicked people by the hand of man? No sane man will accuse God, under the name of nature, in the one case, and none but a hopeless infidel will accuse him under his real name on the other. C.]

Ver. 5. [The muster of the army, upon this occasion, seems to be neither in proportion to the population of the tribes nor the military exigency of the case. That each tribe however comparatively weak, should be required to furnish a military contingent as numerous as the strongest, would to human wisdom seem unreasonable. But divine wisdom intends, by this apparent disproportion, to teach some great and important lessons. (1) That every man, and every community, is to furnish for God's service all that God requires, according as his providence bestows, without any relative comparison of what means others have, what sacrifices others make, or what service they render, or may be able to render, to God and his cause. (2) This equality of draught from unequal numbers is farther intended to inculcate the important lesson, that all real honour is derived from devotedness and zeal in the cause of God and his truth, and therefore it was necessary that every tribe should have an equal opportunity of exhibiting those qualities and securing those honours. See Jn. 12. 26.—Note, What an admonition does this equality of array suggest to churches! Some are few in number, and poor in worldly resources, but as God requires every one of his tribes to send its thousand to the war, so does he require each of his churches to make equal sacrifices to provide for his service, and equal exertions to bear witness to his truth. And true it is, for our encouragement, there are churches whose fewness in number, and poverty of means, have neither damped exertion nor denied success. C.]

Ver. 7. [Not all the males of the whole nation, as appears from Ju. 6. 7, but of the 'garrisons of the cities and castles,' ver. 10, by whom and their accomplices they had formerly been seduced, ver. 16, and were now opposed. And these the Lord commanded them to slay for sins, that when individualized still continue in these countries to be punished with death, and which instead of being diminished in atrocity by being nationalized, as was the case with the Canaanites and Midianites, became by their universality the more abominable in the sight of a holy God. See the horrible catalogue, Le. 18. 21-27, and the sentence of the righteous Judge, ver. 24-30. C.]

Ver. 14. [From the omission of any reference to Joshua as general, and the rebuke given indiscriminately to all the captains, it seems certain that the army had no commander-in-chief, but that each tribe had sent forth its own quota under their own leaders. This avoided all suspicion of favouritism, and removed every cause of jealousy, until circumstances required still greater concentration of counsel, and the character of Joshua as a leader had earned for him an indisputable claim to the first rank. C.]

Ver. 17. [Every male. The killing of 'every male among the little ones' has been censured by infidels as an act of cruelty unworthy the character of a merciful God. That children, however, die in infancy, infidels cannot deny, and if that death takes place by God's will, wherein does it differ from the death here inflicted

8 And they slew^g the kings of Midian, besides the rest of them that were slain, namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: ^hBalaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives,⁴ and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And they took allⁱ the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, ^mwent forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses wasⁿ wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle.⁵

15 And Moses said unto them, ^oHave ye saved all the women alive?

16 Behold, ^rthese caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of

by God's command? If it be replied, the ordinary death of children is natural. The answer is easy: what in this case is nature but the result of certain organic laws? and what are organic laws, but the result of God's will? So that we arrive, in spite of infidelity, at the point of God's will in the one case, and command in the other. If the infidel deny that death is the result of God's will, then he becomes an atheist, with whom it is generally vain to argue: for he who is mad enough to deny the being and government of a God, is certainly not sane enough to comprehend any rational argument. See Ps. 14. 1. The infidel who in this case accuses the 'God of the Jews,' accuses, at the same time, the 'God of nature,' whom infidels, in general, pretend to acknowledge and worship, and whom, therefore, even upon their own principles, they dare not openly condemn. The sentence against the males is against the perpetuation of a wicked community; the sentence against the women is in condemnation of lewdness, seduction, and idolatry. C.]

Ver. 18. [The assertion that Moses, in this verse, permitted the people to retain the 'women children' for concubines is one of the most monstrous that frontless infidelity has ever had the hardihood to pronounce. For, not to speak of other parts of the law already promulgated, as Ex. 20. 14; Le. 19. 20, the restrictions, De. 21. 11-14, will sufficiently demonstrate that the direction in the text was merely a permission to hold them as bond-women, a class who were amply protected against every form of oppression, and endowed with many privileges, for which see note on Le. 25. 46. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Short-lived is success in sinning, and at last most dearly bought. Enticers to sin therefore ought to be held as our worst enemies, and treated accordingly: especially since God takes the greatest delight in comforting and honouring those who have been singularly zealous for his cause. And it is easy for him to accomplish great exploits, whether by many or by few. Our humane tenderness, carried to an excess, often spares our most dangerous enemies and the most guilty criminals. But everything, even in war, ought to be conducted with a sacred regard to religion, strict equity, and brotherly kindness; and the whole success thankfully ascribed to God. And after 23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean; nevertheless it shall ^abe purified with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire, ye shall make go through the water.

24 And^a ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

27 And divide the prey into ^atwo parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:

⁶ The character of Balaam is most extraordinary. It is full of inconsistencies; and yet on a close and thorough examination of it we are forced to admit that it is not without parallels in the history of the church. Balaam knew God and feared him; but it was the fear of a cringing slave. He was ambitious and covetous; and he was most fertile in schemes for the purpose of hiding his covetousness, and gratifying his ambitious designs, while professing to obey and honour God. He never ventured on an open act of transgression. He had not courage for that. But he adopted secret and indirect measures to accomplish the foul purposes of his heart. He blessed the Israelites with his mouth, because he was compelled to do so by the Spirit of God; but he advised a system of wily, gross, and fiendish temptation, which entailed upon the Israelites a fearful curse. Never did man more richly deserve death than Balaam.—P.

Of beeves, 72,000; to soldiers 36,000, to God 72, to people 36,000, to Levites 720. Of asses, 61,000; to soldiers 30,500, to God 61, to people 30,500, to Levites 610. Of persons, 32,000; to soldiers 16,000, to God 32, to people 16,000, to Levites 320. Did ever legislator act in this manner before or since the time of Moses! To his whole tribe how little!! g The Israelitish army consisted of but 12,000 men, a mere handful when opposed to the people of Midian. Yet, when the officers made a muster of the troops after their return from the war, they found they had not lost a single man. This circumstance struck them as so decisive an evidence of God's interposition, that, out of the spoils they had taken they offered an oblation to the Lord, 'an atonement for their souls.' Bishop Wat-son.—The success of this detachment had been very extraordinary, so small a company defeating such multitudes, and taking so large a spoil; but far more extraordinary was the fact that in the enterprise not one individual had been slain. The Midianites, no doubt, would make resistance; but the hand of God was conspicuous in that their resistance was altogether without effect. No wonder that gratitude constrained the captains to present a voluntary offering to the Lord.—L.

1 The Reubenites and Gadites sue for their inheritance on the east side of Jordan. 6 Moses reproveth them. 16 They offer him conditions to his content. 33 Moses assigneth them the land. 39 They conquer it.

NOW the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of Jazer, and the land of Gilead,¹ that, behold, the place was a place for cattle;²

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 Ataroth,^a and Dibon, and Jazer, and Nimrah,^e and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Shebam,^f and Nebo, and Beon, 4 Even^b the country which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle.

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and bring us not over Jordan.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall ye sit here?

7 And wherefore^c discourage³ ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them?

8 Thus did your fathers, when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea to see the land.

9 For when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

10 And the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, because they have not wholly followed me;⁴

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation that had done evil in the sight of the LORD was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.⁵

15 For if ye turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness, and ye shall destroy all this people.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones:

17 But we ourselves⁶ will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities, because of the inhabitants of the land.⁷

18 We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance:

19 For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him, 22 And the land be subdued before the LORD; then afterward ye shall return, and be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

23 But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure your sin will find you out.⁸

24 Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead;

27 But thy servants will pass over, every

1 The particular geography of many cities and districts

mentioned in Scripture is often little more than conjectural.

Still there are great landmarks, so to speak, by which the sacred historian

can be followed.

The text affords a striking example

both of the conjecture and the known.

Of the position and limits of the land of Jazer, for example, nothing more is accurately known than that it was somewhere in the

neighbourhood of

Gilead. But the land of Gilead is identified by means of the distinguished mountain range which has continued since the days of Moses so much an object of history that its locality cannot be mistaken, and its very name (now

written Djelaad) continues nearly unaltered. The land of Gilead extended from the river Hiero-

max on the north to Nebo on the south.

Its beauty and fertility have been celebrated by modern travellers with an enthusiasm that well accounts for the anxiety of the Re-ubenites and Gadites to obtain possession, and for the jealousy of Moses lest the love of ease, and of the 'pleasant land,'

should tempt them to forsake their brethren and provoke their God.—C.

2 The pastures upon the table-land of Moab, among the mountains of Gilead, and on the eastern bank of the Jordan,

are far superior to any in Palestine, and notwithstanding centuries of neglect and desolation, they are

Western Asia. To this day it is a place for cattle; and is a favourite resort of the nomad tribes,

whose whole wealth

is in their flocks.—P.

5 Now, says the objector to the divine mission of Moses, if Moses was inspired why does he mistake the intentions of the Reuben-ites and Gadites, and accuse them of designs they deny hav-

The answer is plain

—the objector should

7 The whole country had been already subdued by Moses,

the cities captured,

and the people either slain or driven out,

see ch. xxii. How is it, therefore, that the 'inhabitants of the land' are mentioned

here? The natural explanation is this.

On the east of Moab and Gilead lay the wide plains of Arabia, thinly peopled

by nomad tribes.

Thither the conquered Amorites fled,

and they would naturally hover along the borders, watching any opportunity to attack the Israelites, and reoccupy

their country.—P.

CHAPTER XXXII. [Ver. 37. The situation of Heshbon is fixed by Eusebius at twenty miles east of Jordan, and is described 'over against Jericho,' which place is still familiarly known to travellers. Besides these notes of identification, it is still in being, though in ruins, and bears its ancient name, merely transformed by pronunciation into Heshan.—Elealeh is described by Eusebius as situated a mile from Heshbon. It is now called El Aal, which in Arabic signifies 'the high,' which corresponds to its meaning in the Hebrew.—Kirjathaim continued a place of importance till the fourth century of our era, but amidst the ruins of Moab is not now to be distinguished.—Nebo and Baal-meon are totally unknown. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The love of the world, and the pride of life, frequently hasten men in their earthly settlements. Though such, even in this world, often issue in early and frequent disasters; and it is a fearful symptom when the rising generation tread in their fathers' sinful steps, and grow worse and worse. How base is it to desire our own rest and ease, when God's [NUMBERS, xxxii: 23.]—"But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out." There is no truth better illustrated by the ruins of ancient cities than the one contained in the verse we quote above. In Egypt, in Assyria, in Greece, in Italy, the ruins of great cities teach in mute silence the truth that the sins of nations find nations out and the sins of individuals find individuals out. Before us are the melancholy ruins of a great theatre that stood in Puteoli. Here men and beasts contended for one another's lives for the gratification of a depraved populace. This whole region overlooking the Bay of Naples is now practically deserted. It has been well said that there is no statute of limitation in regard to the debt of sin. Wherever a people disregard the plain laws of God written in nature and in the constitution of their own lives they must pay the penalty of a fearful doom.

man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle before the LORD,⁹ and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do:

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

33 And ^aMoses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh¹ the son of Joseph, ^ethe kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

34 ¶ And the children of Gad ²built ^fDibon,³ and Ataroth, and ^gAroer, 35 And Atroth, Shophan, and ^hJaazer, and Jogbehah,

36 And ⁱBeth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, fenced cities; and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built ^kHeshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, 38 And Nebo, and Baal-meon, ^l(their names being changed,) and Shibmah; and gave other names unto the cities⁴ which they builded.

39 And the children of ^mMachir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses gave ⁿGilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.⁵

⁹ 'Before the Lord.' From Nu. 10. 18, 20, 21 it will be seen that the Reubenites and Gadites marched immediately before the Kohathites, who bore the sanctuary, in which were the ark and mercy-seat, the visible tokens of God's immediate presence. They are therefore literally required to pass over Jordan 'before the Lord.'—C.

The other, lying between the rivers Jabbok and Hieromax, belonged to Og king of Bashan, and was conquered by and allotted to the half tribe of Manasseh. A portion of this northern section of Gilead was captured by Jair, and its villages received the name of Havoth-Jair, 'villages of Jair.' people are in hardships and need our assistance! But how wise to improve past experiences, as means of preventing future iniquities. Yea, it is prudent to remove every monument of idolatry, lest it should entice us to offend. A holy indignation against sin, in whatever form it appears, is commendable and useful. But since the best of men often uncharitably mistake their neighbours' words or designs, and judge before they hear, it is therefore proper that everybody be allowed to explain himself; that every article of our agreements be precisely stated, and fully understood, at the making of them, that there may be no disputing afterward; and that the strictest equity, and the tenderest affection, may be maintained among the people of God, who are all brethren in Christ Jesus.

CHAPTER XXXIII. [Ver. 2. The Israelites in going from Egypt to Canaan did not proceed along one direct line of route. They were led from place to place, sometimes back, sometimes forward, by a divine guide. For thirty-eight years they were literally

'wanderers,' moving apparently from pasture to pasture, and from fountain to fountain, like one of the great nomad tribes of Arabia. The full history of these wanderings is not given. All the places through which they passed are not mentioned. Even the few stations whose names are recorded cannot all be identified. It is consequently impossible to trace the footsteps of the Israelites in every part of the wilderness journey. There are, however, several leading stations which have been identified; and taking these as landmarks, it is not difficult to determine the general line of march. It would seem that Moses first wrote the diary which is given in Exodus, Leviticus, and the early chapters of Numbers; then by divine command he wrote this summary, supplying the names of many stations not given in the diary. It forms a most valuable topographical document. P.]

Creighton's map of Palestine places Rithmah a little way S.W. of Kadesh-barnea; but the map of the Sunday-school Union, London, places it to the south, and at the distance of about 70 geographical miles. The whole is mere conjecture, and therefore void of authority. It is wiser and better to acknowledge ignorance of such details, and to rest in the great historical fact which nothing can gainsay, that the Hebrews were now entered upon those 'wanderings' to which they were condemned because they 'tempted the Lord'; and on account of which he 'swore in his wrath they should not enter into his rest.'—C.

5 This place was highly distinguished in the days of Solomon, and having become a transit port for much of the eastern commerce, 1 Ki. 9. 26. it has retained an historical importance that serves to fix its locality. It was situated about 60 miles nearly south of Sinai. But though its place is known by means of the peculiar rocks from which its name was derived, signifying the backbone of a man, as well as by historic record, yet its very ruins have disappeared. Like other encampments of the Israelites it retains a name—more distinguished than some, it has a local habitation—but like Israel it has fallen, by sin, under the displeasure of Jehovah, and has been swept of all its commerce and riches by the besom of a righteous destruction.—C.

7 All the stations from Kadesh to Arboth-Moab are not given here. Others at which the people encamped on their route southward to Ezion-gaber are mentioned in De. 10. 6, 7. Immediately after leaving Kadesh they crossed the Arabah to the foot of Mount Hor, where Aaron died. After thirty days' mourning they set out on their long but final journey. The rate of travel must have been very slow. They must have lingered at places, and zigzagged through the desert in search of water and pastures. Passing down the Arabah once more, they turned eastward at Ezion-gaber, which stood at the northern extremity of the Gulf of Akabah. They swept round the southern and eastern borders of Edom, and passed through a desert wild and waterless. At length the territory of the Edomites was passed, and the people encamped at 'Ije-Abarim' (the mounds of Abarim), in the border of Moab. Two more stages brought them to the banks of the Arnon, on crossing which they entered the land of the Amorites. The wilderness was now left behind, but the wanderings had not yet drawn to a close. Their eyes and hearts were fixed upon Canaan—the country west of the Jordan. They wished to enter it by the shortest and easiest road. They consequently asked of Sihon a passage through his borders. It was refused. A new struggle was made, the whole country east of the Jordan was conquered, and two tribes settled there.—P.

8 Whether this enumeration contains the entire, or only the principal movements and encampments, is unknown. Analogy would lead us to conclude that it records not the various daily marchings, but merely the departures and encampments. Moses does indeed give a brief epitome of the history of the Jews; but history is not his object. Providence and redemption are his object, and history is the means by which his grand object is attained.—C.

appears more probable. In giving the summary contained in this chapter Moses would scarcely have omitted the first visit to Kadesh, had he been enumerating the stations as well after as before that visit. It is more natural to suppose that he gives a full list of the places of encampment between Sinai and Kadesh; and then, omitting all notice of the thirty-eight years' wandering, as not properly pertaining to the journey to Canaan, he takes up the narrative again at the close of the second visit. This theory, however, is not free from difficulties. According to ver. 36 the people marched direct from Ezion-gaber to Kadesh; and the stations from Moseroth to Jotbathah were passed in succession before reaching Ezion-gaber. But these stations are identical with those mentioned in De. 10. 6, 7, where they afterwards encamped when going from Kadesh to Ezion-gaber, comp. Nu. 21. 4; De. 2. 8; they consequently lay between these places, and in the Arabah. The Israelites must therefore have traversed the Arabah several times. The most direct line of route was rarely, if ever, followed. The people appear to have directed their course right and left, back and forward, passing and repassing the same spots, in obedience to their divine guide. Two points alone are fixed between Sinai and Kadesh; these are Hazeroth and Ezion-gaber. The latter they must have approached from the north; and after encamping there, they turned back again northward. In going from Hazeroth they probably went down Wady el-Ain and Wetir to the shore of the gulf; then along the shore past Ezion-gaber, and up the Arabah; then back down the Arabah to Ezion-gaber, and finally up it to Kadesh. MONASTERY NEAR BETHSAIDA—WHERE CHRIST PERFORMED MANY OF HIS WONDERFUL WORKS. [NUMBERS, xxxiv : 11.]—"And the border shall descend and shall reach unto the side of the sea of Chinnereth eastward." We give this view of the monastery near Bethsaida, because it stands upon the side of the sea of Chinnereth, now called the Sea of Galilee. This monastery is near the city of Bethsaida, one of the towns in which Christ performed so many of his wonderful works, and one of the towns upon which he pronounced a woe. We are looking here toward the east. We see the Upper Gadarene country there beyond the Sea of Galilee, and the gradual falling of the country as it slopes toward the sea on the north. Tourists stop here and find good accommodations in this monastery. According to prophecy, it really has been more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon than for this place.

z The eastern border has several well-known landmarks:—

Riblah on the Orontes; Ain, the great fountain of the Orontes, a few miles west of Riblah; the Sea of Chinnereth or Galilee; the Salt or Dead Sea. The eastern border, therefore, beginning at Kuryetein, was drawn west by south across the plain to Riblah, thus excluding the territory of Damascus. Thence it turned due south, down the valleys of Coele-Syria and the upper Jordan to the Sea of Galilee; and then followed the Jordan to the Dead Sea. The whole country east of the Jordan was thus excluded from the land.

18 And ye shall take one prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

19 And the names of the men are these: Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon.

REFLECTIONS.—It is useful to remember and record God's providences, for the after direction or comfort of ourselves and others in future trials and temptations; for this world is but a waste howling wilderness, and the condition of churches and saints therein always changing and unsettled.—But the believing recollection of God's dispensations will enable us cheerfully to pass on, while we discover how he preserves his people in all, and sets their mercies and judgments the one over against the other,—guides them with his counsel while here, and afterwards brings them to glory! But dangerous and infectious is intimacy with wicked men, and with the unfruitful works of darkness! Carefully then ought professors of the true religion to avoid it, and to remove out of the way whatever might occasion temptation or stumbling.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 3. The map commences at the south, because that was the quarter with which the Hebrews were best acquainted, as lying next Egypt. South quarter, that is, south extremity eastward, before the line turns northwards.—Coast of the Salt Sea, that is, point of the Dead Sea, called salt, because it is saltier than other seas. So great is the quantity of salt in solution in its water, that bodies float in it that sink in any other water. By Salt Sea eastward, some geographers understand Ezion-gaber, on the Red Sea, and draw the southern line thence to the eastern or Pelusic branch of the Nile; but ver. 12 seems to fix the name Salt Sea to the Dead Sea, into which Jordan empties itself. C.]

Ver. 4. [A trifling and well-authorized change in the translation by Boothroyd completely reconciles this description with the geographical features of the country, and with history. 'Your south border shall wind to the ascent of Akkrabbim, and pass on to Zin, and thence extending to the south of Kadesh-barnea, and from Azmon the boundary shall wind about to the river of Egypt.' C.]

Ver. 6. [The Mediterranean was the western border. On the north the border commencing at the sea ran towards Hor ha-Hor, 'the great mountain,' i.e. the culminating point of Mount Lebanon on the north, where it attains an elevation of nearly 10,000 feet. From thence the line was drawn towards Zedad, now called Sudud, on the great plain due east of the extremity of Lebanon. But before reaching Sudud it bent north to Ziphron, a town near Hamath; and then struck south-east to Hazar-enan ('the town of the fountains'), now called Kuryetein. P.]

Ver. 17. [This was a narrow territory when considered as a gift from God. But its very narrowness marks his wisdom as well as his goodness. God intends to make his people his witnesses to the world, and their narrow territory forces them to do their duty abroad; while their religious institutions are ever recalling them home. Besides, it is a gross mistake that the greatness of a nation depends upon its extent of territory. The most distinguished nations, both in ancient and modern times, have been cooped up in narrow territorial limits. And be it remembered, the great drama of providence, in which Israel still acts so conspicuous a part, is not yet closed. He was a Jew, according to the flesh, who will yet claim 'the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost ends of the earth for a possession.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary to bring our mind to our lot, since God sets the bounds to it: and, though a small portion of this world may be allotted to the people of God, yet is that small portion fertile and well protected. How instructive the boundaries of this promised land! the memorial of Heaven's justice on Sodom at the south-east; the memorial of Egyptian bondage on the south-west; the wilderness of their wandering on the south; the goodly mountain Lebanon on the north; the great sea, that emblem of eternity, on the west; and Jordan, that river of God, on the east. Thus are we surrounded with mementoes of our state. But, in all, infallible is the accomplishment of God's promises, whatever hard warfare and wearisome waiting may be necessary to precede it. Let me therefore, even now, raise up my weary spirit—Jesus, the Prince of all the tribes of ransomed men, shall quickly assign me my share in his celestial Canaan!

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli.

23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod.

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shiphtan.

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach.

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

CHAPTER XXXV.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 Command^a the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites, of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.¹

4 And^b the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits² round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits,³ and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge,⁴ which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add⁵ forty and two cities.

CHAPTER XXXV. [Ver. 4. The Septuagint reads 'two thousand cubits' both in the 4th and 5th verses; but the Hebrew MSS. are decidedly in favour of the present reading: how then are these two accounts of measure to be reconciled? Thus—the measure of 1000 cubits, ver. 4, is from the wall: the measure of 2000 cubits, ver. 5, is not from the wall, but from the city itself: the first 1000 cubits constituting the suburbs of the wall, a part which in the neighbourhood of walled cities is often occupied by houses; the second 2000 cubits constituting what is called the field of the suburbs, Le. 25. 34, and appropriated to agriculture and cattle. The extent of the walls is not given, but the land thus measured would form a square of about three-quarters of a mile in every direction from the walls; a very small concession, when the cities thus appropriated were in all but 48, Jos. 21. 41, when it is remembered that the Levites are estimated at 46,000 males and females, Le. 26. 62, a number that must be greatly increased by the requisite servants. Still more distinct will this moderation appear, when it is remembered that the Levites never had exclusive possession of these cities, but held them in common with the tribes amongst whom they resided; and what superiority in the possession of the whole city and district the secular tribes conceded to the Levites, beyond their individual occupancy, does not appear: compare Jos. 21. 17 with Ju. 19. 15, 16; and Jos. 21. 13 with 2 Sa. 5. 5.—Note. Amongst the incidental evidences of the divine mission of Moses must be reckoned, (1) This extreme moderation in providing for his own tribe. (2) The ready acquiescence of the Levites to be literally disinherited, and allowed little more than a lodging-place, where their brethren were so richly endowed: had either been impostors, they must have acted on worldly motives; and worldly motives have never yet produced self-denial, when there was power and opportunity to attain to self-aggrandizement. Let us be sure that to practise the self-denial of Christ is always our best argument for Christ, Phi. 2. 6. C.] Ver. 11. [According to the Jewish law, the kinsman of any one who was killed had a legal right, and held it an imperative duty, to avenge the death by slaying the aggressor. The appointment, therefore, of these cities was an institution of great wisdom and mercy; while it afforded an expressive and eminent type of Christ as the refuge of sinners. (1) The slayer flees, ver. 11, because the avenger follows: so the sinner has fled to Jesus, He. 6. 18. 4 The cities of refuge among the Israelites were widely different from the azyla among the Greeks and Romans, as also from the privileged altars among the Roman Catholics. Those among the Hebrews were for the protection of such only as had slain a person involuntarily. They were necessary, because the old patriarchal law still remained in force, viz. that the nearest akin had a right to avenge the death of his relation by slaying the murderer; for the original law enacted, that whosoever shed man's blood by man should his blood be shed; and none was judged so proper to execute this law, as the man who was nearest akin to the deceased. As many rash executions of this law might take place, it was deemed necessary to qualify its claims, and prevent injustice; and the cities of refuge were judged proper for this purpose.—Clarke.

9 These cities were conveniently situated so as to be accessible to the various districts of the land, and we learn that the best provision was made for the manslayer's easy and safe fleeing thither. The roads that led to them were kept in good repair; and that he might not miss the way, posts were erected, where several roads happened to meet, bearing the inscription, 'city of refuge.' Do not these cities of refuge remind us of the salvation of our blessed Lord, the only refuge provided for perishing sinners to flee to 'from the wrath to come?' To them there seems to be allusion in He. 6. 17 18.—I.

CAMELS FEEDING AT NAZARETH—ON THE HILLS OVER WHICH CHRIST WALKED.
 [NUMBERS, xxxv: 9-34.]—We give here a picture taken from a scene in Nazareth, the city of our Savior, to illustrate the cities of refuge referred to in the thirty-fifth chapter of Numbers. The cities of refuge may hardly be considered a type, but they constitute an illustration of Christ as the sinner's refuge. The cities of refuge were near every portion of the land, and Christ as the Son of God is near us all. Within the cities of refuge there was no condemnation, and so there is no safety for sinners except in Christ. To leave the city of refuge was to meet destruction, so we cannot go away from Christ but at the peril of our hopes. This picture of a peaceful scene in Nazareth was taken in the early morning of May 7, 1894. These camels were being taken from Syria into Egypt.

that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait;

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm;

24 Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood, according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest,³ which was anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; ⁴he shall not be guilty of blood:

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for a statute of judgment unto you, throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the ⁵mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.

31 ¶ Moreover, ⁶ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death;⁷ but he shall be surely put to death.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him

3 Maimonides views this in the light of a prudent charity to the man-slayer, and to the relations of him that was slain, since by this means the man-slayer was kept out of the sight of the avenger of blood, who might have been tempted some time or other to fall upon him if he had come in his way; but by long absence his anger might be mitigated, at least by the death of the high-priest, the most excellent of all persons, and most dear to any one in the nation, which made the public grief when he died so great that men forgot their private resentments.—I.

Among the Arabians compensation is admitted, and is very common—having indeed been sanctioned by their lawgiver, but God requires that in every case the murderer shall be punished with death. The design of the cities of refuge was to afford shelter only to the unintentional slayer, but the murderer could be dragged forth to punishment from the very horns of the altar.—I.

4 This law extended only to heiresses, for many of their great men and priests married wives of other tribes and countries; and other women, who had brethren to inherit, were free to marry into any other tribe, though it seems they generally confined themselves to their own. If their brethren died after they were married into another tribe, they could not inherit, but the estate went to the male heir. The design of this law was to keep the tribes distinct, and hereby to fulfil the prophecies, particularly those respecting the Messiah. As this law affected only heiresses, there are numerous instances of women marrying out of their own tribes. And by reason of such marriages, as Ainsworth remarks, 'there might be kindred between Elizabeth the mother of John the Baptist, who was of the daughters of Aaron, and Mary the Virgin, the mother of our Lord, who was of the lineage of David and tribe of Judah.'—I.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 The inconvenience of the inheritance of daughters 5 is remedied by marrying in their own tribes, 7 lest the inheritance should be removed from the tribe. 10 The daughters of Zelophehad marry their father's brothers' sons.

AND the chief fathers of the families of the children of ¹⁰Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel;

2 And they said, ¹¹The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the ¹²other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken¹ from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received:² so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

4 And when the jubilee³ of the children of Israel shall be, then ¹³shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

5 ¶ And Moses commanded the children of Israel, according to the word of the LORD, saying, ¹⁴The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

6 This ¹⁵is the thing⁴ which the LORD doth acquittal through his grace, Mat. 25. 34, 40. (3) There were cities of refuge on both sides of Jordan, so the sinner finds Christ a refuge on earth, as he will find him his glory in heaven, Jn. 14. 1-3. (4) These cities were not only for Israel, but for the stranger and sojourner: so is Christ a refuge for Jew and Gentile, Ro. 2. 10, and all who follow him count themselves strangers and pilgrims on the earth, He. 11. 13. (5) These cities refused protection to the murderer; so Christ refuses salvation to the unbelieving and impenitent, the unregenerate and unsanctified, Mat. 25. 41, 46. (6) The congregation being the legally constituted judges, were the administrators of this refuge and deliverance, ver. 25; so the church is appointed to afford instruction and comfort by the ordinances, and deliver penitent sinners, by a merciful discipline, from the snare of the devil, Ga. 6. 1. (7) The guilty who have fled for refuge must abide in the city till the death of the high-priest, ver. 25; so must the sinner abide in Christ, Jn. 15. 4, 6, 7, constantly bearing about in his body the dying of the Lord Jesus, 2 Co. 4. 10. (8) At the death of the high-priest the guilty returns to his possession, ver. 28; so by faith in the death and resurrection of Christ, as delivered for our offences, and raised for our justification, Ro. 4. 25, we enter into possession of the earnest of the Spirit, 2 Co. 5. 5, and abide in faith, waiting for the adoption, the redemption of the body, Ro. 8. 23. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What care God takes to arrange his ministers in the church and world as best promotes the edification of his people! Often, for that purpose, as in the case of the Levites, he turns a curse into a blessing. At the same time it is his will that his ministers should be suitably provided for, that they may not be embarrassed with carnal care or labour: and to provide for a gospel minister ought to be the great care of every people. Such as minister to us in spiritual things have a right to reap our carnal things; and such as are engaged in gospel administrations should, as far as possible, disengage themselves from every worldly care. Never, therefore, should we receive worldly portions without devoting a part of them to the Lord or the benefit of his church. How heinous is the guilt of hating and murdering our neighbours! And it is presumptuously wicked for such as are in power to permit wilful murder to pass without the due punishment of death. But if men sinfully indulge their escape, God's sword will in due time reach them. Yet, on the contrary, care ought to be taken that none be punished but upon sufficient examination and full proof; and that none be punished with death for anything done contrary to his intention. But what a lively type of Jesus are these cities of refuge! What murder of God—of Christ—of our souls—of our neighbour—of time—of ordinances—of mercies and judgments—we commit ignorantly and in unbelief! and if death overtake us loitering in our sins, we must perish in them! But Jesus, in his person, covenant, blood, power, and grace, is a safe and comfortable refuge set before us in the gospel. He is everywhere near to flee to; and the way to him is plain and clear. Strangers, Gentiles as well as Jews, have equal access to him. Him that cometh to him he will in no wise cast out; and in him we must abide for ever, that we may be safe. But how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation!—if we sin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth!—if we tread under foot the Son of God—count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and do despite unto the Spirit of grace!

CHAPTER XXXVI. REFLECTIONS.—It is command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them marry⁵ to whom they think best; ⁶only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry:

7 So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall ⁷keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

8 And⁸ every⁶ daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.⁷

prudent to foresee difficulties, that we may avoid them: and in laws, covenants, and other affairs, to have every point so fixed that no disorder or dispute may arise in after-times. But let us remember that it is most profitable to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways; for often he defers his directions till men perceive the necessity of them: and a ready obedience to his command and will, when known, yea, even to those of our superiors, is necessary and becoming. But, whatever power parents have in the marriage of children, none ought to be forced into marriage connections contrary to their inclination.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED DEUTERONOMY.

This book is so called because it contains a repetition of many laws formerly delivered. It records the history of Israel during one month before Moses' death, and another after it. Here we have scarcely any new history but what relates to Moses' renewal of the covenant between God and Israel, his charge to Joshua, and his death. Never, except in ch. 31. 14-21, and 34. 4, is God exhibited as speaking to Moses or the Israelites as in the three preceding books. But Moses, just going to leave them by death, in the most affecting manner rehearses to them what God had done for them; and the laws which he had given them, with several explications and additions. This rehearsal was extremely necessary and kind. (1) Many of the laws in respect of their matter, and all of them in respect of their Author and intent, were very important and worthy to be again and again inculcated. (2) The weakness of the Israelites made it necessary that the laws which immediately concerned them should be represented separately from those which concerned the priests and Levites. (3) The persons to whom these laws had been originally published were now almost all dead, and a new generation was grown up, to whom God would have his laws repeated by Moses himself, that, if possible, it might make a lasting impression upon them. (4) They were just going to take possession of Canaan; it was therefore proper that they should be expressly admonished of the conditions upon which they were to hold it. In this, his last speech and dying words, (1) Moses gives a summary rehearsal of what events had happened to them in the wilderness, ch. i. ii. iii.; 9. 7-29; 10. 1-7. (2) He rehearses the moral laws which had been given from Mount Sinai; and, by a variety of motives, drawn from the kindness of God towards them, and from the danger of disobedience, charges and calls upon them to obey them, iv.-xi. (3) With a mixture of moral institutes he inculcates manifold ceremonial and judicial observances: some of which, as of extirpating false prophets and idolatrous cities; making battlements round the roofs of houses; expiating uncertain murder; taking down hanged malefactors in the evening; punishing of rebellious children; distinguishing apparel of the sexes; marriage of captive women and wives of deceased brethren; of divorcing of wives and trial of virginity; of runaway servants, &c., had not before been plainly established, xii.-xxvi. (4) To enforce obedience to these laws, he charges them to surrender themselves solemnly to God at Ebal and Gerizzim as his dutiful servants, who regarded his blessings, and stood in awe of his curses. He solemnly announces the blessings annexed to their obedience, and denounces the curses which would befall them if disobedient, xxvii.-xxxi. (5) After encouraging Joshua his successor, and leaving a song for the people, warning them of their future sins, miseries, and deliverances, and a testamentary benediction for their encouragement, he views the promised land from Mount Pisgah, where he dies, and is buried by God, and lamented by the Israelites, xxxi.-xxxiv.

TOWER OF CASTLE—NEAR WHERE THE TRANSFIGURATION TOOK PLACE. [DEUT. i:7.]—Reference is made in this verse to Lebanon, and we give a picture of the great Subetbeh Castle, which stands about three miles above Caesarea Philippi, at the foot of Mount Hermon, which belongs to the general Lebanon range. The top of this castle is 2,300 feet above the Mediterranean Sea and 1,000 feet above the town of Caesarea Philippi. This is, perhaps, one of the largest castles in the world, and certainly the most massive fortification in all Syria. It is capable of accommodating a whole army, and stands here by the roadside overlooking the boundary between Syria and Palestine. Standing on the top of the tower, we are in sight of Dan, which is just below us, and which marked the northern limit of the Holy Land. This castle is in a state of remarkable preservation, which is probably owing to the quality of the stone, which is very compact and hard as adamant.

Israel,³ according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 After^e he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth in Edrei:

5 On ^fthis side Jordan,⁴ in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare⁵ this law, saying,

6 ¶ The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt ^glong enough in this mount:

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and ^hgo to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the ⁱplaces nigh thereunto,⁶ in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have set⁷ the land before you: go in and possess the land ^jwhich the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them, and to their seed after them.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you⁸ at that time, saying,^k I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 ¶ The LORD your God hath ^lmultiplied you, and, behold, ye ^mare this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers ⁿmake you a thousand times so many more as ye ^oare, and ^pbless you, as he hath promised you!)

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken ^ris good for us to do.

15 So ¶ I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made¹ them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

and necessary. As the verse stands, it can be easily understood by throwing out the words supplied, and, instead of reading it as a parenthesis, understanding it as commemorating that part of the history which terminated in the exclusion of Moses himself and the last generation from Canaan, see ver. 19, 34, 35, 37, and demonstrating upon how brief a period the most important events may depend.—C.

3 It is important here to observe, that in this book, with a few exceptions, as ch. 31, 14; 34, 4, JEHOVAH does not speak as a revealer, but Moses as an inspired expositor.—C.

7 Hebrew, 'to expound.' His object was to explain what had been previously declared. He made no new revelation; he set forth no second law; his task was a humbler one. He simply desired, by divine direction, to enforce, and more fully to explain where necessary, those laws, moral and ceremonial, which were recorded in the previous books.—P.

8 The Amorites were the most powerful of the tribes which inhabited Canaan at the time of the exodus. They had conquered nearly the whole country east of the Jordan, and they held more or less of the mountain strongholds on the west, from Kadesh on the south to Lebanon on the north. 'The mountain of the Amorites' here signifies the mountain chain at Kadesh.—P.

16 Unbelief gives two characters to God, according to its circumstances. The unbeliever in prosperity and pleasure describes his God 'all mercy.' The same in adversity and pain, murmurs, rebels, and describes him all judgment. So Israel in the wilderness pronounced him. The believer ascribes both these attributes to God, and equally blesses him, and trusts him, and loves him, whether he give or take away.—C.

18 And I ⁴commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do.

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. Unto all Israel. Taking two scriptural examples as our guides, viz. 2 Ki. 23, 2; Ne. 8, 1-8; 2 Cr. 34, 30, in which we find 'all the people, great and small,' assembled to hear the reading of the law; both 'the men and the women, and all that could hear with understanding;' and considering the great extent to which a strong human voice, with a distinct enunciation, and in a still assembly, may be heard; and remembering that Moses might continue each day as long, at least, as Nehemiah did, ch. 8, 3, 'from morning until mid-day,' and repeat, day after day, the same instructions to different auditors, there will be no difficulty in understanding that he literally addressed this book in consecutive discourses to all Israel 'who could hear with understanding.' C.—This verse, when its purpose is understood, presents no serious difficulty to the interpreter. The object of the writer is to point out definitely where the words which follow were spoken:—Moses spake 'beyond Jordan;' so it is in the Hebrew. The Hebrew phrase 'beyond Jordan,' like the New Testament Peraea, was used as a proper name, to signify the country east of the Jordan independent altogether of the position of writer or speaker.

Moses spake 'in the plain;' i.e., as the Hebrew has it, the Arabah, or great valley which intersects Palestine. This Arabah lay 'over against' the Red Sea; it began at the Gulf of Akabah, and extended from it in a straight line to the Dead Sea and Sea of Galilee. It lay between Paran on the west, and Tophel, a town of Edom (now Tufileh), on the east. Three other places are enumerated along its borders, in order to define more fully its extent. P.]

Ver. 2. [The mention of the Arabah appears to have suggested this incidental note of distance. A good part of the route of the Israelites from Horeb to Kadesh lay along it, for the Arabah is unquestionably 'the way of Mount Seir.' The mountain chain of Seir, or Edom, skirts the Arabah the whole way from the head of the Gulf of Elah to the Dead Sea. In fact, as the Gulf of Elah is the natural prolongation of the Arabah southwards, seven out of the 'eleven days' journey from Horeb to Kadesh would be through the Arabah. This fact may possibly account for the statement in ver. 2, which most commentators have regarded as out of place. The distance from Horeb to Kadesh is about 160 miles. P.]

Ver. 7. [The terms employed in this verse are either proper names, or descriptive appellations, intended to define the country given in covenant-promise to the Israelites:—'The mount of the Amorites (eastern and central Palestine); in the Arabah (plain of Jordan); in the Mountain (hill country of Judah); in the Shephelah (plain of Philistia); in the Negeb (country along the south border of Palestine); by the shore of the sea the land of the Canaanites (Phoenicia); and Lebanon,' &c. This geographical description is exact and exhaustive. P.]

Ver. 14. [To do. In Ex. 18, 24, Moses, by advice of Jethro, chooses men to be, ver. 25, 'heads over the people, rulers of thousands,' &c., who 'judged the people at all seasons; the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.' Again, in Nu. 11, 16, JEHOVAH directs Moses to gather seventy elders to 'bear the burden of the people,' so that he should not 'bear it alone.' But this burden is not the burden of their legal questions, but of their murmurings and complaints; and these are distinct both in time, office, and endowments, from the rulers of thousands, &c.; for these rulers were brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have discouraged⁷ our heart, saying, ^dThe people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great, and walled up to⁸ heaven; and, moreover, we have seen the sons of the Anakims there.

29 Then I said unto you, ^eDread not, neither be afraid of them.

High walls around houses, &c., in these parts of Arabia, are still deemed a sufficient defence against the Arabs—who scarcely ever attempt anything in the way of plunder except on horseback. The monastery on Mount Sinai is surrounded with very high walls without any gate; in the upper part of the wall, thirty-two feet from the ground, there is a sort of window or opening from which a basket, sometimes a rope with a loop at the end, is suspended by a pulley, by which both persons and goods are received into and sent from the place.—L.

² Creatures, each of which might be crushed beneath the finger of a child, and yet by their courage, fierceness, activity, and numbers, they either put their strongest assailants to flight, or destroy them by their stings. In well-inhabited and cultivated countries, where bees are comparatively few, the force of the comparison will not be easily perceived. Yet, even in the most improved districts they have been known to destroy dogs and horses. Pliny states, that from some districts of Crete they actually expelled the inhabitants, and Ælian declares that some parts of Scythia north of the Danube were so infested with bees as to be inaccessible; and Park, in his Travels in Africa, records an instance in which not only himself and his party were put to flight by them, but several beasts of their caravan actually stung to death. It is possible also there may be more in the comparison than meets the eye; for though we may not on a few examples affirm it for a general or universal rule, yet more than once have we seen it tried and verified, that he who has the coolness or courage to stand immovably still, and allow the exasperated bees to alight upon him, will remain untouched and unharmed, while those who run away are the object of their deadly hostility. May not the text, therefore, remind a people well accustomed to the dispositions of bees, that had the Israelites stood still the very show of courage would have repelled their enemies?—C.

THEN we ^aturned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, as the LORD spake unto me; and we ^bcompassed mount Seir¹ many days.

appointed while Jethro was still at Sinai, Ex. 18. 27, but the seventy after Jethro was gone, and Hobab his son remained, Nu. 10. 29, and after the camp had moved from Sinai, Nu. 10. 12. Between the accounts of the appointment of the rulers of thousands, &c., in Exodus and Deuteronomy there is evident difference, but no contradiction. Jethro suggests referring the decision to God, Ex. 18. 23; God directs, and Moses submits the matter to the people's approval, and the rulers to their free election. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It much becomes aged ministers, from time to time, to remind their people of the principal occurrences of Providence towards them, and of their carriage towards God under them: and the nearer their end, the more serious and diligent ought they to be in this work. In repeated views of the providences and oracles of God, some new and affecting circumstances will readily present themselves, to which we had not formerly adverted, and call forth new expressions of gratitude and praise: and it is beautiful when all the kindness of God is enjoyed, as founded on his spiritual promises. What a mercy is it to a nation when they have judges able, patient, pious, and impartial! But heinous is the guilt when, notwithstanding God's gracious promises and kind providences, we wickedly rebel against him; when, discrediting God's promise and care, we obstinately lean to our own understanding; and when we readily credit everything said in opposition to God's record, and disregard every encouragement to believe it! And men's wilfulness frequently manifests itself in such diversified contradictions to God's will! The most eminent saints share along with the wicked in their temporal miseries. And often they are forced to weep for their sufferings who would not weep for their sins. But, alas! to no purpose is weeping when the door of mercy is once shut. It is but the sorrow of the world, which worketh death.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. 'We went round Mount Seir during many days.' This was literally true. Commencing their journey at Kadesh on the west, they travelled along the western side of the mountain range of Seir or Edom to Ezion-gaber; then they turned and passed close to its southern border; then they turned again and traversed the wilderness of Arabia, close to the eastern border; and they finally entered and marched across Moab on its northern border. P.]

Ver. 23. [This is a most important ethnological note. It proves that the aborigines of Palestine, both east and west of the Jordan, were of one stock, and were of gigantic stature. The different names by which they were called—Rephaim, Emim, Horim, Anakim, Zamzummim, and Avim—were either descriptive epithets, or the inventions of different races of men. The Caphtorim were better known as Philistines. Caphtor was probably a province of Egypt. P.]

Ver. 26. [Does not Moses, by his 'words of peace,' act disingenuously with Sihon, when he knew, if he believed his own record, that he was about to take possession of Sihon's kingdom? No; he acted in perfect sincerity. He required an act of courtesy, of kindness and reciprocal benefit. When churlishly refused, he did not commence hostilities; but when Sihon came to assail him, he assailed him, as an aggressor, and then took possession of the land which God had promised, and which God, as Creator and Lord, had a paramount right to bestow. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What regard God bears to his faithful children; and what temporal favours he bestows, even on their wicked posterity, for their sake! But he hath appointed times for exercising his people's faith, and permitting his enemies' prosperity. He plants and plucks up nations; keeps them in, or turns them down according as they do not obey him, and the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Thus the cursed offspring of Ham, after many ages, Seir,¹ and they shall be afraid of you: 'take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore.

5 Meddle^f not with them; for I will not give you of their land, no, not so much as a footbreadth;² because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

6 Ye shall 'buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

7 For the LORD thy God hath 'blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he 'knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

8 And when we 'passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, through the way of the plain from Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

9 And the LORD said unto me, 'Distress not the Moabites,³ neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given 'mAr⁴ unto the children of Lot for a possession.

10 The 'Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall as the Anakims;

11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims.⁵

12 The^o Horims also dwelt in Seir before time; but the children of Esau succeeded them,⁶ when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their 'stead; 'pas Israel did unto the land of his possession, which the LORD gave unto them.

13 Now rise up, said I, and get you over 'the brook⁸ Zered: and we went over the brook Zered.

14 And the space in which we came from Kadesh-barnea,⁷ until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years;⁹ until all the generation of the men of war were wasted^s out from among the host, as the LORD sware unto them.

15 For indeed the hand of the LORD was against them, to destroy them from among the host, until they were consumed.

1 'Mount Seir' is not to be taken as a single mountain around which the Israelites continuously moved. It is evidently the name of an extensive mountain range of about 70 miles from south to north, and about 50 from east to west. To 'compass,' in the language of Scripture, signifies either to go round or to be around a place. Jos. 6.4, Jn. 4.20, will furnish an example of each application. In the text it evidently applies to an encampment, of which the occasional movements were southward towards the Red Sea. Of these movements Moses gives no special record. A melancholy but accurate emblem of human life, of which much is spent 'in laboriously doing nothing' that is worthy of being rescued from oblivion.—C.

3 The expulsion and succession of these now obscure people, of whom we possess but the name, conveys the same lesson with the rise and fall of the mightiest empires, whose fates fill the pages of the most extended history. There is a lesson of mortality upon the gravestone of the unknown stranger, as intelligible to reason as the inscription over the departed friend. The one may awaken more emotion, but gives no louder warning, than the other.

But as men read monumental inscriptions for curiosity or amusement, so do nations often study history. They see that others mighty and renowned have fallen; they have the causes in luxury or effeminacy; but seldom think, and if told, will not readily admit, that to 'forgetfulness of God' are national calamities to be traced, and that, in submission to 'the Son' lies the safety and stability of kingdoms. Ps. 9.17; 2.10. While Moses impresses this solemn lesson of instability upon the Israelites, he also encourages them by the example of weaker nations expelling or conquering the mightiest, even as sinners are encouraged to turn to the Lord, by the triumphs of grace in rescuing 'the chief of sinners' from 'the snare of the devil.' 2 Ti. 2.26.—C.

perish under the patriarch's curse. But the people of God ought to be always generous, forgiving, and disinterested; neither injuring their enemies, nor unnecessarily burdensome to their friends. And the more vain and changeable the possessions of this world are, the more solicitous we ought to be to secure a kingdom which cannot be moved. When nations are ripe for ruin, God permits their proud lusts to plunge them headlong into it: and their barbarous refusals of common kindness issue in their own and their neighbours' destruction. Let me be always content with such things as I have; always tender of dispossessing others of what the Lord has given them. Let my portion be the Lord himself, from which neither hell nor earth can turn me out, or mar my enjoyment, while I live in the hopes of exchanging all my wanderings, fightings, and fears, for that city of God, that house eternal in the heavens.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 5. Argob is, as its name implies, a wild and rocky province of Bashan—a great natural fortress in fact, with tortuous ravines and jagged cliffs, inaccessible except to those acquainted with its passes. It is about 22 miles long by 14 wide. It is a plain, but its surface is elevated above the surrounding country about 30 feet; and is entirely composed of a stratum of basalt, which appears to have been emitted from pores in the ground. It is surrounded by the great plain or table-land of Bashan, which is famed for its richness. The surface of Argob, and of a rugged district which extends many miles to the south-east, is thickly studded with ancient cities; and it is a remarkable fact that the massive walls and houses in many of them remain standing; the streets, though long silent and deserted, are in some places complete as those of a modern town. The city gates and the doors and roofs of the houses are all of stone, and bear marks of the most remote antiquity. These are doubtless those 'threescore cities, . . . fenced with high walls, gates, and bars,' of which Moses here speaks. P.]

Ver. 11. [Rabbath of the children of Ammon. This statement has been employed by objectors as evidence that this book was not written by Moses; while it is charged with an extravagance that is alleged to render the narrative incredible. For neither allegation is there the least ground: (1) Metallic bedsteads have been common in all ages, and are so till this day: in warm countries they would be a real luxury, as preservatives from the annoyance of vermin. (2) That Moses should record the fact for posterity, though well known to his contemporaries, is a matter exemplified in the historical occurrences of every day; and as comparatively few of the Israelites could have actually seen it, to the rest it was therefore a most interesting description. (3) But as Rabbath was not yet taken,

ANCIENT WALL OF ACROPOLIS—ONE OF THE OLDEST RELICS IN ATHENS. [DEUT., ii: 1-23.]—In the first part of the above chapter we have some account of international relationships. A careful study of the Old Testament Scriptures reveals the truth that while the Hebrews were God's peculiar people they were not His only people. All peoples were His, and every nation contemporary with the Jews was raised up for some specific purpose. Greece was far away over the Mediterranean Sea from Palestine, but with a history contemporaneous with that of the Hebrews after their entrance into the promised land under Joshua. The heroic period of Greek history is said to date from B. C. 1400 to B. C. 1200. We give in the above picture an illustration of an ancient, rugged, and ragged relic of the old wall built on the northern side of the Acropolis in Athens. It is interesting thus to view from the standpoint of Jewish history 1400 B. C. a scene in Greece.

The King of Edom refuses to allow Israel to pass through his immediate personal territory; but the Edomites of another part of Seir, acknowledging, it may be, an imperial superiority, but exercising at the same time a local and independent jurisdiction, allow them to pass through and trade in their peculiar province. ^s Bashan-havoth-jair must not be confounded with the Havoth-jair mentioned in Nu. 32. 41. The latter were in Gilead, the former in Bashan. That they were distinct and far apart is proved by the following passages:—Jos. 13. 30. 1 Ki. 4. 13. 1 Ch. 2. 22, 23. The word Havoth is from an Arabic root, which signifies 'to collect,' and it therefore means a collection of dwellings of any kind, whether tents, mud huts, or stone houses. The towns called Bashan-havoth-jair appear to have been identical with the 'threescore great cities' of Argob (comp. 1 Ki. 4. 13), of which Kenath was one.—P.

16 And^q unto the Reubenites, and unto the Gadites, I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon, half the valley, and the border, how could Moses tell where the bedstead was? Without our referring to the constancy of divine revelation, does the objector seriously mean to insinuate that no man can tell where any article of curiosity is unless he has actually been in the place? No! this would be too much even for infidelity to assert. (4) But then what shall we say to the dimensions of the bedstead? 'the cubit of a man,' about eighteen inches, would give for the bedstead 13½ feet in length and 6 in breadth; and allowing the bedstead to be, according to common computation, one-third longer than the body, Og would be about 9 feet in height. (5) To escape from the apparent difficulties of the narrative, Boothroyd and others pronounce the passage an interpolation; but for this there appears no sufficient authority; nor does the gigantic size of the monarch present any insuperable difficulty; for, remembering the reverence paid by a semi-barbarous people to gigantic height and strength, and allowing that Og might take advantage of this feeling, and do as other unusually tall men have done, elevate himself a few inches on his sandals, and we find a height rarely indeed attained, but still at times actually exemplified in Europe. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Haughty sinners scorn to be warned by their neighbours' fall, and dare to provoke their own judgments, in which they perish. But, amidst the strongest enemies, all slavish fears are altogether groundless when we have the Lord on our side: he kindly proportions his encouragements to his people's fears, and the terrible appearances of their enemies. There is no might nor counsel against him. The race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Created force is of little avail when God is the opposer. He can deal with giants as with grasshoppers.—It highly becomes those who by faith have entered into their spiritual rest, to look not on their own things, but every man also on the things of others; and to labour till their brethren, and especially Zion, enjoy rest along with them. Every experience of God's power and kindness ought to be improved as an antidote against slavish fears, and an encouragement to follow God in the hardest service: and every glimpse of God's glory quickens the desires after more abundant displays of it. Thankfulness for former mercies is an excellent mean to obtain what blessings we need: and

ENTRANCE TO TIBERIAS. [DEUTERONOMY, iii: 17.]—"The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, under Asdodth-pisgah eastward." The Chinnereth referred to in the 17th verse of the third chapter of Deuteronomy is Lake Galilee which we see through this gate of entrance into the city of Tiberias. Herod Antipas was the founder of the city of Tiberias. Through him Roman luxury was introduced into the northern part of Palestine, which extends from the sea of Tiberias to the sources of the Jordan near Caesarea Philippi. He surrounded the palace which he built in Tiberias with the dwellings for his court, with amphitheaters, bath houses, and temples. Josephus says that in order to make room for all his buildings he was under the necessity of removing several graves found upon the site of the city which he wished to build. There is a tradition that Christ refused to enter Tiberias because it was built upon the graves of the dead of his country.

2 In the sense of place, God is equally near to all men; but in the sense of knowing him by the understanding—seeing him in all things and events, in the conclusion of reason—loving him as our God, in the depth of the affections—and living in him, and to him, as the living God, in this sense God is near only to those who are brought nigh by the blood of Jesus, and have fellowship with the Father and his Son, and who, still on earth, have yet their conversation in heaven.—C.

CHAPTER IV.

1 An exhortation to obedience. 41 Moses appointeth the three cities of refuge on the east side of Jordan.

NOW therefore hearken, O Israel, unto the statutes, and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen what the LORD did because of Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?³

8 And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?

9 Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons:

10 Specially the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that contentment under disappointments is a good evidence that our prayers were not rejected, though we obtain not what we ask. One single slip in the conversation of a saint sometimes renders his most earnest supplications unsuccessful; for God makes his own faithful children the most distinguished examples of his righteous judgments. Often, for their own good, as well as for the good of others, he removes them by death in a considerate manner, when the continuance of their life seems to be most necessary; and yet readily he gratifies their innocent desires, as far as his own honour permits, whenever he finds them penitent. What a comfort is it for dying rulers, in church or state, to leave the flock of God in the hands of faithful successors! and it is pleasing to see aged saints on their death-beds encourage their younger brethren.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 8. I set before you this day.] The great evidence for the divine origin of the Bible is in the Bible itself, just as the great evidence for the being and perfections of God is in the works that he has made. 'The heavens declare the glory of God.' None but a God of power, and wisdom, and goodness, could frame a world so mightily, so wisely, and so excellently. And just so, none but God could reveal a law so excellent as that of Moses. It stands as much above all other laws, as the works of God in nature do above the works of men in art. The philosophers and legislators of the world, if met in one great conclave, could not if they would, and would not if they could, compose and promulgate the ten commandments. Were the stars extinguished, and did the sun alone remain in heaven, it would evince, in its solitary majesty, the divinity of its Creator; and were the Bible lost in another deluge, and did the ten commandments alone survive, they would manifest, even to the sinner whom they condemned, that they were the work of a God of infinite wisdom and holiness. C.]

Ver. 33. [Hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire.] The tribes were numbered from twenty years old and upwards, Nu. 1. 3, and of these none now remained alive save Caleb and Joshua, Nu. 26. 64, 65; but multitudes were still alive who, at nineteen years of age and downwards, had been present at Sinai, and had heard 'the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire.' These now form a host of witnesses to the truth of the Mosaic narrative, to which no event in merely human history can furnish any parallel. Had their parents had the slightest ground of suspicion against the reality of the miracles of Sinai, or the slightest charge against the veracity of Moses, they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

11 And ye ^{came} near, and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst⁴ of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

12 And the LORD ^{spake} unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, ^{but} saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.⁵

13 And he ^{declared} unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you ^{statutes} and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

15 ¶ Take^s ye therefore good heed unto yourselves, (for ye ^{saw} no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire,)

16 Lest ye ^{corrupt} yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female,

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

18 The likeness of anything that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:⁶

19 And lest ^{thou} lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath divided⁷ unto all nations under the whole heaven.⁸

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of ^{the} iron furnace,⁹ even out of Egypt, to be unto him a ^{people} of inheritance, as ye are this day.

21 Furthermore, the LORD ^{was} angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land ^{which} the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance;

22 But ^I must die in this land, I must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess that good land.

23 Take ^{heed} unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which they would have trained up a generation still more unbelieving, more fickle, more ungrateful, and more rebellious than themselves. But truth and grace have triumphed in the conversion of the children, while appetite and habit have effected the destruction of the parents.—Note, How exactly do these two generations correspond, on the great national scale, with the condition of every descendant of Adam! REFLECTIONS.—Blind and hardened indeed are the hearts of men, which need such earnest and repeated inculcation of the plainest duties. And greatly important are the statutes and testimonies of God, which are worthy of all these enforcements. Oh with what solemnity and fervour ought ministers then to preach the truths of God! His glory, and the eternal salvation or ruin of mankind, are deeply concerned in them. Let me receive every article of their divine message with the deepest awe and the most solemn regard: and while I have an ear to hear, let me hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, as said to myself. Let me walk in all the commandments of the Lord blameless. Let every carnal representation of the true God, every deviation to idols, be the detestation of my soul. And, remembering God's tenderness with me, and relation to me, let me exert all my care and skill in raising up men to the honour of Jesus Christ my elder brother. Let every manifestation of God's character or providence encourage and animate me to close walking with him. And if I choose not that sin should become my punishment, let me never make it my pleasure. But let the immutability of God's love, and his readiness to show mercy to returning prodigals, lead me to a speedy and a ⁵ The mercy of God is held out as a motive to obey the law of God, though the law itself holds out no mercy to the transgressor. In the preface God speaks to them as their Redeemer, and it is only in this view that a sinner can yield it obedience. The mercy of God is here promised to thousands; not only of individuals, or to great multitudes to the third and fourth generation, but to successive generations to the end of time. The Lord's dealings with the posterity of Abraham, who believed his word, loved him, and kept his commandments, illustrate this promise.—I.

CHAPTER V.

1 A commemoration of the covenant in Horeb, 6 the ten commandments. 22 At the people's request Moses receiveth the law from God.

AND Moses called ^aall Israel,¹ and said unto them, ^bHear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep and do ²them.

2 The ^cLORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The LORD ^dmade not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.³

4 The^e LORD talked with you face to face in the mount, out of the midst of the fire,

5 (I stood ^fbetween the LORD and you at that time, to show you the word of the LORD: for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount,) saying,

6 ¶ I^g am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.⁴

7 Thou^h shalt have none other gods before me.

8 Thouⁱ shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth:

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: ^kfor I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

10 And^l showing mercy unto thousands⁵ of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

11 Thou^m shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

12 Keepⁿ the sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee.

13 Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work;

14 But the seventh day is the ^osabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor ^pthy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou.

15 And ^qremember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy heartily repentance for sin. And, recollecting the manifold, the distinguishing manifestations of God to me, and to his people, let me never forget my superior obligations; but, while I enjoy his peculiar blessing, return him peculiar honour.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 21. The varieties of expression used, in relating the same thing, by 'holy men of God,' who spoke as they were moved by 'the Holy Ghost,' is never without some important use, that will sooner or later be found out. A remarkable instance occurs in this verse. In many of the catechisms and other books authorized by Romanists, the second commandment, forbidding image worship, is omitted; but to make up the number ten, the tenth commandment is divided into two. The transposition, however, in the text demonstrates the invalidity of the division, and the folly as well as sin of adding to or diminishing from the words of the Lord. C.]

REFLECTIONS. — Sinful men must have God's will declared to them, line upon line, precept upon precept. But the promise of grace, made in Jesus Christ, is the great foundation of all our holy obedience; and there can be no happy promise of

KIRJATH JEARIM—WHERE THE ARK OF THE COVENANT RESTED IN THE HOUSE OF ABINADAB. [DEUT., v: 22.]—"These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more; and he wrote them in two tables of stone and delivered them unto me." We give here a picture of Kirjath Jearim because when the ark of the testimony was brought from Bethshemesh it rested in this place in the house of Abinadab. The immeasurable distance of the religion of Israel from that of surrounding nations may be determined from the fact that the Israelite bowed himself before a holy place in which God was represented in His law and as revealing Himself as holy and just and demanding corresponding traits in His people. The Egyptian bowed before a shrine also, but when that which was contained in it was disclosed it was seen to be a cat or a crocodile or some animal lower in nature than man. The Israelite looked above him, the Egyptian looked beneath himself.

MOSQUE OF OMAR AND TURKISH QUARTER, JERUSALEM.—IN THE PLACE OF THE TEMPLE WHERE CHRIST TAUGHT. [DEUT., v: 33.]—"Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess." We give a picture here, as illustrating the results of failing to observe God's law, the Mosque of Omar, a Mohammedan place of worship standing on the very site of the magnificent temple built by the people of God. Every Jew and every Christian who makes a visit to Palestine resents in his own feelings the presence of an alien people in the land of the Hebrews and of Christians. But we are all forced to admit that this land would have belonged to Jews and Christians forever had they been true to the ten commandments and to the Son of God, the embodiment of the ten commandments in living form.

God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the LORD thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath-day.

16 ¶ Honour^a thy father and thy mother, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee; ^athat thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

17 Thou^t shalt not kill.

18 Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

19 Neither shalt thou steal.

20 Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

21 Neither^u shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field,⁶ or his man-servant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his ass, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.⁷

22 ¶ These^x words⁸ the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more: and he ^ywrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

23 And it came to pass, ^zwhen ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the ^aheads of your tribes, and your elders;

24 And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath showed us his glory, and his greatness, and we^b have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? ^cfor this great fire will consume us. If we hear⁹ the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.

26 For ^dwho is there of all flesh that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

27 Go ^ethou near, and hear all that the LORD our God shall say; and speak thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speak unto thee, and we will hear it, and do it.

28 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the LORD

6 Moses in this repetition and comment appropriately introduces the word 'field,' as the people were now about to enter the promised land.—C.

7 On comparing Ex. xx. with De. v. there appear such varieties in the fourth, fifth, and tenth commandments, that infidels have charged the whole with contradiction; and consequently, either part or whole with untruth—whilst the opponents of the full divine tion of Scripture have adduced them as evidence that whilst the thought was inspired, the words were resigned to the selection of the writers.

A single answer will serve to refute the objection of the infidel, and to remove the difficulty of the believer—the answer lies in recollecting (1) That Israel had now been in possession of the ten commandments for almost forty years, and must therefore have been well acquainted with such a brief original document. (2) That to such well-known and original document Moses refers when he says, 'Keep the Sabbath-day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee; that is, not as he does now for the first time command, but as he hath already commanded at Sinai. This view is further confirmed in ver. 15, where the time of the commandment is again referred—not to the present repetition and comment, but to a past and acknowledged occasion.

Again, it is said in ver. 16, 'Honour thy father and thy mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee,' clearly referring to the Sinai original of the commandment, a reference which evidently continues to the end of ver. 21.—C.

8 These words, not the words that, by divine authority, I have now given in explanation of the commandments, but the words I have referred to as what 'the Lord God commanded thee,' formerly in the covenant at Sinai.—C.

said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: ^athey have well said all that they have spoken.

29 Oh⁹ that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!¹

30 Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will ^bspeak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.

3 ¶ Hear^d therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey.

4 Hear, O Israel; ^eThe LORD our God is one LORD:

5 And^f thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

duty between God and a soul but through his mediation. Public promises of duty between God and parents bind the children to all generations, and it is at their peril if they become ashamed of them. But all obedience to God's law must be immediately founded on what God is, and is to us, and hath done for us. And, oh! what great pleasure God takes in granting himself to be our God in Christ! Often he repeats this grant even in the short abridgment of his law; and many hundred times in the Bible,—that wherever we read, hear, or meditate, we may be constrained to believe that he is God, even our own God, by his spiritual grant of himself to us. Indeed, every peculiar circumstance which men can be in hath its own peculiar enforcements of duty to God and our neighbour. In what a solemn manner was God's law delivered! and it is a mercy that we have his word written for us, for the greater certainty and the better spreading thereof. But it is still a greater mercy that we have one Mediator between God and men—the man Christ Jesus; and so receive the law as fulfilled in Christ: and it is most acceptable to God when sinful men, terrified by the holy law, kindly flee to Jesus and his mediation; when our hearts are right with him; and especially when the views of his promise, his law, and the mediation of Christ and our own vows, concur in animating us to the greatest exactness in all holy obedience.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 4. Hear, O Israel. This is one of the passages the Jews inscribe on their phylacteries, and which they regard as one of the most pregnant with divine truth and instruction. The words are spoken not merely as instructions from Moses to Israel, but as a confession of faith common to Moses and Israel: 'Hear, O Israel, JEHOVAH our Elohim is one JEHOVAH.' The words assert most emphatically the unity of the Godhead in the singular—JEHOVAH; while they equally assert the plurality of the persons by the plural—ELOHIM. The unity of the Godhead is asserted in opposition to 'the gods many and lords many' of the heathen; while the plurality of persons is asserted as the foundation and key to the great mystery of redemption. That the Jews understood ELOHIM to be plural, and that it included the doctrine of the TRINITY,

MOSQUE EL-AKSA, WITH BASIN—WHERE OUR SAVIOR HELD THE CONVERSATION WITH THE LAWYER. [DEUT., vi:4-10.]—Upon one occasion Christ was approached by a lawyer tempting him and enquiring of him concerning the law. The language our Savior used in replying to this lawyer is found in this sixth chapter of Deuteronomy between the fourth and tenth verses. We give a picture of the Mosque el-Aksa which stands upon part of the grounds once occupied by the temple, and is doubtless near the spot where our Savior stood when he held the conversation with the lawyer. The language used in this part of Deuteronomy is made more sacred because it was quoted by our Savior during his temptation in the wilderness. The Mosque el-Aksa is not far from the Mosque of Omar. North of the Gothic porch of the mosque is a marble fountain called the cup, and beneath this fountain is a very large reservoir or basin into which it is said the water from the Pools of Solomon were once conveyed.

9 And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.⁴

⁶ The Jews in the present day strangely observe this in the letter, but neglect it in the spirit. At their stated hours of prayer they bind upon one arm a little case containing strips of parchment, on which this and other portions of the law are written. They also bind a similar case, containing other texts, on the forehead. It is a universal custom, too, in the East for Jews to inscribe over their doors, and round the walls of their rooms, long texts of the Pentateuch. Thus do they fulfil the law outwardly; but in thought, word, and act they deliberately and systematically neglect it.—P.

CHAPTER VII.

1 All communion with the seven nations of Canaan is forbidden for fear of idolatry, 6 for the holiness of the people, 9 for the nature of God in his mercy and justice, 17 for the assuredness of victory which God will give over them. 25 Images must be wholly destroyed.

WHEN the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou;¹

2 And when the LORD thy God shall deliver them before thee, and thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them:

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages² with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

REFLECTIONS.—Godliness is profitable for all things—it hath the promises of this life and of that which is to come: and unbounded is the happiness of all those who have the one only God for their all and in all. But in the important business of religion, it is necessary to lay a good foundation, by faith in God as our God, and to attend to the various duties thereof according to the degree of their importance. In this respect the word of God is a most precious treasure and useful instructor; and contains the most extensive ground of holy meditation and heavenly discourse. With awful reverence should God be regarded and enjoyed, particularly in swearing of oaths. And it is altogether inconsistent with the truth of religion to entertain sloth and unconcern for the glory of God or the lasting welfare of his church. What an important and laborious work ought we to make of the religious education of our children and servants! It is very necessary to instruct them in the knowledge of God's remarkable appearances for his church, as well as in the doctrinal principles or laws of revelation; and that no obedience can be accepted of God, but what is performed in regard to him as our God in Christ, and is universal respecting all his commandments.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 1. The Hittites were descended from Heth, the second son of Canaan; they were located in the time of Abraham in and around Hebron, Ge. 10. 15; 23. 3, sq. The Girgashites were also descended from a son of Canaan, and appear to have settled near the Sea of Galilee, Mat. 8. 28. The Amorites appear also to have been Canaanites, and were the most numerous and powerful tribe in the country. They spread widely, were a warlike race, and occupied large districts of the mountain ranges both east and west of the Jordan. Canaanite is sometimes used as a generic name for the whole descendants of Canaan; sometimes as the special name of the Phœnicians. In the latter sense it is employed here. The Perizzites were not of the same race as the others. They were an aboriginal tribe like the Rephaim, and occupied strongholds among the mountains of Judah and Ephraim. The Hivites, descendants of Canaan, founded Shechem, Gibeon, Beeroth, and a little principality under Mount Hermon, Ge. 34. 2; Jos. 9. 3, &c. The Jebusites had their stronghold on Zion; and they held it and the surrounding territory down to the time of David. P.]

Ver. 2. [Nor show mercy. Was not this prohibition of mercy cruel? No. It is a prohibition enforced upon every judge who tries and condemns a criminal. The judge who shows mercy to the murderer is himself a guilty copartner in the next murder the culprit perpetrates. 8 Butⁱ because the LORD loved you, and because he would^k keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bond-men, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

14 Thou shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD^s will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest,⁶ upon thee; but^t will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

g The population of Syria and Palestine at the present time is about two millions, i.e. about equal to the number of the Israelites at the exodus; and now more than three-fourths of the country lies desolate. Many parts of it are infested with wild beasts, which commit great ravages upon the crops, the flocks, and even sometimes upon the people. Were it not for the rifle some districts would be almost uninhabitable. It was a wise and merciful arrangement, therefore, that the ancient inhabitants were expelled by little and little; for had they been driven out at once, at a period when wild beasts were far more abundant than now, and when the rifle was unknown, the occupation of the country would have been almost an impossibility.—P.

cously condemned; and let infidels dare to tell what milder sentence they would have passed. C.]

Ver. 6. [Holy people. A special or peculiar people, as quoted from the Septuagint, 1 Pe. 2. 9: the original import of the word is that of a private property fenced around for protection. This protection lies in God's special providence which watches over and guards his people, and in the promises and provisions of the everlasting promise, ordered in all things and sure, 2 Sa. 23. 5. C.]

Ver. 10. [Hate. Thoughtless sinners often imagine or pronounce it impossible to hate God. But did not Ahab hate Micahiah because he told him the truth of God; and did not the Jews hate Christ even to death, because he preached mercy to the chief of sinners, while he discovered and rebuked the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, and denounced the immorality of an adulterous generation? To hate God, is not merely to hate him personally—which thoughtless sinners think impossible—but it is to hate the restraint of his commandments, or the holiness of his injunctions, which the feelings and the conduct of sinners do constantly exemplify. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God in love rules manknewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

4 Thy^a raiment waxed not¹ old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years.

5 Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, 'as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, to 'walk in his ways, and to fear him.

7 For the LORD thy God 'bringeth thee into a good land; a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates; a land of olive² and honey;

9 A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a 'land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.³

10 Whenⁱ thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God for the good land which he hath given thee.

11 Beware^k that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

12 Lest when thou 'hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;

14 Then thine heart be 'lifted up, and thou forget the LORD thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage;

15 Who 'led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water; who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint;

16 Who² fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not; that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end;

17 And thou 'say in thine heart, My power, and the might of mine hand, hath gotten me this wealth.

18 But thou shalt 'remember the LORD thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day.

19 And it shall be, 'if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish.

20 As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, so shall ye perish;⁴ because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

CHAPTER IX.

Moses dissuadeth them from the opinion of their own righteousness, 7 by rehearsing their several rebellions.

HEAR, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan 'this day,¹ to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, 'cities great, and fenced up to heaven;

2 A people great and tall, the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak?

3 Understand therefore this day, that the LORD thy God is he which 'goeth over before thee; as a consuming fire he 'shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee.

4 Speak^e not thou in thine heart, after that kind, even with respect to their life or death; they may submit whatever they have into the hands of his justice. It is dangerous to contract marriage or cultivate intimacy with wicked persons, particularly such as are of a false religion; and absurd is the expectation, that by such means we shall convert them, when God hath warned us that they will corrupt and seduce us. The faith of God's free love and mercy in keeping and redeeming us most graciously constrains to holy obedience; and what profit and pleasure is there in the faithful service of God! the most difficult duties are easily performed when we attempt them in the faith of God's promised presence and assistance. Why should we fear our strongest enemies, though greater and mightier than we are! If God be for us, who or what can be against us! Though our conquest be gradual, it shall be complete at last: and in all our strugglings let us beware of covetousness; for to enrich ourselves, even with the spoils of a false religion, may issue in our ruin; and it is therefore very important to remove and avoid every temptation to sin.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 2. To know. Not as if God sought to make a discovery of something unknown to God in the heart of man; 'for he knew what was in man,' Jn. 2.25; but that, by showing man to himself, he might humble him, by making him sensible of 'the plague of his own heart,' 1 Ki. 8.38. C.]

Ver. 3. [By every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live. Our Lord quotes these words in answer to the temptation of Satan, Mat. iv., exciting him to command 'stones to be made bread.' They contain three important facts: (1) That man is naturally supported by food. (2) That the production of food, and the power of digestion and nutrition, greatly and mainly depend upon the 'word of God.' The truth of this statement is evidenced by the productive powers of all countries where the gospel even comparatively prevails, when contrasted with the 'parched land' of the 'rebels' against God, Ps. 68.6; and still farther, when the power of conscience is taken into account in all its bearings upon guilt, enmity, pardon, or peace with God; the influence of which, upon bodily health, is matter of daily experience. (3) That the real life of man resides not in the body, that bread can sustain, but in the soul; of which 'the word of God,' heard and believed, is the only efficient nutriment, Is. 55.3. C.]

Ver. 8. [Olive-oil was, and still is, one of the staple products of Palestine. The Hebrew word debash, here translated 'honey,' may signify a conserve or syrup of grapes, which is now largely used in Palestine as an ordinary article of food. Its Arabic name is dibs, manifestly identical with the Hebrew. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—With great care and skill should ministers promote holiness among their people; and there is need to turn promises and providences every way, to lead men to Jesus, the tree of life. To mortify our pride—commemorate our peevishness—and render the wisdom, holiness, and mercy of God familiar, let us observe the frowns and smiles of God's providence towards us. Trials are as necessary as deliverances; nor can anything hinder God from supplying us in the greatest straits. If the enjoyment of an earthly Canaan, much more should the faith of the heavenly inheritance, animate to an earnestness in universal holiness and gratitude. But how difficult is it to maintain humility of mind amidst remarkable prosperity! or fellowship with God amidst a flow of earthly enjoyments! for this purpose, let me always remember that forgetfulness of God, ingratitude, and pride, bring into the prosperity by which they are occasioned the most fearful curse; and let me wisely observe the providences of God in my lot. To humble me, and discover my own naughtiness, let me remember the wilderness-straits to which I have been reduced. To recommend JEHOVAH to my heart, let me consider what he hath done for me, and promised to me. Let every peculiar excellency in my lot be a mean of elevating my heart to God himself, my goodly inheritance. In the day of my adversity, let me be joyful in him; and in the day of my prosperity, let me consider that all comes from him, and may be withdrawn at his pleasure; and while the loving-kindness of God allures me to holiness, let his terrors awe and deter me from sin.

CROSSING THE JORDAN—THE SACRED RIVER OF CHRISTENDOM. [DEUT., ix: 1.]
 —“Hear, O Israel; Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great, and fenced up to heaven.”
 We give here a picture of the natives crossing the Jordan in a ferry-boat. The manner of crossing illustrated above, however, was totally different from the way the children of Israel crossed that river under the leadership of Joshua. They forded it. There are a great many fords in the river. Dr. George Adam Smith describes the Jordan as a rapid, muddy water with zigzag curves, and the depth varying from ten to twelve feet in the sixty-five miles of descent. The descent is 610 feet from the sea of Galilee and is sometimes over forty feet a mile. Jordan means down-comer.

the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness² the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land; but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land; but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that he may perform the word which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand therefore, that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked people.³

7 ¶ Remember, and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 Also⁴ in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you, to have destroyed you.

9 When I was gone up into the mount, to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights; I neither did eat bread⁴ nor drink water:

10 And⁵ the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone, written with the finger of God: and on them was written according to all the words which the LORD spake with you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore the LORD spake unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people.

14 Let⁶ me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 So I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount⁶ burned with fire: and

2 Let us mark with what specialty God dwells upon the fact, that the children of Israel were not installed in Canaan for their righteousness, but that the seven nations were driven out before them for their wickedness. Self-righteousness is the constitutional disease of human nature, a disease ever recurring, even under the regimen of grace. God therefore suits the remedy to the disease; and no less than three times (ver. 4, 5, 6) repeats the solemn denial of Israel's righteousness as the moving cause of his providential decisions. — Note. The abundance of grace is the sole ground of salvation; the wickedness of men the sole ground of judgment. — C.

4 Unlike most of the miraculous recitals of Moses, for which we have the national attestation; for this we have no direct evidence beyond his own personal testimony; and wherefore should infidelity question, doubt, or deny that testimony? What end of self-interest had Moses to serve by it? what vainglory could he derive from it? — None! Independent of the evidence which his miraculous works and prophetic endowments bear to his divine commission, his character alone is sufficient pledge for the veracity of his statement. Should infidelity deny the truth of the statement on any alleged impossibility of Moses sustaining so long a fast; it must do so, not merely by denying the miraculous power of God, but by forgetting all the laws by which mind operates upon body; and by which

6 The whole object of Moses in recounting the various acts of sin and rebellion on the part of the Israelites is to show them that it never could have been on account of any righteousness on their part that God was pleased to give them Canaan. Instead of reward they richly deserved punishment. That punishment was only averted by the repeated and earnest intercession of Moses. The Canaanites were driven out of their country because of sin; and the Israelites were introduced into it in the richness of divine mercy. — P.

7 From comparing ver. 9 with ver. 18, 25, some have concluded that Moses fasted at three several times, forty days and forty nights; but a more attentive examination of ver. 25 will show that it is not a third fast, but merely a reference to the second (ver. 16), for it does not say 'then,' but, 'thus I fell down.' — C.

the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.⁵

18 And I fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

19 (For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you.) But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust; and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

22 And at Taberah, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath.

23 Likewise when the LORD sent you from Kadesh-barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 Ye have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.⁶

25 Thus I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights,⁷ as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

26 I prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord God, destroy not thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin;

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—The greater our enemies and impediments in the way of our duty, the more shall the power of God be magnified in our overcoming them. God can easily find instruments to execute his justice upon a people devoted to destruction; and his promises and threatenings are most certainly performed in their due time. Though judgment may be delayed, yet sin will at last make the most fearful havoc in nations and families, however great and powerful; and yet it is hard to keep the very worst of men from trusting and glorying in their own fancied works of righteousness. But to keep us humble amidst many and great mercies, let us search the records which conscience keeps of our sins. Nothing but obstinate blindness can support us in a good opinion of ourselves. But thanks be to God that, where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound; thanks for that infinite mercy, that such a wicked generation have brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 Yet they are thy 'people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power, and by thy stretched-out arm.

CHAPTER X.

¹ God's mercy in restoring the two tables, ⁶ in continuing the priesthood, ⁸ in separating the tribe of Levi, ¹⁰ in hearkening unto Moses' suit for the people. ¹² An exhortation to obedience.

At that ^atime the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou breakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And ^bI made an ark of shittim-wood,¹ and hewed^c two tables of stone like unto the first, and ^dwent up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And he wrote on the tables,² according to the first writing, the ten commandments,³ which the LORD spake unto you in the mount, ^eout of the midst of the fire, in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And ^fI turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, ^gas the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ And⁴ the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera: ^hthere Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

7 From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

8 ¶ At that time the LORD ⁱseparated the tribe of Levi, to ^kbear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and to bless in his name, unto this day.

9 Wherefore^l Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD ^mis his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.⁵

² The stone tablets were hewn and prepared by Moses; but the commandments were written upon them by Jehovah himself. This the LORD promised to do, as is stated in Ex. 34. 1: 'I will write upon these tables,' &c. From ver. 28 of the same chapter, it might at first sight appear that the words were written by Moses: 'And he wrote;' but a close examination shows that the pronoun refers to JEHOVAH.—P.

⁹ It seems probable that the reason for the insertion of the note of travel in ver. 6, 7, was the fixing of the exact time and place when the Levites were formally declared to have no allotted possessions because they were the Lord's ministers. The journey here noted was part of the final one from Kadesh to the plains of Moab. The route lay down the Arabah, and was consequently in or near that course which they had taken on a previous occasion (see note on Nu. 33. 36). Some of the stations are the same; Gudgodah is doubtless Hor-hagidgad. The whole narrative, however, is very obscure. It ought to be remembered that we have here only an outline of Moses' final address to Israel. Such isolated facts of history are mentioned as bore upon the object he had specially in view—to press upon them the necessity of full obedience to the law.—P.

⁸ This is mentioned as a miracle of divine mercy. Notwithstanding all the sufferings and persecutions they endured in Egypt, God blessed them with such increase as had never been known. Moses employs every art and power—threats, promises, entreaties, appeals to patriotism, gratitude—for the purpose of inciting the people to love and serve God.—P.

a most prevailing intercessor to stand in the gap to turn away the Lord's wrath and indignation from them.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 6. Mosera. Biblical critics generally concur in rejecting ver. 6-9 as an interpolation originating in the mistake of some transcriber. But this is a mode of solving a difficulty always to be regarded with much jealousy; and when, as in this case, it is unsupported by authority of Hebrew MSS., it is utterly to be rejected. The two itineraries stand thus: Nu. xxxiii., Moseroth, Bene-jaakan, Hor-hagidgad, Jotbathah. De. x., Beeroth of Bene-jaakan, that is, of the children of Jaakan, Mosera, Gudgodah, Jotbathah. Now where in all this lies any insuperable difficulty? Let Bene-jaakan, as is common with other names, signify both a large district and a particular place, and the whole difficulty disappears. Thus, in the itinerary of Deuteronomy, they depart from Beeroth in the district of Bene-jaakan, and encamp at Moserah, another name of the place called Bene-jaakan; and in the itinerary of Numbers, they depart from Moseroth, another name for Beeroth, and encamp in the particular place called Bene-jaakan, another name for Mosera. The difficulty supposed to arise from the separation of the tribe of Levi at Mount Sinai, and not at Jotbath, as here asserted, will be solved by recollecting that the special separation of Levi here recounted refers to the disinheritance of the tribe, ver. 9. Upon the apparently different localities assigned to the death of Aaron no stress can be laid, inasmuch as we are totally ignorant of the exact geographical positions of the several stages of the journeyings, and of the extent of the districts designated by the different names. To account for the introduction of these four verses without any seeming connection—let it be recollected, that it is to account for the safe-keeping of the tables of the law and the ark, by the special appointment of Eleazar to succeed Aaron in the priesthood, and the whole tribe of Levi to attend upon the ordinances. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy is it that the law, as a command, is fulfilled and hid in Christ, our gospel-ark! And what a sure token of divine favours yet in store for a people when God raises up faithful ministers and earnest wrestlers at a throne of grace! Marvelous indeed are God's returns of love for hatred—of mercies for rebellion and provocation; and inexcusable, therefore, is disobedience to a God so great and gracious! But it is honourable and becoming to walk in love, as God himself walketh. It is a most fearful proof of the corruption of our nature, and the necessity of a gracious change, that we need so much urging to that which is so remarkably at once our great duty and interest. But let me always retain in mind the wonderful character and the peculiar mercies of my God, the God of Israel; esteem it my glory to belong to him; and make him the only object of my fear, my praise, and joy.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 12. The changing seasons, which God himself regulates, made Palestine fertile. In Egypt human labour and skill regulated the irrigation by which the land was made productive. In Palestine the 'early rain' of autumn moistened the GREEK CHURCH, NAZARETH—NEAR ST. MARY'S WELL. [DEUT., x : 12-22.]—"And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul," etc. Above we have a picture of the Greek Church in Nazareth, the city of our Savior. This can be very aptly placed in connection with this portion of the Word of God concerning the importance of the Law, for without Jesus Christ the Law cannot be obeyed, for "what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit." The Greek Church in Nazareth is just above St. Mary's Well, where the Mother of Jesus often came to draw water.

1 An exhortation to obedience, 2 by their own experience of God's great works, 8 by promise of God's great blessings, 16 and by threatenings. 18 A careful study is required in God's words. 26 The blessing and curse is set before them.

THEREFORE ^athou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway.

2 ¶ And ^bknow ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen ^cthe chastisement of the LORD your God, his greatness, his mighty hand, and his stretched-out arm,

3 And ^dhis miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land;

5 And ^ewhat he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place; and uncertain in time, duration, and degree. Still, that the seasons follow a law of nature, both observation and analogy confirm. But what is a law of nature but another name for the will of God impressed upon any part of his works? The seasons therefore are neither from blind chance, nor material elements, but from the Almighty; and, like all his other servants, are made at his will the vehicles of his wrath or of his blessing. Happy the husbandman whose eyes, enlightened by grace, can read both the mercies and judgments of God in the shower and the sunshine, in the drought and in the storm, who, when his 'labour fails,' can yet 'joy in the God of his salvation,' and who, when his 'barns overflow' with plenty, forgets not the hand that gave it.—C.

hearken diligently unto my commandments, which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul, 14 That ⁿI will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain, and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

15 And ^oI will send⁷ grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat, and be full.

16 Take^p heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them;

17 And then the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he ^qshut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 ¶ Therefore shall ye ^rlay up these my words in your heart, and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 And^s ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 And thou ^tshalt write them upon the door-posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

21 That your ^udays may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 ¶ For ^vif ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him;

23 Then^y will the LORD drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 Every^z place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea, shall your coast be.⁸

25 There ^ashall no man be able to stand before you: for the LORD your God shall lay the fear of you, and the dread of you, upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath said unto you.

REFLECTIONS.—Thus let my love to the LORD always work in holy obedience to all his commandments. Let the remembrance of his early kindness to me and mine, and his awful judgments on others around me, stir me up to the utmost circumspection in my conduct. God's mercies should leave an impression on us which neither time nor age should ever efface. And while sins shorten men's days, and cause countries to spue out their inhabitants, yea, often into ruin, let me carefully observe God's kindness, even in outward things. Mercies coming from the immediate hand of God are doubly sweet. Godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come. But if we refuse to be influenced by God's mercies, we must sink under his judgments. When the heart is filled with the knowledge and love of God's word, the tongue will be as the pen of a ready writer in speaking of divine things. Let me, therefore, by all means, labour to fix a deep sense of spiritual things upon my own soul, and be careful to transmit the knowledge of them unto men: for true religion stamps a reverence on its professors, which keeps even their enemies in awe of them; and godliness, transmitted with our possessions, is the surest way to perpetuate them in our families. How plain and evident, in God's word, is the way to happiness and misery! And if men will not see, will not walk aright, their blood must be on their own head. Since, then, the blessings and curses

THE BRIDGE OVER THE JORDAN—NEAR WHERE THE JEWS SET UP IN DAN THE GOLDEN CALF. [DEUT., xi: 31.]—"For ye shall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the land which the Lord your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein." The particular bridge illustrated in the picture is over the Hasbany prong of the Jordan. It is called the Bridge of Jacob's Daughters. It is three miles from Dan, and on the direct road from Jerusalem to Damascus. The Jordan as we see it in the picture is very wild because of the deep gorge through which it dashes down. The banks on either side are lined with oleanders, willows, honey-suckles and other sweet and flowering shrubs. The noise of the water, and the charming scent of the flowers, together with the natural scene combine to make this place romantic and beautiful. The bridge is very old, and is assigned by tradition to the time of the Romans.

ments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day:

28 And a ^acurse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt^e put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal.¹

30 Are they not on the ^fother side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the² champaign ^gover against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh?³

31 For ye ^hshall pass over Jordan, to go in to possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein.

32 And ye shall observe ⁱto do all the statutes and judgments which I set ^jbefore you this day.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Monuments of idolatry are to be destroyed. 4 The place of God's service is to be kept. 15, 23 Blood is forbidden. 17, 20, 26 Holy things must be eaten in the holy place. 19 The Levite is not to be forsaken. 29 Idolatrous practices are not to be inquired after.

THESE are the ^astatutes and judgments which ye shall observe to do ^bin the land which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, ^call the days that ye live upon the earth.

2 Ye^d shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall possess¹ served their gods, upon the high ^emountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree.

3 And ye shall overthrow² their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, ^fand destroy the names of them out of that place.

4 ¶ Ye ^gshall not do so unto the LORD your God.³

5 But ^hunto the place which the LORD your God shall choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his ⁱhabitation⁴ shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

¹ These two mountains lie to the westward of Jordan, in the lot of Ephraim. They are in height from 2,700 to 2,800 ft., extending from east to west in lines nearly parallel, with the beautiful valley of Shechem or Sychar, now called Nablous, about 200 paces in width, between them. They are about a league in length, and approach in form to a semicircle, Mount Ebal to the north. Travellers have represented Mount Gerizim as more fertile and picturesque than Ebal, so that the two mountains in their natural aspect and condition were, in some degree, emblems of the blessing of fertility and beauty, and the curse of barrenness and deformity.—L.

The mention of the Arabah and Gilgal is connected with the territory of the Canaanites, and not with the situation of Ebal and Gerizim; while the last clause of the verse refers to the mountains, and has no connection with the Arabah or Gilgal.—P.

tutions of Moses all looked forward to a fixed place of worship, instead of the movable tabernacle constructed in the wilderness; and while they inculcated the worship of God in spirit everywhere—saying, 'Thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart'—yet certain outward acts of worship were strictly reserved for one place. This precaution was intended to guard against the inventions of will-worship and peril of idolatry, while it also typified the merging of all divine institutions into the one temple of the 'body of Christ,' and the concentrating of all worshippers around his one sacrifice, *Jn. 2. 21. ⁸ One great object of the Mosaic ordinances was to associate the idea of God's goodness and presence with food, so that every call of bodily hunger or thirst might lead the soul to hunger and thirst after his righteousness, and that every gratification of the appetite might lift up the heart in thankfulness to the Giver of all good.—C.

⁶ It seems that when the Israelites were in the wilderness, many of the ceremonial observances enjoined in the law were omitted. It was often matter of necessity to do so. CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 12. Ye shall rejoice. The Mosaic institutions had their days 'to afflict the soul,' because of sin, but their general aspect was joy, because of righteousness. Nor was this joy merely personal, but extended to all the household, embracing in its benevolence the Levite, the widow, the poor, and the stranger.—Note. Family religion is an indispensable

Christian duty, but to be efficient it must be united with that 'charity which is kind,' and instead of being exhibited in moroseness or austerity of aspect, manner, or government, should be conducted with that 'joy in the Holy Ghost' that 'adorns the gospel of God our Saviour,' and governs the household by the authority of love, rather than by the hand of power. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Abominable to God is all will-worship. And it is impossible to reconcile the worship of God and mammon—of Christ and Belial. But, in the best-ordered churches on earth, something will still be defective. Perfect purity is reserved for the heavenly Canaan: and therefore, in cases of necessity, some ordinances of worship may be omitted, which in other circumstances would render us highly culpable. The excellency of worship lies not in any pompous form, but in its exact correspondence with God's prescriptions. Let me then not merely cease from evil, but learn to do well. Let me attend to, and improve, every instituted ordinance of fellowship with God. Let his institutions, not any custom or law of men, whether under the best or the worst of governments, be the standard shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite that is within thy gates: and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou puttest thine hands unto.

19 ¶ Take heed to thyself that thou forsake not the Levite⁹ as long as thou livest¹ upon the earth.

20 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, as he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh, (because thy soul longeth to eat flesh,) thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

21 If² the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

22 Even³ as the roe-buck and the hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them; the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike.³

23 Only be⁴ sure⁵ that thou eat not the blood: for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh.

24 Thou shalt not eat it; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water.

25 Thou shalt not eat it; that it may go well⁶ with thee, and with thy children after thee, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

26 Only^h thy holy things which thou hast, and thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose.

27 And thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

28 Observe¹ and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.

And never should his ministers be straitened, or his poor starved, while I am able to relieve them.

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 3. Proveth you. Our Lord informs us, Mat. 24. 24, that 'there shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very elect.' And Josephus relates the fulfilment of this prophecy (Ant. xx. 7; Wars. ii. 13), when many impostors persuaded the people to follow them into the desert, promising to show them great signs and wonders in evidence of their commission; and again (Wars. vii. 11) he records the influence of one to entice the Jews to go up into the temple, which being set on fire, even contrary to the anxious wish of Titus, by one of his soldiers, 6000 perished in the flames. A sign or wonder requires three things to render it evidence of a divine commission: (1) Prophecy, in which we have the assertion of omniscience. (2) Fulfilment, in which we have the evidence of power. (3) Consistency with known and divinely established principles, in which we have the evidence of truth, which is uniform and necessarily accordant in all its parts. The first evidence might be imitated by great sagacity; the second, by extraordinary skill; and therefore the third is required, which never can be imitated by any impostor. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Provoking to God, and dangerous to men, is the sin of idolatry, with respect to the object or means of worship; yet sinners are much set upon it, and need to be held back by the greatest restraints. With what care, what zeal, what impartiality, ministers and magistrates ought therefore to oppose the very first appearance of it! No testimony, however strongly supported, is admissible against the revealed truths of God. No pretence of inspiration from God, no semblance of miracles, no tie of natural affection, ought to make us connive at the seducers. Though

8 Thou shalt not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shalt thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him;

9 But thou shalt surely kill him: thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death,³ and afterwards the hand of all the people.

10 And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.⁴

11 And all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

12 ¶ If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, the children of Belial, are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known;

14 Then shalt thou inquire, and make search, and ask diligently: and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you;

15 Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God; and it shall be an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.

17 And there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing to thine hand; that the LORD may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and show thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers;⁶

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

temptations be doubly bewitching which come through those whom we love, and hope of secrecy and security in sin is a great snare to lead men into it, yet let us remember, that to conceal or protect such criminals is to render ourselves partakers in their crimes. If they are become obstinate in their evil way, they ought no longer to be reckoned as conscientiously mistaken persons, but as children of Belial, who are perfectly lost to all manner of virtue, and become nuisances and plagues to both church and state. If their quality or multitude protect them from human justice, the justice of God will shortly find them out; for all that depart from him shall surely perish. But in our zeal for the pure worship of God, we must at once testify our detestation of idolatry or superstition, and plainly manifest that in our zeal we have no eye to promote our own carnal advantage. And whatever power magistrates may have from God to punish such evil-doers, for the preservation of the true religion where it is, they can show no warrant for the exertion of force in the propagation of it.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—If I am the Lord's—it, by his love, his blood, through my faith, he hath saved me from the world—let me never affect conformity to the foolish, sinful, and barbarous customs of it. If God himself be my God and my ALL, let me never idolatrously mourn for the

YE are the children of the LORD your God. Ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead:

7 Nevertheless these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, nor touch their dead carcass.

9 ¶ These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters; all that have fins and scales shall ye eat:

10 And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat; it is unclean unto you.

⁹ These animals are now specified for the first time, probably because the people were about to enter Canaan, where they abounded. In the desert most of them were not found, and consequently it was useless to name them when the law regarding clean and unclean beasts was first promulgated.

The ail, 'hart,' is perhaps a generic name for all animals of the antelope kind having twisted horns. Tsebi, 'the roe-buck,' is the ordinary gazelle, which is so common on the plains of Syria. Yachmur, 'the fallow-deer,' is the oryx, a large species of antelope with long horns, twisted like a piece of rope. It abounds among the mountains of Arabia and Eastern Syria. I have seen some splendid specimens near Palmyra. Akko, 'wild goat,' is probably a species of gazelle, for the Hebrew name of wild goat is yael. See 1 Sa. 24.2. Dishon, 'pygarg,' is the Oryx addax, a large antelope with long twisted horns. The teo, 'wild ox,' is supposed to be the Nubian oryx, which is found in Arabia. Zemer, 'chamois,' is in all probability the wild sheep, formerly abundant in Southern Palestine, and still found on the borders of Egypt.—P.

¹⁴ The classes of unclean beasts, birds, and fishes, can be easily distinguished, but the species are seldom more than conjectured. Such minute knowledge was unnecessary to the great ends of the law, and therefore is wisely withheld. The Scriptures do indeed possess everything that can excite curiosity and study, so far as they are useful; but whenever we approach the limits of mere arrangement and nomenclature, the Scriptures become silent.—C.

¹⁵ Here again the excellence of the divine law is most apparent; nothing is to be taken on vague report, no encouragement is to be given to private pique or public jealousy; no lure is held out to covetousness; but as the whole city cannot be sued in court, and are perhaps too strong for the law, so long as their guilt is unproved; the authorities must (1) inquire; (2) make search; (3) ask diligently; and, if there remain the benefit of a doubt, the city must receive it; and, until the report be proved certain, no proceedings can be taken against them.

COURTYARD OF THE ENGLISH ORPHANAGE—NEAR THE SITE OF THE HOME OF JOSEPH AND MARY. [DEUT., xiv: 21.]—"And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the Lord thy God." All the sacrifices and offerings made to God in the Old Testament history of the church were types of the sinless One who was to come, and who was to bear in his own body the sins of the whole world. "For by one offering, He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Hebrews, x: 14. "But with the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."—I. Peter, i: 19. "That he might present it to himself a glorious church not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy, and without blemish."—Eph., v: 27. We give as an illustration of this portion of Scripture a scene in Nazareth where the great offering without blemish, Jesus Christ, grew up.

(1) Because many beasts die of acute diseases, whose flesh is in a perfectly sound and nutritive condition; and this permissive law afforded an opportunity of bestowing in mercy to a stranger what must have gone to feed the dogs or the wild beasts. (2) It seems to have been intended by this law to teach the Jew that God gave not the law to the Gentile by the standard of the ceremonial law; a lesson which, under the New Testament, it required a miraculous vision and a messenger from heaven to inculcate upon an apostle; and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit to render tolerable in the church, A.C. 10. 3, 9-15; 11. 1-18.—C.

¹ The seventh year a year of release for the poor. ⁷ It must be no hindrance to lending or giving. ¹² An Hebrew servant, ¹⁶ except he will not depart, must in the seventh year go forth free and well furnished. ¹⁹ All firstling males of the cattle are to be sanctified unto the Lord.

AT the end of ^{every} seven years thou shalt make a release.

2 And this is the manner of the release: Every creditor that lendeth ^{ought} unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release.

3 Of ^a foreigner thou mayest exact it again; but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release;

8 But ^{thou} shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

9 Beware ^{that} there be not a thought ⁱⁿ thy wicked ^{heart}, saying, The seventh year, the assembling before God, to render us faithful in his service; that the ways of religion abound with joys and pleasures, and afford the surest grounds of thankfulness; and that there is the greatest advantage in kindness to God's ministers, the poor, the fatherless, and widows. Let him therefore demand what he will for his service out of my outward estate, and may I give it cheerfully and seasonably! God loveth a cheerful giver; and will supply all my need, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 1. Release. The intelligent Brown Patterson, in his note on this passage in the commentary of his revered relative, understands by release, a mere suspension of the demand for the current year. Le Clerc and Michaelis are of the same opinion, and Josephus must be understood as agreeing with them, as he mentions the extinction of debts every fiftieth year, and is silent about it on the seventh. From considering the whole passage to ver. 12, we are nevertheless convinced that this was another specimen of the Mosaic poor-laws, and that it required the entire extinction of all the money debts (but no others) of the absolutely poor. A law which, as an auxiliary to the other Mosaic poor-laws, we believe to be more preservative of good character in the poor, more exciting to benevolence in the rich, more encouraging to individual industry, and in the end more economical to the nation, than any other poor-law of mere human devising. C.]

Ver. 6. [Lend. The Jews, ever since the time of their dispersion, have been known in Europe as the most active money-agents; the very circumstance of their dispersion giving them means of intelligence and management which no other people possess; and by their power over the rates of exchange, and of giving or withholding credit to governments, they have largely influenced the destinies of many nations in whose counsels they never appeared. C.]

Ver. 8. [Lend. Ex. 22. 25 provided against the extortion of usury from the poor; the text enforces the duty of lending. Together they form an important branch of the Mosaic poor-laws, and an essential requisite in Christian character. C.]

Ver. 9. [Cry unto the Lord against thee. Not in the language of imprecation or curse against him who refuses to supply the idle or the profligate, but in the language of a suffering child, crying to its heavenly Father in its distress, and making known its wants to him who 'feeds the ravens when they cry,' and 'will not disregard the sighing of the needy.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In this year of release I behold the acceptable, the evangelical, and the eternal year of God's redeemed; in which we, infinite debtors to the law and justice of God, are justified from all things; and we, bond-sinners of mankind, are restored to our liberty, and enriched by his grace with blessings innumerable and everlasting. But let me think also how irreligious and inhumane is severity towards poor but honest debtors; it entails a curse upon our property. And it is base to make God's kindness to the poor an occasion of our unkindness to them. To refuse lending to them, if industrious, when we have God to be their surety, who will repay us with usury, is absurd: but especially it is dangerous to have their cry ascending to heaven against us. And often will it be found, what we call prudence, in withholding from them, is held extremely sinful and criminal before God. He knows and remarks every thought of our hearts; year of release, is at hand; and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought, and he cry unto the LORD against thee, and it be sin unto thee.

10 Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.⁷

11 For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

12 ¶ And if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years, then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty:

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy wine-press: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath blessed thee thou shalt give unto him.

15 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to-day.

16 And it shall be, if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; (because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee;)

17 Then thou shalt take an awl, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever:⁸ and also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise.⁹

18 It shall not seem hard unto thee when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth a double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

19 ¶ All the firstling males that come of thy herd, and of thy flock, thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep:

20 Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year, in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

21 And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy God:

22 Thou shalt eat it within thy gates; the 8 For ever. This phrase always signifies that the thing of which it is spoken is unlimited in time. It is an absolute for ever where no limit exists, as when it is said, 'The Lord shall endure for ever,' Ps. 9.7; or a relative for ever, where such limit as in the text is either implied or declared.—C.

9 This form of procedure was gone through under the cognizance of the magistrate, Ex. 21.5. 6. Whatever was the meaning or origin of this practice, it was one common in the East, and is very frequently alluded to by ancient heathen writers. Some such regulations were of great importance both to the slave, to show that there was on the one hand no claim to detain him beyond the period of release if he did not desire it; and on the other no pretence for turning him off when old or enfeebled, or unable to provide for himself. It appears from the passage that female servants were purchased for labour only as well as males, and that they were under the same regulation.—I.

1 When the passover was first instituted, the lamb was ordered to be killed in each house, the blood sprinkled on the door-posts, and the flesh roasted and eaten within. Here a great change is made. They were expressly forbidden to kill the paschal lamb in their houses; the lambs were all to be taken to the tabernacle or temple, and killed there by the priests alone. It will be observed, too, that the killing of the lamb is here called a sacrifice, i.e. an animal slain and offered to God as an expiation for sin. So the apostle says, 'Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us.' The passover was one of the three great feasts which it was necessary for all adult males to observe in Jerusalem.—P.

OBSERVE the month of Abib, and keep the passover unto the LORD thy God: for in the month of Abib the LORD thy God brought thee forth out of Egypt by night.

2 Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the passover unto the LORD thy God, of the flock and the herd, in the place which the LORD shall choose to place his name there.

3 Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction; (for thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste;) that thou mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life.

4 And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days; neither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day at even, remain all night until the morning.

5 Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee:

6 But at the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt.

7 And thou shalt roast and eat it in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose; and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents.¹

8 Six days² thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly³ to the LORD thy God; thou shalt do no work therein.

9 ¶ Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn.

10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with a tribute⁴ of a free-will-offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

11 And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD and it is not so much the gift as the temper of the giver that he regards. Servants likewise ought to be treated with tenderness and kindness, especially if found faithful.—It is important to watch against every suggestion which may divert us from our duty, or discourage us in it.—But while in these firstlings I see Jesus, and all his redeemed, devoted to the honour of God, according to their respective purity and stations, let me think with what exactness everything belonging to the Lord ought to be used in his service in the very manner prescribed by himself.

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 21. Trees near unto the altar of the Lord. The famous Roman law of the twelve tables enjoined the planting and preservation of sacred groves—the law of God expressly and repeatedly denounces them, De. 12. 3. The reason of the difference is plain; heathenism sanctioned a system that not only legalized but attempted to sanctify impurity, by the character of its deities and the nature of their worship; nay, according to the testimony of Pliny (b. xii. c. 1), the heathen not only adored the images glittering with gold and silver, but the groves themselves, and their solemn silence. In a warm climate, the temptation to retire to shady groves being great, God proportions to that circumstance the frequency and speciality of their prohibition. C.]

12 And ¹thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt: and thou shalt observe and do these statutes.

13 ¶ Thou² shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine.⁶

15 Seven⁸ days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands; therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.

16 ¶ Three⁴ times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and ⁵they shall not appear before the LORD empty.

The constant reference to gates indicates a state of society in the midst of enemies; these gates were consequently not merely the places of exit and entrance, but of watch and guard. This state, requiring the presence of civil and military officers, rendered the gate or the adjoining guard-rooms the most convenient places of summary jurisdiction; for cases requiring more deliberate consideration, places of greater privacy and retirement were provided; and these in Jerusalem seem to have been either in the private palace appropriated to the high-priest, Mat. 26. 3, 58-69, or a public court of civil and criminal law, Jn. 18. 28, 29, 33; 19. 9. —C.

nacle of God is in manhood, and is with men upon earth; with holy joy and gladness let us, and others instigated by us, observe our solemn feasts, and keep our eyes always fixed upon the Lamb of God. And while we ourselves are comforted of Christ, let us remember that it is both honourable and godlike to follow his example, and to manifest a tender regard to the poor and afflicted. Let us observe likewise, that magistrates are necessary for the regulation of mankind: and should be so placed that people may have easy access to them; and it is becoming that, in all their ministration, they show themselves of proper abilities

13 And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

14 ¶ When^o thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, ^oI will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

15 Thou ^oshalt in any wise set him king over thee whom the LORD thy God shall choose: one from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother.

^o This prohibition is founded upon principles natural and moral. (1) Canaan was a land of mountains and defiles, and unfit either for the rearing of horses or the use of cavalry. (2) God seeks to prevent intercourse with Egypt, which was anciently famous for horses. (3) He would restrain the spirit of conquest, which, in eastern countries, has been chiefly fostered by the possession of a numerous cavalry. (4) He would repress that spirit of extravagance and gambling—though the world calls them by gentler names—which is generated, especially among the rich, by the competition of horses; and which, in all countries where it has been fostered, has resulted in the dissolution of the manners of all ranks.—C.

7 The law here referred to, which the king was to copy, or have copied, for his private use and guidance, unquestionably signifies the Pentateuch—the whole of it as it was preserved in the keeping of the priests. What a noble lesson this is for the kings and rulers of the earth! The law of God should be their constant study; their guide in the management of public affairs; their rule of life in private.—P.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 The Lord is the priests' and Levites' inheritance. 3 The priest's due. 6 The Levite's portion. 9 The abominations of the nations are to be avoided. 15 Christ the prophet is to be heard. 20 The presumptuous prophet is to die.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, ^oshall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren; ^othe LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

3 ¶ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a ^osacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

4 The^d first-fruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him.

5 For the LORD thy God hath ^ochosen him out of all thy tribes, to stand to minister in the name of the LORD, him and his sons for ever.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he sojourned, and come ^owith all the desire of his mind unto the place which the LORD shall choose; and remarkable integrity. But dangerous is it, in the worship of God, to copy after the example of wicked and idolatrous men; his worship is pure and spiritual; he regards not the external appearance; but they who worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth.

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, ^oas all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 12. At first sight this seems a hard law, and even cruel, that the person who should object to or fail to carry out the sentence of priest or judge in any civil case should be put to death. It would have been both unjust and cruel had the priest been a mere temporal ruler; but he was the commissioned minister of God, and it is implied here that in cases of great difficulty and delicacy, such as those referred to, he should ask counsel of God. God, therefore, was the real judge in the case; and a refusal to submit to his judgment was treason against heaven. P.]

Ver. 14. [I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me. Moses, foreseeing by the prophetic spirit that the tide in popular opinion would one day turn in favour of monarchy, so far from pronouncing any authoritative opinion concerning the theoretical forms of government, addresses himself, by divine direction, to propound the true maxims and principles of all government. And when the period foreseen by Moses arrived, and the people demanded a king, 1 Sa. viii., the displeasure of Samuel neither arose from any sense of wounded pride or disappointed ambition, nor from any abstract objection to the kingly form of government, but from the self-will and practical atheism of the people, who never thought of consulting God upon so great an organic change, though Samuel was with them with Urim and Thummim. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—We ought to honour the Lord with the best that we have—the best of our time and abilities, the best of our age and strength. But apostasy from the true religion to the worship of idols is extremely wicked and ruinous. It is necessary that the execution of malefactors be as public and solemn as possible, that others may hear and fear. But, in matters of life and death, nothing less than the clearest evidence should be admitted. Great care must be taken at once to maintain the just rights of subjects and the lawful authority of magistrates: and we must obey, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake. To rebel against the lawful orders of government is to commit treason against the majesty of heaven. But, in order to secure respect to their government, magistrates ought to be deliberately set up: they ought to avoid whatever gratifies their lust or tends to corrupt them. God's word should be the supreme standard of their determinations. Piety, prudence, humble condescension, and equity should run through the whole of their conduct. No day should pass without reading of God's word. The fear of God powerfully induces to an obedience to his commands. And the higher our station is, the more exemplary and humble our conversation ought to be. Religion is the best security of thrones, and every other honour: and even in this world there is a great reward in keeping God's commandments.

CHAPTER XVIII. [Ver. 3. And the two cheeks and the maw. There is a difference between the Levitical portion here described, and that in Le. 7. 3. The reason of the difference seems to be, that the direction in Leviticus referred to the temporary allowance in the wilderness, that of the text to the permanent provision in Canaan; see De. 12. 1. C.—Delitzsch says, 'That this arrangement was not at variance with the command in Le. 7. 32, sq., but simply enjoins a further gift to the priests on the part of the people, in addition to those portions which were to be given to the Lord for his servants, is sufficiently evident from the context, since the heave-leg and wave-breast belonged to the offerings of Jehovah mentioned in ver. 1, which the priests had received as an inheritance from the Lord; . . . and also from the words of the present command, viz. that the portions mentioned were to be a right on the part of the people, on the part of those who slaughtered slain-offerings. P.]

Ver. 10. [Divination. This appears to be a general name for all the particular forms that follow, viz.—Observer of times. Some derive it from a word signifying a cloud; others, amongst whom is Gesenius, from a word signifying an eye. This is the most probable meaning, and includes every form of threatened injury to person or property from what is called an evil eye.—An enchanter. A pretended diviner by serpents, or the positions and movements of other animals.—A witch. One who resorts to charms, &c., for the injury of another.—A charmer. Most probably those who pretended to charm serpents, and produce strange effects by rhymes and incantations.—Consulter with familiar spirits. According to the Hebrew, a consulter with Ob. Thus, the Pythoess at Delphi, in Greece, pretended to be inspired by Apollo.—Wizard. 'A cunning man,' one who pretended to know secret things, past, present, or future.—Necromancer. One who pretended to consult or raise the dead, as the word signifies.—All these pretended arts are the products of ignorance, the nurses of superstition, and the forerunners and abettors of idolatry, and therefore most righteously condemned of God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Since God hath provided subsistence for ministers, they ought never willingly to entangle themselves in worldly business—farming, merchandise, or the like: for those who love God's ordinances as they ought, will not grudge to contribute to their support. None ought to supplant another with respect to what the Lord hath allotted him. But a worldly-minded minister is a SCANDAL to his profession—a LIVING LIE! God, indeed, most highly regards such ministers as leave their worldly all, and follow him, and do more in the church than men could desire of them. But it is shocking to find in countries privileged with gospel light, affectors of fellowship with devils, in charms, fortune-telling, witchcraft, and the like! and what a mercy it is if God has preserved us

INSCRPTION ON BRIDGE, GRAND MOSQUE, DAMASCUS—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS CONVERTED. [DEUT., xviii : 15-19.]—"The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me ; unto him ye shall hearken." The prophet referred to in this verse is the Lord Jesus Christ. He was the one who was to come in the fullness of time, who, according to Isaiah, was to be called the Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, and who was to sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice from henceforth even forever. How strange that upon the Grand Mosque in Damascus we should find written in Greek on the bridge : "Thy kingdom, O Christ, is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations." The Grand Mosque, an illustration of which we give above, is the most famous place of Mahomedan worship in Damascus.

9 ¶ When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations.

10 There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch,

11 Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer.

12 For^k all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee.

13 Thou shalt be perfect with the LORD thy God.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt possess,² hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath ^mnot suffered thee so to do.

15 ¶ Theⁿ LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken;

16 According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy God in Horeb, in the day of the assembly, saying, Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.

17 And the LORD said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken.

18 I^s will raise them up a Prophet³ from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.⁴

19 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words, which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

20 ¶ But the prophet which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall² die.

21 ¶ And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken?

22 When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

12 Christ was like to Moses in respect of personal excellences, intimacy with God, power over the church, and erection of a whole system of worship.

13 In place of all these imaginary and vain attempts to dive into futurity, or ascertain present duty, Moses promises a Prophet like to him.

14 This passage the ancient Jews always expounded of Messiah; and so it is applied, Ac.3.22; 7.37. See also Jn.1.45; 6.14. The points of resemblance are many—specially, early persecution—rejection by brethren—exile—divine commission—familiarity with God—miracles—faithfulness—above all, the office of Mediator, as Prophet, Priest, and King.—C.

16 It will scarcely be denied by any thoughtful critic, who closely examines the connection of this remarkable passage with the context, that the prophecy was intended to refer to prophets in general. The Israelites were commanded not to apply in any difficulty to enchanters, wizards, &c.; and to show that such a course was unnecessary as well as impious, the promise is given them, The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet, &c. If we restrict the reference exclusively to the Messiah, then the connection with the context is broken, and the force of the passage in a great measure destroyed. But while this is the case, it must be remembered that all the prophets were types of Christ; this prophecy was fulfilled in them, not in their personal, but in their typical character. It received, however, its final and complete fulfilment only in Christ, the great Antitype.—P.

20 The Israelites did not keep all God's commandments. They did not love God; on the contrary, they were guilty of repeated and gross acts of rebellion. Consequently 'all the land promised' to Abraham (Ge.15.18) was not given to them. The portion allotted to the tribes—from Dan to Beersheba—was only a fragment of the 'Land of Promise,' which extended from the Nile to the Euphrates. It does not appear, therefore, that the three additional cities of refuge were ever required.—P.

26 In a country where walls, hedges, and other such fences were, and still are, entirely unknown, except around gardens and orchards, and sometimes vineyards, the preservation of landmarks was a matter of no slight importance. A law forbidding their removal, and admission of their antiquity, intimate that they must have been generally stones, and of no great size.

27 Covetousness is one of the first general forms of sin—for it was a constituent of the original transgression—and covetousness of land more than covetousness of money, or any other specific form of this sin, has been the enemy of private peace, and the scourge of kingdoms. God, accordingly, prohibits this sin, by sanctioning the prescriptive usages of antiquity, and asserting his own original gift of the land to Abraham and his descendants.—C.

giveth thee, and thou succeedest¹ them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses;

2 Thou^b shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land,² which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way,³ and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

4 ¶ And this is the case of the slayer which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not in time past;⁴

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe to cut down the tree, and the head⁵ slippeth from the helve, and lighteth⁷ upon his neighbour, that he die; he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live:

6 Lest the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and slay him;⁸ whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not in time past.⁹

SIDE ALTAR, LATIN CHURCH, NAZARETH—SUPPOSED TO STAND OVER THE SITE OF JOSEPH'S HOME, IN WHICH JESUS GREW UP. [DEUT., xix.]—The 19th chapter of Deuteronomy speaks of the laws concerning the cities of refuge. We give as an illustration of this portion of Deuteronomy the side altar of the Latin church at Nazareth. This church stands in the city of our Savior's boyhood, and is said to be built on the site of the house in which with His parents He lived. The cities of refuge in a very important sense were all types of Christ. Christ is the great city of refuge, and all are safe who flee from their sins to Him, and none are safe who are away from Him. The penitent one who has fled to Christ for refuge may sing:

"Should storms of seven-fold thunder roll,
And shake the globe from pole to pole,
No flaming bolt shall daunt my face,
For Jesus is my hiding place."

sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

16 ¶ If a false witness rise up against any man, to testify against him that which is wrong;

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand ²before the LORD,⁶ before the priests and the judges which shall be in those days:

18 And the judges shall ³make diligent inquisition: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness,⁷ and hath testified falsely against his brother;

19 Then^r shall ye do unto him as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you.

20 And those which remain shall ⁸hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you.

6 Suits at law frequently originate from dishonesty, from covetousness, or from a contentious and revengeful spirit.

But such is the obscurity of rights, and the uncertainty of evidence, that they may originate where both parties are honest, disinterested, and peaceable. The only case in which a Christian may go to law in defence of his rights is when he can stand before the Lord, and refer to his examination and decision both the justice of his cause and the purity of his motives.—C.

7 On few points is modern jurisprudence more defective, and by consequence more injurious to the cause of truth and justice, than in the case of false witness or perjury—in fact so difficult, so problematical, if not impossible, is conviction, that a false witness is seldom prosecuted in a European Christian court of law. The Mosaic jurisprudence proceeded on a different principle, and pointed its judgment, not against constructive malice, but against simple intentional falsehood, and required no second prosecution, but proceeded at once to convict upon the evidence on record. Note, Christian legislators have yet much to learn from Moses in whose inspired laws, eternal moral principle, and not temporary expediency, constitutes the rule of procedure and decision.—C.

6 The Mosaic institutes were decidedly opposed to wars of aggression and the spirit of foreign conquest and acquisition. A single example will establish this fact:—Three times a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord God, Ex. 23. 17. A people so organized could never become aggressively warlike. The text, however, admits that there might be wars beyond the borders of Canaan, but provides only for cases where enemies will not make peace, and where, consequently, safety is best and soonest secured by seeking the enemy in his own country. Hasten, O Prince of peace! hasten the time when a nation shall no more rise against nation, nor kingdom against kingdom, and men shall learn war no more!—C.

9 The cities

shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an axe against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down, (for³ the tree of the field is man's life,) to employ⁴ them in the siege:

20 Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat,⁵ thou shalt destroy and cut them down; and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until it be subdued.⁶

CHAPTER XXI.

1 The expiation of an uncertain murder. 10 The usage of a captive taken to wife. 15 The first-born is not to be disinherited upon private affection. 18 A stubborn son is to be stoned to death. 22 The malefactor must not hang all night on a tree.

IF one^a be found slain in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him;¹

2 Then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth,² and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain:

3 And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke;

4 And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley, which is neither eared nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley:

5 And the priests, the sons of Levi, shall come near; (for them the LORD thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the LORD;) and by their word³ shall every controversy and every stroke be tried.

6 And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the slain man, shall wash their hands over the heifer that is beheaded in the valley:

7 And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it.

8 Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people

⁵ In warm climates, fresh or reserved fruits constitute a principal article of food: a law for the preservation of fruit-trees was therefore an ordinance of equal wisdom and humanity. But this law, like other of the divine institutions, was still further intended to check and restrain the spirit of aggressive war, which, like the wolf in the fold, destroys what it can neither retain nor carry away.—Note. The distinguishing humanity of the Mosaic laws stands prominent amongst the evidences of their divine origin.—C.

1 This follows very properly after the law he had delivered about making war; because then the bodies of dead men were most frequently found; about which the wisest lawgivers took the greatest care that inquisition should be made how and by whom they were slain. This appears by Plato, who, in his ninth book, De Legibus, hath a law something like to this, though far short of the solemnity that is here required to be used.—Patrick.

2 The institution of the coroner's inquest in British legislation is the nearest approach in modern times to this ancient and divine ordinance. This ordinance answers all the ends of the inquest, and with circumstances of more search and solemnity—while the religious aspect and management of the whole process gives evidence of an appointment from God, and not from man.—C.

r This law forms a national barrier against military licentiousness, while it provides a home and a protector for the fair and defenceless captive. Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, and lay not innocent blood unto⁴ thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them.

9 So shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

10 ¶ When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive,

11 And seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife;

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house, and she shall shave her head, and pare her nails;

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and bewail her father and her mother a full month: and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.⁶

14 And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise⁷ of her, because thou hast humbled her.

15 ¶ If a man have two wives,⁸ one beloved, and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the first-born son be her's that was hated:

16 Then it shall be, when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved first-born before the son of the hated, which is indeed the first-born:

17 But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first-born, by giving him a double portion of all that⁹ he hath: for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the first-born is his.¹

18 ¶ If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they unfit to fight with principalities and powers. God must be served heartily and willingly, or not at all. And though every saint ought to be courageous, yet ministers, who go before the host in fighting the Lord's battles, need distinguished boldness. Amazing is the mercy and long-suffering of God; he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! And surely then we ought to be forward in accepting, or even offering, terms of peace to such as have offended us! But dreadful is the case if men will not hear the calls of God's mercy, or if the preservation of his people make it necessary to ruin them: for infallibly certain is the success of those enterprises in which God is the director! It is necessary to remove all occasions and temptations to idolatry, or other wickedness, and to preserve every means of comfort, as God pleases to direct us.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 18. A stubborn and rebellious son. This provides for an extreme case of filial rebellion; for nothing but an extreme case could ever induce both a father and mother deliberately to accuse and witness against their own child. The sentence of death against drunkenness and gluttony, ver. 20, 21, may, to the modern inventors of fine and imprisonment, appear unreasonably, or even inhumanly, severe. But, let it be remembered, the sentence could not be inflicted, unless in the scarcely supposable case in which a father and mother were the hapless accusers; and then let it be remembered, that this was the sentence of him 'who knew what was in man,' and who never applied the judgment of severity till the remedies of mercy had been found unavailing; and whose judgments of severity were, in the end, the most merciful to the individual whom they sought to intimidate and deter from sin; and to society, whom they relieved from a nuisance, an infection, and a curse. O! that drunkards and gluttons would read first this sentence, and then sentences ten thousand times more awful, 1 Co. 6. 10 and Phi. 3. 19. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Murder ought by all means to be rendered as horrible and detested as possible: and every mean should be used to discover and bring murderers to condign punishment, and to avoid being partakers with other men in their sins; but, at the same time, no selfish affection ought to be regarded either in the giving or executing justice. However secretly sin be committed, God will discover and punish it at last: and if we cannot put away sin from our land, let us labour to pray it away.—Converts from idolatry ought not too rashly to be admitted into close connection with us: and before we take a partner for life, it is of infinite moment that we agree in religion.—Sudden passions ought to be restrained, till grace be given, and time taken for reflection: and we should labour to wean our affections from that which we inordinately love.—Kindness ought to be shown to such as God has mercifully reduced to misery and trouble; and indulgence be allowed to sorrows which flow from natural affection.—Our engagements ought never to be rashly formed, lest our honour or conscience be afterwards wounded by them; and such as have been any ways wronged by us are entitled to all possible satisfaction. But surely still greater regard ought to be shown to human souls, and care taken to prevent men's everlasting infamy and woe. But in these figures let me behold Jesus, the seed of the woman, brought down to our world, and slain by the rulers of Israel as a sacrifice for our awful crimes!—Jesus reserving

PLOWING ON SCOPUS—IN SIGHT OF THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS CRUCIFIED.
[Deut., xxi: 22.]—"And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree." We give this view of plowing on Scopus because it is in sight of the Mount Calvary, outside of the walls of Jerusalem, where the leading authorities now believe Christ was crucified. Scopus is a hill to the north of Jerusalem, and in reaching it from the Damascus gate we go directly by the Place of a Skull, where in all probability Christ was crucified. To be put to death on a tree was the most ignominious manner of death known among the Jews. None but the vilest criminals were subjected to such disgrace. So Peter knew how the Jews would regard his words when he said: "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus whom ye slew and hanged on a tree."

have chastened him, will not hearken unto them;

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out ^uunto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place;

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton and a drunkard.

21 And ^vall the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die: so ^zshalt thou put evil away from among you; and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin worthy^a of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou ^bhang him on a tree,

23 His body shall not ^cremain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; (for ^dhe that is hanged is accursed² of God;) that ^ethy land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

1 This law, so benevolent in every state of society, was peculiarly important in a country unclosed, and where the straying of animals would be proportionately frequent and dangerous. The laws of man's devising, in case of straying animals, bind to restitution or justice; human laws, in some other instances, reward humanity with honour or emolument; the divine laws alone bind to humanity and benevolence on the ground of principle, and that without fee or reward beyond the approbation of conscience and the will of our God.—C.

3 Minute legislation, when confined to detail, is always, in the end, perplexing and inefficient, and is the chief both of the marks and miseries of human laws—ever generating doubtful definitions, opening new doors for evasion, and ministering to the spirit of litigiousness. When, as in the text, the laws of Moses descend to minuteness, it is the minuteness of principle, and not of detail; and in this they manifest a legislative wisdom which should prove to every jurist, that their origin was from God. This law provided for propriety and modesty, in a climate where male and female dresses approached near to each other in character, and guarded against the licentiousness of idolatry to which the interchange of male and female attire greatly contributed.—C.

5 Eastern roofs are generally flat, and, in common houses, merely clay smoothed with a roller—a battlement was therefore a necessary defence against falling, the more requisite because the climate frequently invited to sit, eat, and even sleep, on the roof, and in the open air.—C.

6 During my residence in the East I knew several cases of serious and fatal accidents by falling from the roofs of houses. Not less than one-half of the inhabitants of Palestine sleep on the flat roofs during the warm summer nights. The importance of this law to health and decency is apparent; but its great use was to teach men to cleanse themselves from all pollution of the flesh and spirit, and to perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord.—C.

2 Even when the slave-trade was tolerated and sanctioned by Great Britain, the moment a slave touched the shore he was free; and would not, upon any account, have been restored to his former master, whether a native or a stranger. Let this jealous watchfulness of civil liberty stir up the anxiety of God's freemen to open in their hearts, and even in their houses, an asylum for the slaves of Satan, 'who are led captive at his will,' and, when any are 'clean escaped,' let none, through negligence or inhospitality, permit them to return.

to remember and observe them. In what detestation God holds slanderers, whoremongers, adulterers, and unclean persons! Let them then be detestable among all Christians, especially in my heart. Let me be ever ready for friendly offices towards my neighbour. Let me never retain anything of his that came secretly into my hands. Let it be my care to please God in my apparel: for indecency in dress is not the less sinful because it is fashionable. And while I regard the life of my neighbour, let me shun every unhallowed mixture of works with grace, of nature with the Spirit of God, of my own righteousness with that of Jesus Christ: but never be ashamed to wear the distinguished badge of a true Christian. Let me reckon chastity a very precious jewel; and yet a tender plant that can easily be blasted; and the loss of which is very infamous and sinful. Always let me use every mean of resisting temptation, and particularly crying to Jesus for relief.

And if I wrong any, let me repair the injury as far as lies in my power, according to the law of God.

3 Divorce is not here commanded, but permitted, and the manner of it prescribed; and, to prevent rashness, it was to be transacted very solemnly. [This is to be understood as part of the judicial law, and to be carried into effect under the eye of the civil magistrate. The moral law of the seventh commandment, and all that is implied in it, as illustrated and enforced by our Lord, still remained the same. And the permission of separation on the terms here specified was not a relaxation of the moral law, but an accommodation of the judicial to the existing habits and circumstances of the people of Israel, with the benevolent intention of preventing cruelty to those wives who might be discovered to have some bodily defect, disease, or ceremonial defilement. But to prevent rash and capricious divorces, the husband in such a case must have a regularly prepared and authenticated legal instrument; and the parties can never come together again. Our Lord tells us the reason of this permission of the judicial law: 'because of the hardness of their hearts'—but from the beginning it was not so. In the moral law, as interpreted by him, it is expressly prohibited.—L.]

glory has been the excitement of the brave; plunder of the mercenary; licentiousness of the profligate: but of the Jewish soldier it is required that 'when the host goeth forth against enemies, he keep himself from every wicked thing.' Translate this ancient ordinance into modern words, and it will form 'an order of the day' unparalleled in the annals of nations. C.]

Ver. 18. [Abomination unto the Lord thy God. Impurity constituted a part of heathen worship, and a dedicated prostitution was employed to support some of their temples. The Egyptians worshipped Anubis under the form of a dog; and hence such unhallowed gains are specifically rejected from the house of the Lord.—Note, God abominates the principle that makes the price of sin the purchase of pardon. C.]

Ver. 19. [Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother. The former laws of loan, Ex. 22. 25; Le. 25. 36, forbade the exaction of usury from the poor only. Here there is a total prohibition of usury for money lent by one Jew to another, whether rich or poor. Why this addition? why this prohibition? and why especially when the Jew is freely permitted to lend on usury to a stranger? (1) This addition, like several others, is now made to the law, with a view to the state of society in Canaan, into which the people were about to enter, De. 12. 1. While they were in the wilderness, without any fixed residence, there could be little if any occasion for the rich to borrow, and as little apparent security for any to lend. The poor only required protection.

(2) The prohibition of usury between Jew and Jew rests first, upon the implied principle of brotherhood in the whole nation; secondly, upon the fact, that God did not intend them for a commercial but for an agricultural people, as all their institutions testify. (3) The permission, and implied encouragement, of lending on usury to a stranger, founded upon the general principle that a fair profit on the loan of money is in itself as just as profit upon any other property, was a wise speciality; as, by bringing commercial men, the great political peace-bonds of the world, into contact with the Jews, some knowledge of the true religion would be diffused in the nations; and, when prospectively considered, it was mercifully calculated to accustom the Jews to such foreign management of money, as would prepare them either for the disasters of threatened exile, or for the period of their promised return to their own land. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is unseemly for saints to connect themselves in intimacy or marriage with profane persons: but whoremongers unnaturally mark their innocent posterity with shame and disgrace. God severely resents the injury done to his people in the day of their distress. But we ought quickly to forget the evil done to us by our relations or others; and carefully to remember the favours which we have received. Purity and cleanliness should be studied together with godliness, as they are both healthful and honourable, especially that of the heart and life, before God. How becoming is a tender compassion towards the afflicted, especially young converts to Christ! For great is the mercy of God to such—he will never deliver up a poor fugitive, that flees to him from the servitude of sin or of the broken law. Let me admire his grace, and imitate his goodness—let me carefully abstain from fleshly lusts, which provoke God and war against my soul. In all my dealings, let brotherly love continue. And if I have vowed unto the Lord, let me in no wise go back. Let me be kind to strangers, ready to distribute, and never insist upon trifling rights and claims.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Harmony in sin often issues in mutual hatred and angry separation. And it is mournful to observe, that, for the cruelty and hatred of husbands to wives, or other injurious effects of sin, God should see it necessary to permit the divorcement of them. But such a separation ought to be taken with great deliberation, as there is such hardship connected with it, and no recalling of ST. MARY'S WELL, OR THE FOUNTAIN OF THE VIRGIN, NAZARETH—A PLACE OFTEN VISITED BY MARY, THE MOTHER OF OUR LORD. ture of St. Mary's Well, or the Fountain of the Virgin, in Nazareth. Through all the precepts of this 24th chapter there are to be seen intimations and suggestions of the charity and humanity and good will that Christ came into the world to teach and to express through his own life. So this picture of the Virgin's Fountain in Nazareth, where Christ grew up, is a good illustration of that spirit of humanity and good will and blessing we see emphasized in Christ.

The phrase 'a stone weight' indicates the same to have been, and indeed it still is, used among ourselves. It is obvious that as stones vary greatly in their weight in proportion to their size, deception was easy in this way. The dealer having a stone of different weights, one light to sell with, and another heavier to buy with, even when the apparent size was the same, could not be so easily detected. They were forbidden therefore to have such weights in their houses, and it is called, like the greatest crimes, an abomination to the Lord.—L.]

²⁶ This order has been stigmatized by infidels as implacable resentment and unnatural perpetuation of an old injury. It is, however, neither the one nor the other. It is a righteous command to punish a wicked nation according to their wickedness. Time may appease resentment, but can never change crime. Murderers who had escaped punishment long have been condemned to death by the most civilized modern nations after a lapse of half a century. Why should the infidel censure Moses for what all just laws enforce?—C.

it. Happy is it when the mutual affection of married persons is fixed at first, and remains with prudent tenderness. How necessary is it to observe God's ordinances, however shameful they may be to us! It is better now to confess our sin and be pardoned, than to conceal it and be lost. Superiors, and especially judges, who are the substitutes of God, ought to conduct themselves in every case with equity and truth. And with great compassion ought we to treat our neighbours, especially the poor, as their circumstances may require: though they cannot recompense us with their wealth or labour, they may do it with their prayers. And let us consider the great compassion God has towards them. But how great his kindness in leaving to us, sinners of the Gentiles, in his word, such plentiful gleanings of divine truth!

cruelty, even towards evil-doers, nay, towards brute beasts, especially when serviceable to us, is very unbecoming the professors of Christianity. It is impossible to force affection, or to render a marriage happy without it. But the Christian in every situation must attend to the path of duty: and they deserve reproach themselves who give occasion to cast reproach on others. What fearful shame and dishonour must then await those ministers and Christians who reproach, and attempt to

GARDEN IN SECOND STORY OF MUSEUM—PALACE OF A MODERN PHARAOH OF EGYPT. [DEUT., xxvi: 6.]—"And the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage." The disposition of the reigning classes in Egypt to oppress the toiling masses and to afflict them with hard bondage continues unto this day to be a characteristic of the rulers here. This great palace of Gizeh, built by Ismail-Pasha at a cost of about $25,000,000, literally represents so much wealth extracted from the poor laboring people of Egypt. Ismail-Pasha put upon the Egyptian government the enormous debt of $500,000,000. The people so groaned under the burden of debt that the powers at Constantinople were forced to depose him, and to confiscate his landed properties and residences. The view above given represents a scene in the garden of the second story of this palace known as the Harem Garden.

There every evening comes the after-glow, Tipping the leaflets with liquid gold."

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 The confession of him that offereth the basket of first-fruits. 12 The prayer of him that giveth his third year's tithes. 16 The covenant between God and the people.

AND it shall be, when ^athou art come in unto ^bthe land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein,¹

2 That thou ^cshalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt put ^dit in a basket, and shalt ^ego unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name there.

3 And thou shalt go ^funto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, ^gI profess this day unto the LORD thy God, that I am come unto the country which the LORD swore unto our fathers for to give us.

4 And the priest shall take the basket out of thine hand, and set it down ^hbefore the altar of the LORD thy God.

5 And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God, A ⁱSyrian² ready to perish³ was my father; and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a ^jfew, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous:

6 And the Egyptians ^kevil-entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage:

7 And when we cried unto the LORD God of our fathers, the LORD heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression:

8 And the LORD ^lbrought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders:

9 And ^mhe hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, ⁿeven a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 And now, behold, ^oI have brought the first-fruits of the land which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God.

11 And thou ^pshalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that ^qis among you.

Two years together they paid the Levites' tithe, and the festival tithe; but in the third year, they paid the Levites' tithe, and the poor man's tithe; that is, what was wont in other years to be spent in feasting, was wholly spent every third year upon the poor.—P.

k Med. quoted by Patrick.

Once in three years this solemn protestation was required from every proprietor of land in Canaan, probably in the presence of the priests at the tabernacle. They all declared that the whole of this second tithe had been employed to those purposes for which it was appropriated, and that no part had been used by them in mourning, or at funerals, which rendered them unclean; or in any superstitious ceremony, in imitation of the idolaters around them. As the matter lay very much between God and their conscience, this protestation was the more suitable, and would tend both to remind them of their duty, and render them afraid of neglecting it, ch. 12. 5-7; 18. 6-8.—Scott.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The people are commanded to write the law upon stones, 5 and to build an altar of whole stones. 11 The tribes divided on Gerizim and Ebal. 14 The curses to be pronounced on mount Ebal.

AND Moses, with the elders of Israel, commanded the people, saying, ^aKeep all the commandments which I command you this day.

2 And it shall be, on the day ^bwhen ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the LORD ruin Christ and his church, by refusing to exert themselves in winning souls to them! Nothing is more shocking in a woman than immodesty, whether it be in the outrage of passion or in wanton lewdness. When once the hedge of modesty is broken through, the grossest unchastity may soon follow. Detestable to God, and hurtful to the user at last, is every act of fraud and dishonesty: and terrible and lasting, though often slow in the execution, is God's justice against the unprovoked injurers of his people.

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS. — God faithfully and exactly fulfils his promises, even to the most unworthy. And a grateful acknowledgment thereof, and of our own meanness and guilt, is but a just tribute to him for his goodness. Past deliverances, granted to ourselves or others, ought never to be forgotten: and all our gifts of providence, as well as of redemption, must be acknowledged as coming from God's hand. The first and best thereof of all that we have ought to be offered up to his service: and our earthly blessings will then be doubly sweet to us when we receive them as coming to us from God's mercy and love. Let our distributions to the Lord's ministers and poor be such as we can answer for at the judgment-seat of God. Faithfulness in these will draw his blessing on our enjoyments; but if we rob him in them, we may expect his curse on our basket and on our store. Let us then be hearty friends and well-wishers to the welfare of his church and people. Let our covenant relation to God, our solemn obligation in it, and the honours which he has given or promised to us, excite us to the most exact and universal obedience to his laws.

CHAPTER XXVII. [Ver. 14. This was one of the grandest and most solemn public assemblies ever held. On the spot, between Ebal and Gerizim, I have read the narrative, and studied its graphic details with the deepest interest. The selection of this place for the reading of the law was not without a reason. When Abraham first entered Canaan this was the site

A RCHES, HAREM ESH-SHERIF—ON THE GROUND ONCE OCCUPIED BY SOLOMON'S TEMPLE. [DEUT., xxvi: 19.]—"And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honor; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken." We give a view above of the arches found on the area once occupied by Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. The temple as it stood upon this same spot was the center of the Jewish race, and to-day the Mosque of Omar that stands in its place is the pride and ornament of the city of Jerusalem. As God promised he did make of the Hebrews the highest of the nations of ancient times, and the city of Jerusalem the capital of the religion of humanity. And though the Holy City has been subjected to reverses one after another for thousands of years, it continues to be the most interesting city as far as its historic associations go to be found on the face of the globe.

EXTERIOR OF AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI.—THE PLACE OF NERO'S GREAT CRIMES. [DEUT., xxvii: 1.]—"And Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day." The commandments which the Israelites were to keep were not arbitrary enactments imposed by the God of Moses and their God upon them alone. They were really the laws ordained for the government of the human race. The God of the Jew is the God of all mankind, and the God of the human conscience. And as cog corresponds with cog in the mechauical wheel, so the Mosaic law corresponds to the conscience of mankind. The Jews suffered national weakness and lost the high place intended for them in the mind of God because they violated these plain laws, revealed through Moses and affirmed by the very structure of human nature. We give a picture of the exterior of the Amphitheatre at Puteoli which serves to illustrate the fact that not only among the Jews, but among the Gentiles also, degradation and ruin come to the people who dare to transgress the simple laws of God.

thy God giveth thee, that thou shalt set thee up great stones, and plaster them with plaster.¹

3 And thou shalt write upon them all the words of this law,² when thou art passed over; that thou mayest go in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey; as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee.

4 Therefore it shall be, when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster.

5 And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them.

6 Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones; and thou shalt offer burnt-offerings³ thereon unto the LORD thy God:

7 And thou shalt offer peace-offerings, and shall eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God.

8 And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly.³

9 ¶ And Moses, and the priests the Levites, spake unto all Israel, saying, Take heed, and hearken, O Israel; this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God.⁴

10 Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

11 ¶ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

12 These shall stand upon mount Gerizim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan; Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin.⁵

Eze. 11. 19; 36. 26; ver. 4.

1 That the Hebrews were versant in castings in brass and other metals, and acquainted with cutting on stone, even precious stones, there can be no doubt. Why then are these stones merely plastered? An emblem, most probably, of the superficial impression the law was to make upon Israel: easily impressed, but easily effaced—a fact, which their facility in promising obedience, and readiness to forget and rebel, repeatedly testified.—C.

2 The whole scope of the narrative shows that 'this law' embraces only the blessings and the cursings recorded in this and the following chapters. This view is confirmed by the historic note of the fulfilment of the command in Jos. viii.—P.

1 The blessings for obedience. 15 The curses for disobedience.

AND it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the of his camp. When Jacob returned from Haran this was his first resting-place; and here he bought a field, erected an altar, and called it El-Elohe-Israel. It is not strange, therefore, that the same site should have been selected for the first great national assembly of Israel, and the renewal of their covenant with Jehovah, on taking formal possession of the land. The exact scene was doubtless near the mouth of the vale of Shechem, immediately below the highest peaks of Ebal and Gerizim. The vale is here about 200 yards wide; and the sides of the mountains, though steep, are not precipitous. A natural amphitheatre is formed by a recess in each mountain. The ark, with the attendant priests and Levites, was placed in the centre of the vale. Six tribes were ranged along the lower slopes of Ebal on the one side, and six along the corresponding slopes of Gerizim upon the other. Every member of that vast assembly could thus both hear and see all that passed. Each command was read with a loud voice by the Levites, with its annexed blessing and curse; to the blessing the tribes ranged on Gerizim responded 'Amen;' and to the curse those ranged on Ebal responded 'Amen.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Such as are in authority ought to exert all their influence in promoting the service of God. And when ministers and magistrates show themselves zealous in their station for God, people are ready to follow their example. Every privilege that we enjoy ought to be an incitement to universal holiness: and God's law is so plain, that every one may attain a moderate knowledge of it; but, to become effectual, it must be written on our hard hearts by the Spirit of God; and all obedience to it must be founded on the atoning and peace-procuring blood of Jesus Christ. In this order, what solid peace and joy are found in believing, and in cordial dedication of ourselves to God's service! In keeping his commandments a blessed reward of grace is to be expected: but most terrible curses await those who, after professed subjection to God, and solemn acquiescence in his law and sanctions of it, do voluntarily apostatize from his ways, and indulge themselves in secret or open wickedness.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—This chapter is nearly allied to Le. 26. 3–39: only it more largely insists upon the mercies, and especially the judgments, that were to befall the Israelites after their entrance into Canaan till the end of the world. It is not to be considered as a mere sanction of the laws formerly declared, but also as a real prediction of future events. The first fourteen verses had their accomplishment in the various mercies which the Jews met with before their last dispersion by the Romans: particularly in the days of Joshua, ch. iii. xxiv.; in the rests under the Judges, Ju. 3. 11, 30, 31; 8. 28; and under Samuel, 1 Sa. 5. 2; David, 2 Sa. v. x.; 1 Ch. xii. xxix.; Solomon, 1 Ki. i. x.;

2 Ch. i. ix.; Asa, 1 Ki. 15. 9–15; 2 Ch. xiii. xvi.; Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch. xvii. xx.; Joash, 2 Ki. xi. xii.; 2 Ch. xxiii. xxiv.; Uzziah and Jotham, 2 Ch. xxvi. xxvii.; Hezekiah, 2 Ki. xviii. xix.; Is. xxxvi. xxxvii.; 2 Ch. xxix. xxxii.; Josiah, 2 Ki. xxii. xxiii.; 2 Ch. xxxiv. xxxv.; and in the days of Ezra, i. x.; and of Esther, i. x.; and of Nehemiah, i. x.; and under the Maccabees, Judas, Jonathan, Simon, Hircanus, and Alexander Jannaeus, from about 160 to about 80 years before Christ's birth.—From ver. 15 to the end are delineated the various and manifold miseries which their sin should bring upon them, from their entrance into Canaan till their future restoration; i.e. for the space of 3300 years; particularly in the days of Joshua, Jos. vii.; the Judges, Ju. i. iii. iv. vi. ix. x. xii. xxi.; Samuel, 1 Sa. iv. xi. xiii. xiv. xvii. xxxi.; David, 2 Sa. ii. iii. xv. xxi. xxiv.; Solomon, 1 Ki. xi.; Rehoboam, Abijah, Jehoshaphat, 1 Ki. xii. xxi.; 2 Ki. i. vi.; Jehoram, Ahaziah, Joash, Amaziah, Uzziah, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, 2 Ki. viii. xxi.; 2 Ch. xxi. xxii. xxv. xxviii. xxxii. xxxiii.; and Jehoiahim, Jehoiahin, Zedekiah, and in Babylon, 2 Ki. xxiv. xxv.; 2 Ch. xxxv. xxxvi.; Je. xiv. xxix. xxxiv. xlv. The body of the ten tribes of Israel were generally miserable after the death of Solomon. They were carried captive, and dispersed among the heathens, about 720 years before Christ, whence few of them ever returned to Canaan. Such of them, or of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who returned to their

LORD thy God, to observe, and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God will set thee ^{on} high above all nations of the earth.¹

2 And all these blessings shall ^{come} on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God.

3 Blessed^a shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field.

4 Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

5 Blessed^f shall be thy basket and thy store.²

6 Blessed shalt thou be when ^{thou} comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

7 The LORD shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be ^{smitten} before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways.

8 The LORD ^{shall} command the blessing upon thee in thy storehouses,³ and in all that thou settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.⁴

9 The LORD shall ^{establish} thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, ^{if} thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways.

10 And all people of the earth shall ^{see} that thou art called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be afraid of thee.

11 And ^{the} LORD shall make thee plenteous in goods,⁵ in the fruit of thy body,⁶ and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in^o the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

12 The LORD ^{shall} open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and to bless all the work of thine hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

13 And the LORD ^{shall} make thee the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; ^{if} that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them:

14 And thou shalt ^{not} go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, to the right hand, or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them.⁷

15 ¶ But it shall come to pass, ^{if} thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day, that ^{all} these curses shall come upon thee, and overtake thee.

16 ^{Cursed} shalt thou be in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field.

17 Cursed^y shall be thy basket and thy store.

18 Cursed^z shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 Cursed^a shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

20 The^b LORD shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto for to do,⁹ until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.

21 The LORD ^{shall} make the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it.

22 The^d LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning,¹ and with the sword,² and with blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish.

23 And thy ^{heaven} that is over thy head shall be brass,³ and the earth that is under thee shall be iron.

24 The LORD shall ^{make} the rain of thy land powder and dust:⁴ from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

own land by order from Cyrus, Ezr. i., were not only harassed by the neighbouring nations of Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Arabians, Philistines, and others, but also by the Persian and Grecian emperors; but most terribly by Ochus the Persian, about 350; and Antiochus Epiphanes, Da. 8. 23-25; 11. 28-35, about 160 years before Christ. But their most fearful calamities began to come upon them from the Romans, about sixty-five years after Christ. They invaded their country; and after manifold calamities, about A.D. 70, rendered it a desolate wilderness, burning their cities, slaying the inhabitants, it is probable to the number of some millions, and selling such as remained to the Egyptians and others for slaves. About A.D. 136 the Romans repeated their terrible slaughter of such Jews as they found in Canaan, and even in other places of their empire; and annual fairs were held for the sale of the captives. Since which, hated of all nations in Europe, Asia, or Africa, among which they have been dispersed, and often deluded by pretenders to Messiahship, they have, for these seventeen hundred years, been distressed with the most fearful calamities, persecutions, and massacres, from the Persians, Saracens, Turks, and Christians; but chiefly the Greeks, Spaniards, French, English, and Germans. Thus every promise or threatening respecting the Jewish nation is but a repetition or enlargement of what we have in this chapter and the first part of ch. 30. 1-9; and every event of Providence respecting that nation, from their entrance into Canaan till the end of time, is the accomplishment thereof.—See Introduction.

Ver. 9. [The Lord shall establish thee. The general character of these blessings has led some Christian divines to conclude and admit that Moses employed none but temporal promises and threatnings as incentives to obedience, omitting altogether the mention of immortality. That he employed temporal promises is certain; for 'godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.' But that he likewise employed spiritual promises, even immortality and glory, this verse testifies; for he promises to establish them, not their posterity, 'a holy people,' 'unto himself,' implies and promises life coeval with his own. Ver. 24. [My experience of a simoom in southern Palestine will best illustrate these verses. 'As the day advanced the sirocco came upon us, blowing across the great "Wilderness of Wandering." At first it was but a faint breath, hot and parching as if coming from a furnace. It increased slowly and steadily. Then a thick haze, of a dull yellow or brass colour, spread along the southern horizon, and advanced, rising and expanding, until it covered the whole face of the sky, leaving the sun, a red globe of fire, in the midst. We now knew and felt that it was the fierce simoom. In a few moments fine impalpable sand began to drift in our faces, entering every pore. Nothing could exclude it. It blew into our eyes, mouths, and nostrils, and penetrated our very clothes, causing the skin to contract, the lips to crack, and the eyes to burn. Respiration became difficult. We sometimes gasped for breath; and then the hot wind and hotter sand rushed into our mouths like a stream of liquid fire. We tried to urge on our horses; but though chafing against curb and rein only an hour before, they were now almost insensible to whip and spur. We looked and longed for shelter from that pitiless storm, and for water to slake our burning thirst; but there was none. No friendly house was there; no rock or bank, no murmur-

GENERAL VIEW OF THE FORUM—WHERE ST. PAUL WAS IMPRISONED. [DEUT., xxviii: 20.]—"The Lord shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke in all that thou settest thy hand unto to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me." Perhaps a general view of the Forum in Rome could not more fitly represent any portion of Scripture than that part contained in the verse above quoted. The cursing, vexation, and rebuke referred to above were to come upon the Jews, but wickedness brings cursing and destruction no less upon the other nations. There is no better place on the face of the earth to study the relation of penalty to violated law than the Roman Forum. It is the very heart and center of that mighty empire that came to a terrible ending because of its sins against the laws of God and of itself.

25 The LORD shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them; and shalt be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.⁵

26 And thy carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.

27 The LORD will smite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.⁶

28 The LORD shall smite thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart:

29 And thou shalt grope at noon-day, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways; and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee.⁷

30 Thou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather the grapes thereof.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, and shall not be restored to thee:⁹ thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue them.

32 Thy sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no might in thine hand.

33 The fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway:

34 So that thou shalt be mad for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

35 The LORD shall smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.

36 The LORD shall bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone.

37 And thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.²

^b The Jews are the standing and prophetic miracle of the Scriptures. Other nations have no doubt, been dispersed; but they have been absorbed into or amalgamated with the people amongst whom they have been scattered. But the Jews, removed into all kingdoms, retain their national identity—witnesses against themselves that they have forsaken the Lord: witnesses against infidels who despise these prophecies which they see fulfilled before their eyes; and witnesses to the Gentile churches to beware of falling by seeking to establish their own righteousness, and refusing to submit to the righteousness of God.—C.

ⁿ They, in the madness and fury of their sufferings, destroyed each other. After the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, some of the worst of the Jews took refuge in the castle of Massada, where, being closely besieged by the Romans, they, at the persuasion of Eleazar their leader, first murdered their wives and children; then ten men were chosen by lot to slay the rest; this being done, one of the ten was chosen in like manner to kill the other nine; which, having done, he set fire to the place, and then stabbed himself. There were nine hundred and sixty who perished in this miserable manner; and only two women and five boys escaped, by hiding themselves in the aqueducts underground.—Newton.

46 And they shall be upon thee for a sign, and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever.

47 Because thou servedst not the LORD thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, for the abundance of all things;

48 Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies, which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in want of all things: and he shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee.

ing stream or solitary well. It seemed to us as if the prophetic curse pronounced by the Almighty on a sinful and apostate nation was now being literally fulfilled. REFLECTIONS.—Behold, with affecting wonder, what numerous blessings a God in Christ, reconciling the world to himself, can heap on sinful men!—What blessings on soul and body!—what blessings, in time and in eternity, his love can bestow! Let us therefore be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. In keeping his commandments there is a great and gracious reward. But who can stand before this holy, this jealous, this great and dreadful Lord God, if once he be angry? Deep and large is the cup of indignation that is in his right hand;

the dregs of which the wicked must wring out and drink. Let the sinners in Zion be afraid. Let fearfulness surprise the hypocrites. Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire? who shall dwell with everlasting burnings? In this dreadful cluster of threatenings, let us observe that sin is the only deserving cause of trouble; and that God, in innumerable forms, can execute his justice on the bodies, the minds, the families, the nations, the property, of his opposers.

gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land; and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

53 And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body,¹ the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters,² which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee:

54 So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave:

55 So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children, whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.

56 The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter,³

57 And toward her young one⁴ that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.

59 Then the LORD will make thy plagues wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore sicknesses, and of long continuance.

60 Moreover, he will bring upon thee all the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of; and they shall cleave unto thee:

⁶ When we read of the attempt made to exterminate the Jews by Haman, Est. 3. 6; when we read in Josephus how at least 1,100,000 perished in the siege of Jerusalem, while 90,000 were carried captive; and when we read in Roman history the subsequent persecutions they endured; when we examine their more modern history (see, for example, Adam's History of the Jews), and observe how frequent and determined have been the efforts at their extermination, we are astonished the Jews are so many—some think 1,500,000, some more, but the amount is uncertain—still, when compared with their ancient numbers, they are reduced to few. But the Lord has still a seed amongst, and a remnant according to the intention of grace, therefore are they nationally preserved.—C.

THESE are the words of the covenant which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, besides the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.¹

2 ¶ And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land;

groweth therein. Canaan has continued since the Christian era to be a land of much attraction to travellers, and all, as with one common consent, have expressed their astonishment at the general aspect of barrenness and desolation in a country once so fertile and populous. So evident is this judgment, and so palpable the fulfilment of this prophecy, that infidels have affected to question the scriptural account of its population and fertility. But, independent of the Scripture testimony, which is always sufficient to establish the truth of its own narratives, it is well known that at least large portions of the Chinese empire are as populous, and by extreme industry rendered as productive, as Palestine, even in its best days. And if God permit his blessings to a land of heathenism, why should he not bestow his blessings upon a land of his true worshippers? C.]

Ver. 29. [The secret things. There are two classes of secret things: (1) The times and seasons of determined prophetic blessings, such as Is. 19. 18-25; 52. 1; 60. 1. And though there be a few examples of precise chronological prophecy of this kind, such as the seventy weeks, Da. 9. 25-27, yet, even as this revealed time depended upon another unknown, the time foretold was secret. (2) The times and seasons when God will inflict determined prophetic judgments, and these depending on the filling up of national iniquity, must ever abide secret until the 'signs of the times' begin to reveal their approach. Things revealed are likewise of two kinds: (1) The nature of the blessings and judgments foretold; so that men may desire the one, and flee from the other. (2) The duties of God's people while in possession of his blessings, or when lying under his wrath.—Note, The secret and the revealed departments of the divine government are not to be practically disjoined; for they are not separate things, but merely distinct parts of the same government. It were vain to apply ourselves to discover the secret things, but it were impious to neglect the revealed duties connected with them. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Unbelief and unconcern are so deep-rooted within us, that, till God himself enlighten and renew our heart, we can never know, love, or serve him. Many of the most affecting providences pass unheeded by ignorant and unbelieving men: and yet a right observation of providence would powerfully induce us to a solemn surrendering of ourselves to God, and a careful fulfilment of our vows. Holy obedience is so contrary to the heart of man, that, notwithstanding we are already bound by the infinite authority of God's law, we need to be also bound by solemn vows and covenants, and these again and again repeated. But everything in public covenanting with God ought to be made with great plainness and solemnity; that every one concerned, whether present or absent, may understand, and be duly affected with it: and especially must all our covenanting with him be founded on his grant of himself to us as our God, and his claim of us for his people. How ready are men to copy after bad examples, and to defile themselves with idols! And who knows what indwelling lusts may lead us to in our practice: for followers of iniquity often become presumptuous at last, and bless themselves, while the curse of God hangs over their heads, and his wrath abideth on them! and to what terrible and shameful judgments are such presumptuous sinners exposed! The greater the mercies we sin against, the greater judgments we may expect. The obstinate abuse of God's mercies will at length deprive men of them. And heathen beholders are sometimes sooner awakened by God's judgments than the hardened professors who endure them. Men's inquiries into religious concerns

ON THE QUAY, SMYRNA—A CITY WHERE GOD'S ANCIENT PEOPLE HAVE GREAT INFLUENCE AND WHERE THEY LIVE IN GREAT NUMBERS. [DEUT., xxix : 28]. —“And the Lord rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day.” We give a picture of the quay at Smyrna because it serves to illustrate the declaration in this verse of Deuteronomy. Perhaps there is no city in the world of the same number of inhabitants where the Jews, rooted out of their own land and cast into another, have come to greater positions of influence, at least in a mercantile way, than in Smyrna. The great carpet houses here, which supply the world's market with Turkish rugs and other fine carpet fabrics, are owned by Jews. Smyrna is a city of over 200,000 inhabitants, and the quay of Smyrna is the street that extends for a mile or more along the harbor, and is the most important in the city.

GREEK CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, NAZARETH—IN THE CITY OF MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS. [DEUT., xxx: 1-10.]—"And it shall come to pass, when all things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto the Lord thy God * * * that then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee." We give above a picture of the Greek Church of Annunciation because the Scripture quoted above was not fulfilled until the coming of Christ. The angel said to Mary, as recorded in the first chapter of St. Luke, speaking of Jesus, He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Great mercies promised unto the penitent. 11 The commandment is of obvious interpretation. 15 Death and life are set before the people.

AND it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee,

2 And thou shalt return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice, according to all that I command thee this day, thou, and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul;

3 That when the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return, and gather thee from all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee.

4 If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.

5 And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.

6 And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

7 And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

8 And thou shalt return, and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments, which I command thee this day.

9 And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers; are frequently rather curious than practical; and many sinfully pry into futurities, and things which he hath concealed, rather than search and practise what he hath revealed in his word, and manifested in his providence. But may I and my children always search and practise the Scriptures, as the only effectual means of averting the plagues appointed for the ungodly.

10 If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes, which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—In returning to the Lord, and resting in him, men must be saved. Our gracious God is always ready, not only to receive repenting prodigals, but to graciously forgive their sins. And great is the happiness and honour that is to be found in fellowship with a reconciled God. The future return of the Jewish nation to the Lord shall be a delightful and glorious season to them; and even to us Gentiles it will be as life from the dead; we shall share and rejoice in their mercies. God's manifestation of his special love, and his renovation of our heart, shall qualify and induce us to all holy obedience. We shall run in the way of his commandments when he shall enlarge our heart. But now let us consider how great a mercy it is that the laws and the gospel of Christ are set before us in so plain, affecting, and applicable a manner. And since eternal life is so exhibited, so offered to, so urged upon us, God forbid that we should entail redoubled loss on ourselves by a contemptuous rejection of it. Not Moses, but Jesus, sets before us life and good.—Let us see that we refuse not him that speaketh from heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 26. The book of the law. The Pentateuch, as far as then completed, was put into the safest and holiest spot, beside the ark, in 11 ¶ For this commandment, which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off:

12 It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

15 ¶ See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

16 In that I command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

18 I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

19 I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live;

20 That thou mayest love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him; (for he is thy life, and the length of thy days;) that thou mayest dwell in the land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Moses encourageth the people. 7 He encourageth Joshua. 9 He delivereth the law unto the priests to read it in the seventh year to the people. 14 God giveth a charge to Joshua, 19 and a song to testify against the people. 24 Moses delivereth the book of the law to the Levites to keep. 28 He maketh a protestation to the elders.

AND Moses went and spake these words unto all Israel.

2 And he said unto them, I am an hum-the holy of holies. There it was sacred. It was not merely under the guardianship of the priests, but of God himself, who dwelt in the sanctuary, and who would not permit a stranger's hand to touch it. That very book—the autograph of Moses—may have been preserved down to the close of the Jewish polity and the destruction of the temple. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It highly becomes ministers, or others, to exert themselves to their utmost, that their church and nation may be happy after their death: and, when they become more active in the Lord's work as their end approaches, and wish others the happy enjoyment of that comfort and honour which God hath denied to themselves, it is both honourable to the cause of God and strengthening to his people. Great pains ought to be taken to make those of the present or rising generations to understand, believe, and obey

1 The curses of exile and distress have been inflicted literally and fully; the promises of restoration and prosperity must therefore be as literal and complete.—C.

2 If the blessings and the curses of the preceding chapters be interpreted literally, so must the remarkable promise contained in this chapter. The time referred to is yet to come. The curses are not yet exhausted. Palestine is still desolate; the Jews are still scattered among the nations; they are still a by-word in the earth. Just as surely as the curse was fulfilled which pronounced their dispersion, so surely will the promise be fulfilled which predicts their ingathering. A spiritual ingathering to the kingdom of Christ would not be such a fulfilment as the sound laws of exegesis demand; it must be a literal and national return to the country of their fathers.—P.

3 We must return to our allegiance to God as our Lord and Ruler, our dependence upon him as our Father and Benefactor, our devotedness to him as our highest end, and our communion with him as our God in covenant. We must return to God from all that which stands in opposition to him, or competition with him. In this return to God, we must be upright—with the heart and soul, and universal—with all the heart and all the soul. It is evidenced by a constant obedience to the holy will of God. If thou shalt 'obey his voice,' ver. 2, 'thou and thy children,' for it is not enough that we do our duty ourselves, but we must train up and engage our children to do it.—Henry.

It was followed by the diary of the journeys recorded in Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers. With the diary was mixed the laws, moral and ceremonial, revealed at Sinai and elsewhere. Then came Moses' great address to the Israelites on the Arboth Moab, contained in Deuteronomy. It was now finished, and added to the sacred roll. At its close this record was made—'Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests.' They were its natural guardians.—P.

⁴⁰ Let Moses be tried by the 'popular literature' he furnished and employed to influence the 'masses' of society; and here, as in all other respects, he stands immeasurably above all other popular leaders; and presents a practical evidence of a divine commission by the continuity of his efforts to lead the people's hearts to God. An impostor may invent and inculcate a religion; but it cannot, like that of Moses, be a holy and a godly religion. Whether Moses wrote a history, a law, or a song, all is full of God, because he was sent and inspired by God.—C.

15 And the ^rLORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt ^ssleep⁵ with thy fathers; and this people will rise up, and ^tgo a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

17 Then ^umy anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will ^vhide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall⁶ them; so that they will say in that day, ^wAre not these evils come upon us because our God is not among us?⁷

18 And ^xI will surely hide my face in that day, for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye ^ythis song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: ^zput it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.⁸

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I swore unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey, and they shall ^ahave eaten, and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, when ^bmany evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify against⁹ them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for ^cI know their imagination which they go about,¹ even now, before I have brought them into the land which I swore.

22 Moses therefore ^dwrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.²

23 ¶ And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, ^eBe strong, and of a good courage: for ^fthou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swore unto them; and I will be with thee.³

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, ^gwhich bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying, 26 Take this book of the law, and put it ^hin the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee.

God's word: and certain is our success when God is our assistant, and we do nothing but what he has commanded. And the more experience we have of gospel liberty, the more shall we delight to hear and obey him. God graciously warns men of their sin and danger before it come upon them: yet so desperate is the wickedness of men, that they ruin themselves by their apostasy from God, after their own vows, and the most solemn and often-repeated warnings of God and his faithful ministers. These exactly correspond together in discovering the sure consequences of sin, and leave the blame of their ruin entirely upon themselves.

27 For I know thy rebellion, and thy 'stiff neck: behold, while I am ^{yet} alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD;⁴ and how much more after my death?

28 Gather unto me ^{all} the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, and ^{call} heaven and earth to record against them.

29 For I know that ^{after} my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and evil² will befall you in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

30 And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended.

CHAPTER XXXII.

¹ Moses' song, which setteth forth God's mercy and vengeance.
⁴⁴ He exhorteth the people to set their hearts unto all the words of the law. ⁴⁸ God sendeth him up to Mount Nebo, to see the land, and die.

GIVE ear,^a O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

2 My doctrine shall ^{drop} as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew; as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass:

3 Because^c I will publish the name of the LORD; ^{ascribe} ye greatness unto our God.

4 He is ^{the} Rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth, and without iniquity; just and right is he.

5 They have corrupted¹ themselves; ^{their} spot is not the spot of his children: they are a perverse and crooked generation.

6 Do⁹ ye thus requite the LORD, O foolish people and unwise? is not he thy father that hath ^{bought} thee? hath he not made thee, and established thee?

7 ¶ Rememberⁱ the days of old, consider the years of many generations:² ask thy father, and he will show thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee.

8 When the Most High ^{divided} to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set ^{the} bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel:³

9 For the ^{Lord's} portion is his people; Jacob is the lot⁴ of his inheritance.

3 Calvin's paraphrase brings out very clearly the true meaning of this verse: 'In the whole arrangement of the world God had kept this before him as the end; to consult the interests of faithful people.' The words, 'When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance,' &c., embrace the whole period and details of the dispersion of the human family, and their settlement in the various nations. It is necessary therefore that God's truths be laid up in men's heart and conscience, that they may hear, and fear, and do no more wickedly.

CHAPTER XXXII. [Ver. 10. Howling wilderness. It was literally so, because of the wild beasts howling by night through its dreary wastes. Sad emblem of an evil world filled with enemies who love to prowl in darkness, and watch for whom they may devour.—Apple of his eye. Those who would fathom the depths of God's providence in the selection of Abram, and the leading of the patriarchs, must recollect that two things were required for God's purposes: (1) The separation of a people from idolatry and idolatrous friends, with all their prejudices, influence, and interests. (2) Instruction in the knowledge of the nature, character, and worship of the true God. Now all this absolutely required the separation of Abram, Isaac, and Jacob from their idolatrous friends, and their frequent removals, lest their families should form idolatrous connections. C.]

Ver. 21. [Every idolatrous nation is foolish. The only true wisdom is the wisdom of God. Everything is folly which does not lead to God. The heathen nations therefore which were raised up to vex, harass, and conquer Israel are here called 'foolish nations.' P.]

Ver. 29. [Latter end. Not their death, which is commonly called the latter end, but their latter end in dispersion and restoration, in judgment and in mercy,

WALLS OF AKRO-CORINTH—WHERE ST. PAUL LIVED AND PREACHED. [DEUT. xxxii:24-25.]—"They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction; I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of the dust. The sword without, and terror within, shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs." Corinth is another striking illustration of the ruin that comes to cities and peoples who violate the laws of God first given to the Jews, but really as applicable to other nations as to the people whom God raised up to teach these laws. Corinth was once a splendid and wealthy city, the center of art and luxury. But upon the top of this very mountain, enclosed by the wall as shown above, there was a temple of Venus dedicated to licentiousness. So nothing is left of this city to-day except moldering ruins. In reading the Old Testament Scriptures it will be well to remember that God's laws operate universally.

upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.⁶

25 The sword without, and terror within,⁷ shall destroy⁸ both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also, with the man of gray hairs.

26 I said, ⁹I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men;

27 Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the LORD hath not done all this.⁹

28 For they are a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

29 Oh that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

30 How should one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the LORD had shut them up?

31 For their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges.

33 Their wine is the poison of dragons,² and the cruel venom of asps.

34 Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?

35 To me belongeth vengeance and recompense; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste.

36 For the LORD shall judge his people, and repent himself for his servants, when he seeth that their power³ is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.

37 And he shall say, Where are their gods, their rock in whom they trusted;

38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices,

⁹ This is no rhetorical figure: it is a reality; for while the swords of men are wood in some nations, brass in another, and steel in a third, the sword of the Lord, according to scriptural definition, Ps. 17. 13, is 'the wicked,' whom God employs, though his fiercest enemies, to execute his judgments. Thus the wicked Chaldeans punished the apostate Israelites with captivity; and the wicked Romans with a dispersion abiding till this day.—C.

39 See now that I, even I, am the, and there is no god with me: I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.

40 For I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever.

41 If I whet my glittering sword,⁵ and mine hand take hold on judgment, I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me.

42 I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh; and that with the blood of the slain, and of the captives, from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy.⁶

43 Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

44 And Moses came, and spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he and Hoshea the son of Nun.⁸

45 And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel:

46 And he said unto them, Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law.

47 For it is not a vain thing for you; because it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

48 And the LORD spake unto Moses that self-same day, saying,

49 Get thee up into this mountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho, and behold the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel for a possession;

both of which are essential elements in a wise consideration of man's state, duty, and prospects. C.—'Their latter end'—not death merely, but the destruction, national as well as individual, which they were bringing upon themselves by their obstinate and infatuated perseverance in sin. P.]

Ver. 31. [That is, the 'rock,' or gods of the heathen, is not like JEHOVAH. The heathen themselves know this. They have seen the proofs in the miracles he wrought for Israel, and in the destruction he brought upon Egypt, Amalek, and Moab. P.]

Ver. 40. [I lift up my hand to heaven. The lifting up of the hand to heaven was a form of oath. The expression is no figure, but a reality; for, to the church, the Lord appeared in bodily form, 'in fashion as a man.' And this is he who saith, Re. 1. 18, 'I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen.' C.]

Ver. 42. [I will make mine arrows. This also is no rhetorical figure, but a reality; for while the arrows of men are reeds, wood, or iron; the arrows of God are his judgments, executed by the elements of nature, Ps. 18. 13-15, or those divine denunciations, and terrors of conscience, which fly as lightning, and pierce and subdue the hearts of his enemies, Job 6. 4; Ps. 45. 5. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—In the most serious and solemn manner ought ministers to deliver the truths of God to their people; and terrible will be the judgment of despisers of them, when both heaven and earth shall witness against them. How great, how unalterable, how faithful, holy, and just is God! and how perfect, wise, and righteous are all his works! But how ungrateful, disobedient, and apostatizing are many of his professed children! It is necessary, therefore, to ponder both the character of God and our own, to prevent our sinning, to draw instructions from ancient records, and that children should receive information from their fathers, who are more acquainted with them. But while I behold God preparing a country for the Israelites, as his peculiar people, marvellously conducting them to it through the Arabian deserts, subduing the land before them, and enriching them with the product of it, let me think of the great wonder of redemption, of God's preparing it for men, and bringing them now to the begun, and hereafter to the full enjoyment of it. But surely most vile is the ingratitude of men, who render him hatred for his love, cursing for his blessing! Yet much more aggravated is the wickedness of professors, and especially saints, than that of mere heathens. The Lord highly abominates all sin; and righteous are all his judgments of desertion, sword, famine, or pestilence, nay, of utter and everlasting destruction. But his mercy waits long: he is unwilling to inflict judgments on his people, and to give his enemies any cause of triumph over them, even when they have provoked him to the most shocking degree; and earnestly he wills that their serious consideration should prevent their ruin. Seasonable, gracious, and wonderful have, and shall be, God's deliverances of his ancient people from the nations which harassed, murdered, or carried them captive; and terrible his judgments on their destroyers, particularly the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Greeks, Romans, Antichristians, and others. But how much more remarkable the spiritual deliverances of the saints, and terrible the destruction of their implacable enemies! How remarkable the joy of their souls, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, when they behold it! Happy is it when ministers, young and old, fully harmonize in the work of the Lord; and when they are so intent upon commending Jesus and his ways, that they must be, as it were, half forced from it, even into the joy of their Lord! But God finds it frequently necessary to remind his people of their sins, and likewise to warn them of their death, while he assures them of his reconciliation to their souls.

50 And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people.⁹

51 Because ye trespassed against me¹ among the children of Israel at the waters of Meribah-kadesh,² in the wilderness of Zin; because ye sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel.

52 Yet thou shalt see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 The majesty of God. 6 The blessings of the twelve tribes. 26 The excellency of Israel.

AND this is the blessing wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

2 And he said, The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran,¹ and he came with ten thousands of saints: from his right hand went a fiery law² for them.

3 Yea, he loved the people; all his saints are³ in thy hand: and they sat down at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy words.

4 Moses commanded us a law, even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.

5 And he was king in Jeshurun when the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together.

6 Let Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

7 And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

8 And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

³ The honesty of the Bible in revealing and condemning the faults of its most distinguished characters is a peculiarity in which it stands apart from all mere human compositions—a proof of its divine origin to which the infidel can produce no refutation. If we admit with the poet, and the words being rightly understood, we do and must admit, that 'an honest man's' the noblest work of God; then would we demand of the infidel what is an honest book? It cannot be less noble.—C.

Ver. 6-25. In Le. xxvi. 4. 25-31; xxviii. 29. 18-28; xxx. 31. 16-21, 29; xxxii. the general fate of the Israelites has been predicted; here that of the particular tribes is foretold in a manner answerable to the blessings of the patriarch Jacob, Ge. xlix. viz. that notwithstanding internal weakness, and much harassment from enemies, the Reubenites should be preserved; that the descendants of Judah should have their prayers heard, their warfare successful, their labours prosperous, and should enjoy peace and safety; that the Levites, who had acted so disinterestedly in punishing the principal worshippers of the golden calf, should be the honoured ministers of God, and useful instructors and judges of the people; that the Benjamites should enjoy much divine protection, and live near to the temple of God; that the descendants of Joseph should enjoy great favour from God, noted plenty from their fields, and great power and authority among their brethren; that the men of Zebulun in their seafaring trade, and those of Issachar in their husbandry, should enjoy much comfort to themselves, and be remarkable promoters of a religious attendance on God's solemn feasts; that the Gadites should enlarge their territory, punish their enemies, and faithfully assist their brethren in conquering Canaan; that the Danites should unexpectedly seize on Laish, near the springs of Jordan, and, under Samson, molest the Philistines; that the Naphtalites, when stationed on the west of the Sea of Tiberias, should have most fertile fields, and their country be peculiarly blessed with the ministrations of Christ; and that the Asherites should mightily increase, live in noted friendship with their brethren, and have valuable mines of iron and brass in their territory.—[Ver. 6. Let not his men be few. Two copies of the Septuagint, and some valuable MSS. adopted by Houbigant and other learned authorities insert here, 'and Simeon, let his men be few;' and as this is the only tribe omitted in the authorized version, this variation being so supported, is worthy of attention.—Ver. 7. Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah. Judah signifies praise the LORD, therefore this prayer. It includes a petition likewise for Messiah, who was to come of Judah, Ge. 49. 10, and whom God the Father 'heareth always.'—Ver. 10. They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law. There is a remarkable difference between the blessings of the tribes as delivered by Jacob, Ge. xlix., and Moses in this chapter. But the blessings of Jacob were principally temporal, those of Moses chiefly spiritual. Those of Jacob to members of the nation, those of Moses to members of the church. The one chiefly to Israel 'according to the flesh,' the other to Israel 'according to the spirit.' The two lines of prophecy sometimes diverging, sometimes coincident; yet always equally true.—Ver. 12. Dwell in safety by him. Near the place where God shall choose for his temple; and in point of fact, Jerusalem was a joint property of Judah and Benjamin, and the two tribes dwelt together. Between his shoulders, some translate 'on his sides or borders,' but it seems rather to refer to a parent tenderly covering a child and carrying it upon his shoulders.—Ver. 14. Precious things put forth by the moon. That, even in latitudes distant from the equator, the moon has a ripening power, can scarcely be doubted. In the central lands of the earth, where the moon is described as astonishingly bright, the ripening power must be proportionably increased. It describes a land of great fertility, in which every month produced a new succession of fruits. See Re. 22. 2. C.—Ver. 17. There is here delineated briefly, but with wondrous graphic power, both the character of Ephraim's allotted territory and the future greatness of the tribe. He was to inherit a mountain stronghold;

PLAİN OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH, THE PROMISED LAND GOD PERMITTED MOSES TO SEE FROM MT. NEBO. [DEUTERONOMY, xxxiv: 1.]—"And Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho; and the Lord showed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan." "And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees unto Zoar." We give a view of the plains of Sodom and Gomorrah taken from the site of ancient Jericho, with a perspective of 25 miles looking towards the east. We have here a view of the city of palm trees, plain of the Jordan, and one of the highest peaks of the Moab mountains, Nebo, where Moses stood and looked over the promised land. There is not a view in the world so capable of awakening tender and great memories as this. In the world's civilization Moses, without a doubt, has been the most conspicuous leader. And here is the plain over which he looked before he went to his reward.

its valleys were to be of surpassing fertility; the tribe was to increase enormously; and its power was to be felt over the whole nation.—Ver. 23. This verse should be rendered as follows:—‘Naphtali, replete with favours, and full of the blessings of Jehovah; possess thou the sea and Darom.’ The Hebrew word rendered ‘west’ means literally ‘sea,’ and here means the Sea of Galilee, which adjoined the territory of Naphtali. The word Darom seems to be another name for Galil, or Galilee, the nucleus of which was in Naphtali; see Jos. 20. 7; 21. 32. P.]

Ver. 28. [The fountain of Jacob. This seems first an allusion to Jacob's well, mentioned, Jn. 4. 5, 6, 12; and then to the fountain of human life, of which he was the prolific source. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The people of God are a peculiar and great generation; safe in the hand of their God, from everything but unbelief; taught of God, and sweetly constrained to receive and obey his instructions; and privileged with the law of God, sounded in their ears, and written on their hearts. Unbounded blessings are with God for them; blessings suited to every tribe, every station in life, whether warriors, ministers, sailors, husbandmen, miners; blessings suited to every relation, and to every change of circumstance. And who can express their blessedness who have God's law for their rule, God's land for their residence, and God himself for their helper, refuge, saviour, shield, portion, and infinite ALL! It is happy to be separated from the world, in order to enjoy him. But it is ravishing to leave this world, quite transported with the glorious excellences of God in Christ, and of our spiritual interest in him, to behold his face, and to enter upon the unveiled, uninterrupted enjoyment of him in glory.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 1. And Moses went up, &c. Most commentators consider this whole chapter an addition by Joshua, Phinehas, Ezra, or some other prophet; others consider it as the ancient commencement of the book of Joshua, which, by the act of some transcriber, was subjoined as a conclusion to Deuteronomy; whilst others would terminate Deuteronomy with ver. 4, and commence Joshua at ver. 5. But all this is mere conjecture, and, unless aided by an additional conjecture, part must be self-evidently wrong. For unless it be conjectured that Joshua went with Moses, who could tell what Moses saw; or know, or say anything of his death, and the manner or place of burial? But why all this profusion, this waste of unsupported conjecture? especially why such conjecture, seeing a simpler solution lies at the very threshold? Could not the Spirit of the Lord which enabled Moses to summon up and record the past events of the world from the morning of creation, and to foretell the future fates and character of a whole nation, up till this day, enable him also to describe the circumstances that preceded his own death but a few hours, and to foretell excellency! and ^{thine} enemies shall be found liars⁸ unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places.

the manner of his burial, and to describe his own character, and typical superiority to all other prophets? C.]

Ver. 6. [Buried him in a valley in the land of Moab. This is evidently a special delivery of the Spirit in four particulars. The burial, the valley, Moab, and the neighbourhood of Peor, which serves to strengthen the opinion advanced in the preceding note.—His sepulchre. The conjecture that the tomb of Moses was concealed lest his bones should become objects of idolatry, seems unfounded, inasmuch as hero-worship, or relic or bone worship, never was a sin that beset Israel. They were imitators, not originals, in idolatry. Is it not rather the last Mosaic type of him who was dead, yet hath no tomb? who, being sought, was not found in the grave, but ‘risen as he said,’ as Moses also certainly was when he appeared on the mount talking with Christ, Mat. 17. 3. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy and honoured is the last end of such as have been active and faithful for God in their generation; and their death would be an irremediable loss to churches and nations, if the all-sufficient Jesus did not supply their room. But precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints; and he makes it pleasant and joyful to them, when ushered in with views of the King in his beauty, and of the land that is afar off. But let me not dismiss this wonderful man of God—this deliverer and leader of his people—this mediator between God and Israel—this extraordinary prophet, occasional priest—this lawgiver and king in Jeshurun—till I consider him as a noted figure of my infinitely more glorious and useful Redeemer. He was a proper, a divine child, early and often exposed to danger. O the exile, the reproach, the contradiction of sinners, the persecution even unto death, which he endured! and how divine his support under his unnumbered trials! How amiable his qualities!—his contempt of the world, in its pleasures, honours, or riches—his compassion and tender regard to his injurious brethren—his amazing meekness—his distinguished fidelity—his prudence, boldness, and holy zeal! Solemn and express was his call to his work, and, by a multitude of miracles in favour of his people, and with the most tremendous destruction of his Jewish, heathen, Antichristian, and other enemies, has that call been confirmed. Extensive is the office to which God has appointed him. He is the Almighty Deliverer, who rescues us from the worse than Egyptian slavery of sin, Satan, and the world; and of heathenism and error. He is the all-sufficient Provider, who bestows upon us spiritual entertainment, hidden manna, living water, and unchanging robes of righteousness. He is the Leader given to the people, who opens a safe passage through every Red Sea of difficulty; and by power and prayer subdues every opposer, and brings us not merely to the borders, but to the full enjoyment of our promised, evangelical, spiritual, and eternal rest. Nor can their murmuring unbelief or rebellion ever provoke him to forsake those who have been given to him by his Father. He is the Mediator between God and men, with whom the promise of grace is made; and who confirms it with all by the shedding and sprinkling of his blood. He had his Father's law in his heart, fulfilled it for us, and gives it to us as our rule. He not only fasted and prayed, but died for a stiff-necked and rebellious people. He infallibly prevents our utter rejection. He is the incomparable Prophet, who knows the full mind of God, and can teach us by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and make us wise unto salvation. He speaks as never man did. He is the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person, which we can behold, and be familiar with, only as veiled with our nature. He is our glorious Priest, who shed his blood, and sprinkled it on the altar, to fulfill JEHOVAH's justice; and on the book of the law as a command, fulfilling it in our stead; and he sprinkles it on the people's conscience, to purge them from dead works to serve the living God. He authorizes all the true ministers of the church, and consecrates the saints as spiritual priests, and all the ordinances thereof, unto the service of God. He is King and Lawgiver to his Israel indeed, appointing the whole form and ordinances of his church; and to him is the whole government thereof committed by God. His whole life was remarkable for fidelity in the service of God, and his death was marvellous and voluntary. His grave was appointed of God; but in it he saw no corruption; and with him were buried all the ancient ceremonies, the law as a covenant, and the sins of all who believe.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

This book represents God's fulfilment of his promises to the patriarchs and their descendants, in giving them the land of Canaan; and the fulfilment of Noah's curse upon Canaan, in the destruction and slavery of his descendants. It relates what was transacted by Joshua as governor of Israel; particularly how God confirmed his call and encouraged him to his work; his sending spies to view Jericho; the miraculous passage through Jordan, and erecting memorials of it; his sanctification of the people by their circumcision and eating the passover, i.-v.; his miraculous conquest of Jericho, and severe punishment of Achan's theft of the spoil, vi. vii.; his conquest of Bethel and Ai, and league with the Gibeonites, viii. ix.; his conquest of the south part of Canaan, and causing the sun to stand still, x.; his conquest of the northern parts of that country, xi.; an account of Canaan, xii.-xiv.; his division of it to the nine tribes and a half; his appointment of cities of refuge and of cities to the Levites, xv.-xxi.; his kind dismissal of the Reubenites and Gadites, xxii.; his solemn admonitions to the people, and renewal of their covenant with God; and, in fine, his death and burial, xxiii. xxiv.

[In addition to its sacred interest, the book of Joshua is one of the most ancient and important geographical and ethnological treatises extant. In giving an account of Joshua's conquests the historian sketches briefly, but with a master's hand, the leading physical features of the country, its topography, and the characteristics of the principal tribes by which it was then held. The licentious inhabitants of Jericho, the hardy mountaineers of Ai, the wily Gibeonites, the warlike Jebusites, the trained hosts of Jabin and his allies who swept the northern plains in chariots of iron, are all passed in rapid review before the eye of the reader. Then with a geographical accuracy and minuteness of detail altogether unparalleled in ancient literature, the boundaries of the allotted territories of the twelve tribes are defined, and their principal towns enumerated. Most of the boundary lines can still be traced, and many of the old cities identified. The book of Joshua thus forms an invaluable hand-book to the ancient topography of Palestine. The list of kings or chiefs, whose cities and territories were conquered by Moses and Joshua, is also of very great importance; and there are several episodes in the book which throw light upon certain remarkable localities and peoples: such as the story of the conquest of Hebron and its giant inhabitants of the race of Anak by Caleb; the capture of Kirjath-sepher, 'the town of books,' by Othniel; and the petition of Ahsah, Caleb's daughter, 'Give me also springs of water.' These, with others of a similar character, tend to give a primeval history something of the vivid colouring of a life-picture. P.]

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 7. Be thou strong and very courageous. The greatest instance of courage, is moral courage in reproving what is wrong and teaching and enforcing what is right. Therefore the Lord admonishes Joshua to be very courageous, not against enemies, but to observe all the law which Moses had commanded.

Many who would dare to hazard death, would not dare to encounter the coldness or alienation of friends, the laugh of ridicule, the brow of scorn, the voice of reproach, the turmoil of argument, the jealousy of opposition, or the obloquy of detraction. Sensitive minds shrink from these petty annoyances as unworthy of their energies, and consequently suffer the imputation and the evils of the worst species of cowardice. In this moral courage Moses, Joshua, Jeremiah, and Paul are pre-eminent—Christ perfect. C.—Joshua's strength and courage would be tested in attempting, in the face of the opposition and rebellion of the Israelites, to keep

HILL OF SARIS—IN SIGHT OF THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA. [JOSHUA, i: 4.]—"From the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast." The Hill of Saris is at the upper head of the pass or glen which is called Wady 'Ali. From its top we have a fine view of the Great or Mediteranean Sea that the Lord promised Joshua, as we learn from the fourth verse of the first chapter, should be the western boundary of the country promised to the children of Israel. The land which the children of Israel actually occupied was very small, but the boundaries which are given in this fourth verse as the promised land include an immense territory. Nations are like individuals; they rarely occupy all that belongs to them.

5 ¶ There^f shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. ⁹As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

6 Be^h strong, and of a good courage; for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance² the land which I swear unto their fathers to give them.

7 Only be thou strong,³ and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: ^hturn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever thou goest.

8 This^m book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.⁴

1 The boundaries of the 'land of promise' are here defined generally. 'The wilderness,' Midbar, of Tih, on the south, 'this Lebanon,' i.e. the Lebanon visible from Shittim, which must have been Hermon; the Euphrates away on the extreme north; and the Great Sea, or Mediterranean, on the west.—P.

4 Or, do wisely.

5 Manna was still the food of the people. It was ordinarily gathered every morning. It would seem, however, that a special store was now to be laid in to prevent the necessity of gathering it when marching toward Jericho, and crossing the Jordan.—P.

6 The Israelites had taken and rebuilt or fortified a number of cities on the east of the Jordan, and in these they placed their wives, children, and cattle. It must not be supposed that all the full-grown men of the two tribes and half marched across Jordan in the van of the Israelites. Only those between the ages of twenty and fifty were required to go to war.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—God keeps up an honourable remembrance of his faithful servants. And it is a comfort to the church that, although her ministers die, Jesus her Redeemer lives to provide others in their room. But those who have behaved well in an inferior station, will, in general, and ought to be advanced to a higher. Certainly and seasonably, however slowly, the promises of God are fulfilled at last, with respect to everything temporal or eternal: nor need we fear to proceed in the most difficult work if God promise to us his presence and assistance. When he is pleased to work, none can let it. But as we must live by the word of God, so we must work and war by it; and, being once called and encouraged of God, we ought with the utmost readiness to set about our work. God can quickly bow the hearts of all such as are necessary to assist us therein. And it is delightful when magistrates, ministers, and people concur in their regard to and dependence on God, and when subjects are no less cheerful in their obedience, and doing their duty as good citizens, to themselves and one another, than rulers are exact in commanding what is lawful.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. Jericho was the most important city in the Jordan valley at the time of the exodus. It appears, however, that its site was changed, though at what time, or for what reason, is unknown. The city destroyed by Joshua and rebuilt by Hiel stood beside Elisha's fountain, about a mile and a half north-west of the village of Riha. But the Jericho which our Lord visited stood two miles farther south, at the base of the mountains where the road from Jerusalem descends into the plain. The ruins of both cities I have surveyed with care. They are most distinctly marked. The plain around them is rich and beautiful, and though the palm-trees that once gave the city a distinguishing name are now nearly gone, there is still abundance of foliage. P.]

Ver. 5. [Whither the men went I wot not. The first part of the statement, ver. 4, may have been true, the second was certainly false. How can this untruth be justified? How had this woman faith? We answer to the first question—it cannot be justified at all, it is utterly condemned. To the second—does the infidel objector mean to affirm, what his question implies, that he who commits any single immoral act can have no moral principle? What havoc amongst infidels would this decision effect! Rahab did possess faith as a 9 And she said unto the men, I know that the LORD hath given you the land, and that your terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land faint⁴ because of you.

10 For we have heard how the LORD dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And as soon as we had heard these things, our hearts did melt, neither did there remain any more courage in any man because of you; for the LORD your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath.⁶

12 Now therefore, I pray you, swear unto me by the LORD, since I have showed you kindness, that ye will also show kindness unto my father's house, and give me a true token:

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

14 And the men answered her, Our life for yours,⁷ if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, when the LORD hath given us the land, that we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

15 Then she let them down by a cord through the window: for her house was upon the town-wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.⁸

16 And she said unto them, Get you to the mountain,⁹ lest the pursuers meet you; and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be blameless of this thine oath which thou hast made us swear:

18 Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread¹ in the window which thou didst let us down by: and thou shalt bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

19 And it shall be, that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street,

²⁵ The case of this woman is very remarkable. Some of her expressions, especially those in ver. 11, indicate a distinct acknowledgment of Jehovah. Whatever means by which her knowledge had been acquired, surely she had been made the subject of the influence of God's own Spirit. Her meagre opportunities must have been well improved, and she had been blessed of him who declares that 'to him that hath shall be given.' When we contrast her faith with that exhibited, on many occasions, even by the chosen people who had witnessed the wonders of Jehovah's outstretched arm, we are reminded of our Saviour's expressions with reference to the centurion, 'Verily, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. —I.

AND Joshua rose early in the morning; and they removed from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

2 ¶ And it came to pass after three days, that the officers went through the host;

3 And they commanded the people, saying, When ye see the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, and the priests the Levites bearing it, then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

4 Yet there shall be a space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it; that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way heretofore.²

REFLECTIONS.—Proper means and prudent caution must never be neglected when we trust God with the success of our enterprises. Even the best and greatest rulers must see with other people's eyes: and it is a great mercy to a nation when those to whom interesting affairs are committed are persons of fidelity and diligence. The grace of God can easily change the most vile sinner into a choice saint: and true believers will risk their all for God. Nor must we reject them as reprobates who are guilty of some very condemnable actions; there may be true and justifying faith where much sinfulness still works. But it is hard to get rid of a bad character when once fixed, even by repentance and amendment: and that remaining badge of our shame ought to excite us to frequent and bitter sorrow for the sin which occasioned it. God can easily send his terrors to the hearts of his enemies, so that the boldest shall tremble: and often sinners' frights are presages of their fall. But the faith of God's promises will powerfully influence a person to a regard for the people of God, even at the expense of natural affections. And when we cannot prevent the ruin of our city or nation, we ought cautiously to provide for the safety of ourselves and kindred. And all agreements, especially such as concern life and death, ought to be made with the greatest exactness. We must never mingle with the world which lieth in wickedness, if we would not be condemned with it. Faith, which foresees the ruin of the ungodly, will urge us to save ourselves from among them: and the lives that are jeopardized for Christ's service shall be secured by his mercy. But the most prudent means ought to be used for our safety, even while we trust our all to God and his redeeming grace. And God can easily make such as are weak encouragers of his strongest saints.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 1. Came to Jordan. The snows that cover Hermon are the real sources of the river Jordan. It has two historical sources:—one at the base of a rounded hill in the midst of a marshy plain. On the hill once stood the border city of Dan. The other is four miles eastward, on a terrace on the southern declivity of Hermon, beside the ruins of Baniyas or Cæsarea-Philippi. The highest perennial source of the Jordan is not named in history; it is in the bottom of a valley at the western base of Hermon, near the town of Hasbeiya, and 12 miles north of Dan.

it is greater still than the passing of the Red Sea: that was instrumentally effected by a mighty wind, this by the ark and the feet of the priests. CHAPTER IV.

1 Twelve men are appointed to take twelve stones for a memorial out of Jordan. 9 Twelve other stones are set up in the midst of Jordan. 10, 19 The people pass over. 14 God magnifieth Joshua. 20 The twelve stones are pitched in Gilgal.

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed ^aover Jordan, that the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Take^b you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man;

3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where the priests' feet stood firm, ^ctwelve stones; and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them ^din the lodging-place where ye shall lodge this night.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had ^eprepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man;

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the LORD your God ^finto the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel;

About 5 miles south of Dan the three unite, and after a course of 6 miles more the Jordan expands into the Lake Merom, and in about 28 miles farther it enters the Lake or Sea of Gennesareth or Tiberias. From this lake it pursues its course, still southerly, through a dreary valley till it empties itself into the Dead Sea. The whole course, computing the windings of the stream, is about 160 miles. Travellers differ greatly as to its width; but from the average it may be estimated at about 90 feet. That it formerly overflowed its banks the Scriptures assert, ver. 15; 1 Ch. 12. 15; this some travellers deny. No rational man can doubt the Scripture statement, and recent researches prove it to be strictly accurate. That it rises an average of about 9 feet, by the melting of the snow upon Lebanon and Hermon, is agreed upon all hands. This passage took place in April, when the river is broadest and deepest; a fact so far important as it stultifies the infidel conjecture of some German neologists, who pretend that a rock having fallen stopped the stream, and that Joshua, taking advantage of the circumstance, affirmed that it was a miracle, and so encouraged the people to follow. Surely these are the men who, 'counting themselves wise, become fools!' C. and P.]

Ver. 15. [Hebrew: 'For the Jordan was full up to all its banks all the days of harvest.' This clause is explanatory of the statement that the priests dipped their feet in the brim of the river. Under ordinary circumstances this would be impossible, for the real channel of the river has perpendicular banks from 6 to 8 feet deep, always swept by the torrent. In early spring, however—the time of harvest in the valley of Jericho—the river rises over these banks and floods the flat bottom of the narrow ravine through which the channel flows. The priests bearing the ark could, without any danger, dip their feet in the water which overflowed the banks. The opening of a passage through the river at such a season was the greater miracle. Had it been late in the summer it might have been thought that natural causes operated; but in harvest—the time of the overflow—the finger of God must have been manifest to all. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let us always press forward in the way of our duty, notwithstanding foreseen difficulties attending it. And when we have done our utmost, the Lord can step in and clear our passage. Let us follow his word as our guide, and our way will be right. But let us always set Jesus, the Ark of the covenant, before us, by faith depend on him, and with due reverence follow his example; and if we cannot get rid of faults, let us detest them. Let ministers go before others, as he-goats before the flock; and though they should be more exposed than others, that Christ, whose name they bear in their ministrations, shall be their protection; for God highly honours those that honour him; and those who are comforted and encouraged of God should encourage and strengthen their brethren. In the moment of difficulty the Lord will be seen. The greatness of the difficulty shall but the more magnify the power of God in overcoming it. And Christ will be the protection of his people in trouble or death, till they be all clean passed over into Canaan above. If then I expect a noted appearance of God for my relief, let me make solemn preparation for it, separating myself from every sinful lust and carnal care. Always seeking the honour which cometh from above, let me improve God's present manifestations of power and love as pledges of more, nay, of eternal and immediate enjoyment of him. Let no occasional advantage, gained by the opposition made to my happiness, or to the church of God, dismay me; for the Lord sits King upon the floods, and is mightier than the noise of many waters.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 4. Twelve men whom he had prepared. By instructing them to come without any other burden, and informing them of their specific duty; and, as is not improbable, by exercising them to lift and carry such stones as would give to future times a remarkable specimen of their strength, as well as a memorial of the miracle the Lord had wrought for the passage of his people—a lively emblem of every one who would, in any office, minister to God and his church. He must be prepared, he must bear upon his shoulder his appointed burden; and when laid down, it is to form a memorial of the grace and power of God. C.]

ANCIENT JERICHO—WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL FIRST CAMPED. [JOSHUA, iv:19.]—"And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month and encamped in Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho." Jericho is a city of great antiquity. It is situated in what is called the plain of the Jordan, and is consequently over against the ford of the river where, under the leadership of Joshua, the Israelites crossed. It is about 6 miles west of the Jordan and about 8 miles northwest of the Dead Sea. It once had a king, and its walls were so wide that houses were built upon them. Here the sons of the prophet sought retirement from the world. The city rose to great influence during the reign of Herod, who had his residence here. He fortified it and built many palaces, which he named after his friends. Here he died, and it was in the amphitheater of Jericho that the news of his death was announced to the assembled soldiers and people by Salome.

6 That this may be ^aa sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come,¹ saying, What mean ye by these stones?

7 Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were ^bcut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and ^cthese stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever.

8 And the children of Israel did so as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones² out of the midst of Jordan, as the LORD spake unto Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there.

9 ¶ And Joshua set up twelve stones in ^kthe midst of Jordan,³ in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood: and they are there unto this day.⁴

10 ¶ For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, ^luntil everything was finished that the LORD commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses ^mcommanded Joshua: and the people ⁿhasted⁵ and passed over.

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the LORD passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people.

12 And ^othe children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them.⁶

13 About forty thousand prepared for war^p passed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho.

14 ¶ On that day the LORD ^qmagnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel; and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life.

15 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

16 Command the priests that bear ^rthe ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, ^sCome ye up out of Jordan.

³ Some are disposed to adopt 'from the midst of Jordan,' as they suppose only twelve stones taken up and carried to Gilgal, whereas the words in the text set up other twelve in the river. But this new reading is unsupported by Hebrew MSS., and therefore to be rejected. Besides these twelve stones would not, as supposed, remain always invisible, but would, when the swollen river had returned to its usual bed, form a second witness to the wondrous works of the Lord.—C.

A system which embodies, vitalizes, and perpetuates tradition, but a system as different from mere tradition as a house built upon a rock differs from a house built upon sand. As an example of tradition without scriptural authority take Mat. 15. 3, 6; Col. 2. 8. For the authority of traditions, that is, records delivered on scriptural warrant, see 2 Th. 3. 6; 1 Co. 11. 2, in which last-cited passage the ordinances, or traditions, evidently comprehend the Lord's supper. To traditions so embodied the infidel can produce no rational objection. Read ver. 20-23. See Leslie's Short Way with the Deists, and Dwight on the Lord's Supper. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—No care or labour of our own should ever hinder us from that which tends to the immediate honour of God, and the commemoration of his wonderful works. And if not one Israelite, however feeble, perish in trouble or in death, surely it becomes all to keep his mighty works in everlasting remembrance. Never let us hunt after pomp or finery in our memorials; for God has chosen the weak and foolish things of this world to confound all earthly glory. Let every accommodation, even in outward things, render us forward and exemplary in duty. If we be called forth to God's work, we may cheerfully leave all our worldly concerns behind us: and if we have God's presence with us, we need not be weary, nor doubt but we shall safely land at last: for though the years of our pilgrimage should be many and sorrowful, they have an appointed end: let us therefore never hurry out of danger till our work in it be finished. But whatever perilous work God allots to us, let us go through it with proper despatch, never with unbelieving haste:

and let us always honour those whom God honours by his providence. The religious inquiries of young people should be encouraged and gratified to the uttermost. If we wish them wise when they are old, they ought to be inquisitive when they are young. But if we wish our present mercies to be doubly sweetened, let us compare them with our former ones.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 2. Sharp knives. Knives of flint, as in the marginal translation. The use of flint for knives, arrows, spear-heads, chisels, and hatchets has been common in many nations. Specimens of some, or all of them, are occasionally found in almost every country of Europe, as well as of Asia. The Egyptians, according to Herodotus (b. ii.), used them in opening bodies for embalming, and some of the judaizing Abyssinian Christians use them still in

THE CHURCH AT GILGAL—WHERE THE ISRAELITES KEPT THE FIRST PASSOVER IN THE PROMISED LAND. [JOSHUA, v.10.]—"And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho." This was the site of the first camp of the Israelites after they crossed over the River Jordan, the place at which they passed the first night in the promised land, and where the 12 stones were set up which had been taken from the bed of the stream. In the above view we have a picture of a church built by the Greek Christians. This is perhaps the most interesting building between the Judean mountains and the River Jordan. This is about 20 miles from Jerusalem, and to reach it one makes a descent of 3800 feet over the rockiest and roughest road perhaps in Christendom. There are many ruins found in this plain, but the Judean hills overlooking it are the same that they were when Joshua encamped here with the children of Israel.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised; but 'all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they 'had not circumcised.

6 For the children of Israel walked 'forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: unto whom the LORD swore that 'he would not show them the land which the LORD 'swore unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

7 And their children, whom 'he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

8 And it came to pass, when they had done circumcising all the people,³ that they abode in their places in the camp till they were whole.

^o It would appear that Gilgal was the name of the place before the exodus for Moses describes the Canaanites as dwelling over against Gilgal. De. 11. 30.

The meaning in this passage does not appear to be that a new name was given to the place, but rather that a new meaning and significance were attached to the old name. The word Gilgal means 'a circle,' and also 'a rolling away.'

A similar play upon the meaning of a word occurs in the case of Gilead; and Bethel is an example of an old name having attached to it a new significance. This explanation—simple, natural, and in full accordance with the genius of oriental languages—removes at once the objections which have been brought against the passage.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Sad is the case of those against whom the Lord is come up as an enemy. How can their hearts be courageous or their hands be strong? Even his secret terrors can bring them into the agonies of death. The sins of parents often, in a fearful manner, bereave their children of the seals of God's covenant, or their happy virtue: but his mercy can remove the reproach and plague in his time. And by circumcision of their hearts, by feasting them on the flesh and blood of his Son, by giving them foretastes of the heavenly joys, and manifestations of himself as their leader and protector, he must prepare his people for their spiritual warfare. Such then as would courageously fight his battles should first solemnly devote themselves to him, and act faith upon him, in the use of his sacraments. But let us use the gospel manna while we have it; the time is at hand when it shall be no more offered: and let us never expect extraordinary supplies when ordinary can be had. But if Jesus appear for our direction or encouragement in doubtful or perilous circumstances, let us entertain his visits with the utmost reverence, purity, and the readiest obedience.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 26. Cursed be the man before the Lord that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho. A new city called Jericho appears to have been built at no great distance from the site of the old, Ju. 1. 16; 3. 13. But this curse of Joshua prevented the rebuilding of the original Jericho till the time of Ahab, about 530 years after the anathema was pronounced. Hiel of Bethel, at that time, dared to rebuild it; but, according to the threatening, his eldest son was taken away when the foundations were laid, and when he set up the gates he was left childless, 1 Ki. 16. 34. C.—The reason of this remarkable curse is not stated. We can scarcely suppose that it is a mere arbitrary anathema. The licentiousness of Sodom probably clung to the whole valley, owing perhaps in some degree to the

⁷ The ark of the covenant, so called because it contained the two tables on which the covenant was inscribed, was the symbol of the divine presence. It is particularly stated, that it compassed the city: because it was he whose presence it declared, whose mighty power was at the utterance of a sound to cast down the walls: he who said to Joshua, 'I have given into thine hand Jericho.'

20 ¶ So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that ^{"the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city."}

21 And they ^{"utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword."}

22 ¶ But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, ^{"as ye sware unto her."}

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her ^{"kindred, and left them ^{"without the camp of Israel."}}

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only ^{"the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD."}

25 And Joshua ^{"saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this ^{"day; because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho."}}

26 ¶ And Joshua ^{"adjured them at that time, saying, ^{"Cursed be the man before the LORD that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his first-born, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it."}}

27 So the LORD ^{"was with Joshua; and his ^{"fame was noised throughout all the country."}}

2 ¶ And Joshua sent men from Jericho to ^{"Ai, which is beside ^{"Beth-aven, on the east side of Beth-el, and spake unto them, saying, Go up and ^{"view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai."}}}

forth in their spiritual warfare; and in showing them that their success is not by human might or power, but by his Spirit. There is need, therefore, of patient perseverance in using the means of grace, though we see not their immediate good effect: for if we follow God's ark, we shall speed at last, and see his salvation, and he can accomplish the most remarkable events by the weakest of instruments. By the bearing of Jesus' name, and proclaiming his gospel before sinful men, particularly on his Sabbaths, what destruction is made of strongholds of inward corruptions and high imaginations, deep-rooted customs and laws of iniquity; of heathen and Popish errors, idolatries, and superstitions, supported by all the principalities and powers of hell and earth! What in us is natural he purifies for his service; and what is sinful he devotes to irreparable ruin. Nor must we murmur at the severity wherewith God executes his judgments: he is just and righteous unto him, ⁹Let not all the people go up; but let about two or three thousand men⁴ go up and smite Ai, and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.⁵

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men; and they ^hfled before the men of Ai.

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them in the going down:⁶ wherefore ⁱthe hearts of the people melted,⁷ and became as water.

6 ¶ And Joshua ^krent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the LORD until the even-tide, he and the elders of Israel, and ^lput dust upon their heads.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O Lord God, wherefore^m hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? ⁿWould to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

8 O LORD, ^owhat shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs⁸ before their enemies!

9 For the Canaanites, and all the inhabitants of the land, shall hear of it, and ^pshall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth: and ^qwhat wilt thou do unto thy great name?

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Get thee up; ^rwherefore liest⁹ thou thus upon thy face?

11 Israel ^shath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

12 Therefore^t the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed; neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

13 Up, ^usanctify the people, and say, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow; for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^v*There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.*

14 In ^wthe morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes: and it shall be, that the tribe which the LORD ^xtaketh¹ shall come according to the families thereof: and the family which the LORD shall take shall come by households; and the household which the LORD shall take shall come man by man.

15 And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing ^ashall be burnt with fire, he and all² that he hath; because he hath transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he hath ^bwrought folly³ in Israel.

16 ¶ So Joshua ^crose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes; and the tribe of ^dJudah was taken:

17 And he brought the family of Judah; and he took the family of the Zarhites:⁴ and he brought the family of the Zarhites man by man; and Zabdi was taken:

18 And he brought his household man by man; and ^eAchan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was taken.

19 ¶ And Joshua said unto Achan, ^fMy son, give, I pray thee, glory to the LORD God of Israel,⁵ and make confession unto him; and tell me now what thou hast done; hide it not from me.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, ^gIndeed I have sinned⁶ against the LORD God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done:

21 When ^hI saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment,⁷ and two hundred shekels of silver,⁸ and a wedge⁹ of gold of fifty¹ shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

22 ¶ So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent;² and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and laid³ them out before the LORD.

24 ¶ And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his ⁱsons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had; and they brought them unto the valley of Achor.

25 And Joshua said, Why hast thou ^ktroubled us? the LORD shall trouble thee this day. And all Israel ^lstoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.⁴

26 And they ^mraised over him a great heap in all his works. They that will harden their heart against him must, when too late, find their ruin inevitable. But certain and extensive is that salvation which is marked with the blood of the Son of God! In virtue hereof, such as were once infamous in wickedness become as noted in gifts and grace. Such as in this time of his grace submit to his terms of peace he will in no wise cast out; and their relations shall share of manifold mercies on their account. But dreadful and inevitable is the ruin of such as attempt to rear up what God in anger hath cast down.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—How terrible a sin is sacrilege, especially when it is presumptuously committed! It brings the most tremendous plagues upon persons and nations. One sinner often destroys much good; and becomes a plague to himself and to the societies with which he is connected. But terrors of conscience will at last most surely attend indulged wickedness: and the attempts begun in sloth or self-confidence, often issue in shame and despair. It is becoming, therefore, for the most courageous and intrepid to humble themselves under the mighty hand of God, and to tremble for fear of his displeasure. The choicest saints are too ready to be overmuch discouraged by the alarming frowns of God's providence, and in their anguish to utter words unadvised! and yet, of stones unto this day. So the LORD ^{turned} from the fierceness of his anger: wherefore the name of that place was called The valley of Achor,^o unto this day.

CHAPTER VIII.

¹ God encourageth Joshua. ³ The stratagem whereby Ai was taken. ²⁹ The king thereof is hanged. ³⁰ Joshua buildeth an altar, ³² writeth the law on stones, ³³ propoundeth blessings and cursings.

AND the LORD said unto Joshua, ^a Fear not, neither be thou dismayed; take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai: see, ^b I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land.

² And thou ^c shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king: only the ^d spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves. Lay thee an ^e ambush for the city behind it.

⁵ And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city; and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, ⁱ that we will flee before them,

⁷ From the conduct of the king of Ai, and from other circumstances, we may infer that the Canaanites were but imperfectly versant in the art of war. Moreover they were, for their wickedness, visited with the spirit of infatuation. It was not Joshua's skill and courage, but Jehovah's guidance and aid, which gave to the Israelites their conquests. From many circumstances we have reason to conclude that till the time of David the Hebrews, notwithstanding their many victories, had little real military knowledge.—I.

¹⁴ ¶ And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted, and rose up early; and ^s the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain: but he ^t wist not⁷ that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

when the honour of God and the safety of his people lie nearest their heart, a proper sorrow, in such a state, is highly becoming. With impartial care, and proper expedition, should ruinous scandals and crimes be inquired into, and animadverted upon, for the preservation of churches and nations. If we do not destroy sin it will destroy us. And it is mad to indulge ourselves in secret wickedness, when God can so easily bring it to light in the most public and shameful manner. It is desirable, yea, even hopeful, when criminals are brought to a candid and kindly confession of their sin: and yet it is necessary to have their punishment as certain and striking as possible, that others may see, and hear, and fear to do such things; yea, in some cases, to keep up the standing memorials of it.

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, that whenever I put away the accursed thing I may expect comfort from God: and that such as honour God with the first-fruits of their substance are gainers at last; while those who greedily grasp the Lord's share become inconceivable losers: that all the people of God ought to strive together in their spiritual warfare: that prudence and caution are as necessary as strength to insure success: that well-timed yielding procures victory as well as pacifies great offences: and that divine assurances of success inspire men with courage and boldness, notwithstanding former disappointments. Let me here behold how God qualifies his armies and infatuates his enemies. Short is the rejoicing of the wicked! and the prosperity of fools will destroy them. But they who fight the Lord's battles receive their glorious reward, when the end of ringleaders in presumptuous rebellion against the Lord is in shame and confusion. Whatever then God requires me to do, let me do it with all my might. Never

MOUNT EBAL—WHERE JOSHUA BUILT AN ALTAR. [JOSHUA, viii:30.]—"Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel in Mount Ebal." The traveler in passing from Jerusalem northward to Nazareth comes to the entrance of the valley between Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal at Jacob's well. These mountains so come together as to form a natural amphitheatre. Mount Ebal forms the northern side of the fertile valley in which ancient Shechem was situated. It rises to a height of 2986 feet. Upon this mountain the curse for disobedience to the law was pronounced, while the blessing for obedience was given from Mount Gerizim. Its modern Arabic name is Jebel Eslamiyah. This is from a female saint whose tomb is standing on the eastern part of the ridge a little before the highest point is reached. The acoustic properties of the valley between the two mountains have been tested, and it is said that a man's voice uttered in the valley can be distinctly heard across the amphitheatre formed here by the two mountains.

side: and they smote them, so that they ^dlet none of them remain or escape.

23 ¶ And^e the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites ^freturned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of ^gAi.

26 For Joshua ^hdrew not his hand back, wherewith he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

27 Onlyⁱ the cattle, and the spoil of that city, Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap ^kfor ever, even a desolation unto this day.

29 And the king of Ai he ^lhanged² on a tree until even-tide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcass down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise^m thereon a great heap of stones,³ that remaineth unto this day.

30 ¶ Then Joshua ⁿbuilt an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal;⁴

31 As Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, An altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron; and they ^ooffered thereon burnt-offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace-offerings.

32 And he ^pwrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he⁵ wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

33 And ^qall Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark, and on that side, before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well ^rthe stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount⁶ Ebal; as Moses, the servant of the LORD, had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—While the people of God are busied in their sacred devotions, the wicked of the world are often occupied in plotting or attempting their destruction. And while infatuated with malice and revenge, they are generally unanimous against God, his cause, and people. But God, in great wisdom and kindness, commonly restrains the more formidable attacks of his enemies till he has prepared his people to receive them. When alarmed by God's mighty works in favour of his people, men are sometimes ready to solicit their friendship, even by hypocrisy and deceit; while those who pretend to do us most honour are inwardly the readiest to impose upon us. Pretences of religion and antiquity are snares extremely 23 Now therefore ye are cursed;⁶ and there shall none of you be freed⁷ from being bondmen, and hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the house of my God.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the LORD thy God commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

25 And now, behold, we are in thine hand: as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

26 And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

27 And Joshua made them that day hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose.

CHAPTER X.

1 Five kings war against Gibeon. 6 Joshua rescueth it. 10 God fighteth against them with hailstones. 12 The sun and moon stand still at the word of Joshua. 16 The five kings are discovered in a cave. 22 They are brought forth, 24 scornfully used, 26 and hanged. 28 Seven kings more are conquered. 43 Joshua returneth to Gilgal.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem had heard how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to Ai and her king; and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

2 That they feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

3 Wherefore Adoni-zedek king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon: for it hath made peace with Joshua, and with the children of Israel.²

deceiving; and when persons have once begun to lie, it is hard to say where they may stop. Good men may often be deceived by such pretences; for the wisdom of the serpent, even in them, is not always joined with the harmlessness of the dove. And those who are honest themselves, and forward in their actions, are more apt to be imposed on by solemn pretences to religion, and appearances of simple honesty, especially when they do not acknowledge the Lord that he may direct their paths. Covenants once made should be fulfilled with tenderness; and great care ought to be taken that peace and fidelity may go hand in hand. But how amazing are the dispensations of Providence in the superabounding of grace where sin did much abound! By fraud Jacob obtained the blessing which consecrated him and his seed to be the peculiar people of God: and by fraud these accursed Gentiles of Gibeon obtained a covenant, which issued in their attendance on the courts of God, as figures of the gathering of the nations to Christ and his gospel church. Him that cometh to Christ he will in no wise cast out; and if he receive us, we need never complain of the cross which he lays on us. If we serve him, we may bless the day in which carnal liberty is exchanged for spiritual subjection.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 1. Inhabitants of Gibeon. We never heard of a king of Gibeon: hence there is a high probability that the four cities, ch. 9. 17, were small federative states, somewhat like the Hanse towns of Germany, and were not moved to make peace by cowardice or weakness, see ver. 2, but by faith in the divine commission of Moses, and the promise of God to bestow Canaan upon Israel. C.]

Ver. 3. [It is worthy of note that the termination of the name Adoni-zedek is identical with that of Melchi-zedek, who was king of Jerusalem in Abraham's time. The former signifies 'Lord of righteousness,' the latter 'King of righteousness.' The town of Jarmuth, now called Yarmuk, stands on the top of a hill at the western base of the mountain chain of Judah, about equidistant from Jerusalem and Hebron. Lachish and Eglon were situated on the plain of Philistia, on the leading road to Gaza. P.]

Ver. 11. [I read and examined with much care the details of this remarkable narrative on the battle-field. I was then for the first time fully able to understand it. On hearing the tidings of the alliance against Gibeon, Joshua made a forced night march up from the deep valley of the Jordan, to the summit of the ridge on which Gibeon stands; and ere the sun rose the Israelites defiled into the open plateau round the city. Their sudden appearance, and fierce attack, overwhelmed the Amorites, who were driven back in confusion across the plateau. Joshua pursued them 'along the way that goeth up to Bethhoron;' i.e. up the gentle ascent from the plain of Gibeon to the rocky ridge east of Bethhoron. Here they had outstripped their pursuers; but when they were in 'the going down of Bethhoron'—when they were rushing down the stony declivities from the ridge to the town, and from the town to the deep valley of Ajalon westward—the Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them.]

MOSQUE OF WADY 'ALI—NEAR THE PLACE OF JOSHUA'S GREAT VICTORY OVER THE FIVE KINGS. [JOSHUA, x: 10.]—"And the Lord discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah, and unto Makkedah." In the neighborhood of this mosque of Wady 'Ali we are upon a part of the scene where the great battle occurred when Joshua routed the host of the five kings.

They are supposed to have fled from Gibeon down by the upper Beth-horon to the lower, and then southward. The places referred to in the tenth chapter of Joshua, which records his great victory, are still to be found in this neighborhood. The mosque of Wady 'Ali was dedicated to Imam Ali. It is a sacred Moslem shrine, overshadowed by a magnificent terebinth tree. The glen in which this mosque stands is beautiful.

5 Therefore^b the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon and made war against it.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua³ to the camp to Gilgal, saying, ^kSlack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites, that dwell in the mountains are gathered together against us.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, and all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, ^mFear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all ⁿnight.⁴

10 And the LORD ^odiscomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah,^q and unto Makkedah.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the LORD ^pcast down great stones⁵ from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were more which died with hailstones,⁶ than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the LORD, in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he ^rsaid in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand⁷ thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. *Is not this written in the book of Jasher?*⁸ So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.⁹

14 And there ^swas no day like that before it, or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Israel.

So David expresses his victories over his inveterate enemies, Ps. 18.40. The custom seems to have been universal. Soper, king of Persia, is said to have put his foot daily upon the neck of the Roman emperor Valerius, whom he had taken captive in battle. Quintus Curtius records an example of the same kind, when Dioxippus, an Athenian, conquered in a single combat with Horratias, a Macedonian, in presence of Alexander, and concluded with putting his foot upon the neck of his prostrate antagonist. To those who have formed their ideas upon European models, the custom may appear unnecessarily degrading; but to men of Asiatic ideas it conveys no such impression. It merely indicates the completeness of subjugation.—C.

15 And ^uJoshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

16 ¶ But these five kings ^vfled, and hid themselves in a cave at ^wMakkedah.¹

18 And Joshua said, ^xRoll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them;

19 And ^ystay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and smite the hindmost² of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: ^znone moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

22 ¶ Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, ^{aa}put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them.³

25 And Joshua said unto them, ^{ab}Fear not, nor be dismayed; be strong, and of good courage: for thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and ^{ac}hanged them on five trees: and they were hanging upon the trees until the evening.

27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast

Joshua crossed the ridge in pursuit, and on gaining some prominent peak from which he saw the fleeing Amorites below, pursued by the wearied Israelites, he feared that night would come ere the victory was complete. Behind him, eastward, were the heights which covered Gibeon; before him, westward, was the deep valley of Ajalon. Here he uttered the remarkable prayer, 'Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.' P.]

Ver. 12. [Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon. Were even philosophers better acquainted with the causes of the annual and diurnal movements of the heavenly bodies, they would be better able to judge of this miracle. Though all miracles are alike easy to Omnipotence, it may still be fact, that some order of exceeding simplicity effected what appears so stupendous to our eyes. Something perhaps more simple than the stopping of the pulsation of the heart, and consequent suspension of the circulation of the blood. Had syncope, or fainting, never been witnessed but once some thousands of years ago, it would appear as incredible to modern physiologists as the standing still of the sun to infidel philosophers. The objection derived from the words—stood still, or went not down—is unworthy of a school-boy, and indicates as little knowledge of language as of Scripture evidence. The words state a fact in relation to sight, and so are literally true; and if we may admit the translation of Dr. A. Clarke, which there seems no ground to question, then do they likewise accord with the Newtonian astronomy, and most probably develop a still deeper insight in the mysteries of nature. According to Clarke, the address, ver. 12, should be translated:—'Sun! upon Gibeon be dumb; and the moon in the vale of Ajalon.' The effect of which is related in the following words:—'And the sun was dumb; and the moon stood still.' In which words Joshua does not say to the sun, stand still, as if he had conceived him to be running his race round the earth; but be dumb, silent, or inactive, so as to stop the rotation of the earth. And the book of Jasher, in recording the event, speaks with equal philosophical correctness. In the first case he says, the sun was dumb, withheld his influences, but the moon stood still. It must be seen from the address to the sun, that it was near the setting when the words which seem a command to the sun, but are a prayer to God, were uttered. C.]

THE VALLEY OF AJALON—WHERE JOSHUA COMMANDED THE SUN AND MOON TO STAND STILL. [JOSHUA, x:12.]—"Then spake Joshua to the Lord in the day when the Lord delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon." The meaning of this name is "place of gazelles." It is a broad and beautiful valley near the city of Ajalon. It is about 14 miles from Jerusalem. Ajalon was a Levitical city of Dan. It was also one of the cities of refuge, and the city doubtless stood in this noted valley. The modern name of Ajalon is Galo, which is situated on a long hill on the south side of the valley whose name it bears. On the ridge above this valley the Mediterranean and the plain of Sharon are in full view. Going up above it we find dwarf oaks, arbutus and other shrubs, with plantations of olive and carob trees. Flocks of goats may be seen browsing in the valley.

29 ¶ Then Joshua passed from Makkedah, and all Israel with him, unto ^kLibnah,⁵ and fought against Libnah:

30 And the Lord delivered it also, and the king thereof, into the hand of Israel; and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein: he let none remain in it; but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho.

41 And Joshua smote them from ^uKadesh-barnea even unto ^vGaza, and all the country of ^wGoshen, even unto Gibeon.

42 And^z all these kings, and their land, did Joshua take at one time, because the Lord God of Israel fought for Israel.

6 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua, ^kBe not afraid because of them; for to-morrow, about this time, will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou ^lshalt hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire.

converts to him; and, like their great leader, the wicked likewise are unanimous and hearty in their wickedness, and in persecuting the people of God. But when spiritual or temporal enemies thrust sore at us, then we feel the necessity of looking up to Jesus, the Captain of the Lord's host, for salvation. If we have given up ourselves to him, we may be cast down, but cannot be destroyed: Jesus and his angels will flee to our relief: his power, his prayers, shall concur for our protection and deliverance! But how terrible is the danger of his enemies! Both heaven and earth conspire to effectuate their ruin! Every assistant, every retreat, shall prove but a refuge of lies; the meanest saint shall see them fail! And when the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, Jesus shall come to sit in righteous judgment upon all them who know not God and obey not the gospel;—who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power! Oh! unparalleled day! then all the haters of the Lord shall go into everlasting despair; and the righteous, after finishing their fight of faith, and enriched with peace, shall, with Jesus at their head, return, and enter into life eternal in the camp of God above!

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 1. We have here another confederacy against Joshua, formed by the kings to the north of Jerusalem.—Note. This succession of confederacies is no more than what occurs to all who follow the true Joshua to the true promised land. One trouble is no sooner forgot than another succeeds; and one temptation is no sooner resisted and subdued, than another tempter, like Satan with our Lord, Mat. iv., tries some new scheme to pervert our principles and overcome our resolutions. C.]

Ver. 4. [Horses and chariots very many. This is the first time that horses are mentioned since the exodus. Camels, asses, and sheep, during the intermediate period, are frequently enumerated, but the horse never. The Arabian tribes, therefore, had at this time no horses—a fact which Strabo, who lived about the beginning of

CASTLE AT CAESAREA PHILIPPI—NEAR HAZOR, KING JABIN'S CAPITAL. [JOSHUA, xi: 1-20.]—Only a little distance from this castle, Thomson learned of a very old ruin, which is thought to be the relic of the ancient capital of Jabin, king of Hazor, which was the chief city before the time of Joshua, of all the northern basin of the Jordan. In the eleventh chapter of Joshua we have an account of the battle of Israel with this king. We learn also from this chapter that 1,451 B. C., this Jabin, king of Hazor, had chariots and horses in his army. The great Subebi castle is a mile in circumference. It is about three miles from Caesarea Philippi and fifteen hundred feet above it. From the top of its towers there is an extensive and charming prospect. The castle is guarded on all sides by inaccessible gorges and only on the northeast is the hill upon which it stands connected with the main body of the earth.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them unto great Zidon,³ and unto Mizrephoth-main,⁵ and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them as the LORD bade him: he houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took Hazor,⁶ and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them; there was not any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

12 And^s all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword; and he utterly destroyed them, as Moses, the servant of the LORD, commanded.

13 But as for the cities that stood still⁷ in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save Hazor^u only; that did Joshua burn.⁸

14 And all the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.⁹

15 As^v the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so did Moses command Joshua, and so did Joshua: he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

16 So¹ Joshua took all that land, the hills, and all the south country, and all the land of Goshen,² and the valley, and the plain, and the mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same;³

17 Even from the mount Halak,⁴ that goeth up to Seir, even unto Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon, under mount Hermon; and all their kings he took, and smote them, and slew them.

18 Joshua made war a long time with all those kings.⁵

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel save the Hivites, the inhabitants of Gibeon; all other they took in battle:

20 For it was of the LORD to harden their hearts,⁶ that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour,⁷ but that he might destroy them, as the LORD commanded Moses.

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut off the Anakims from the mountains; from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel; only in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod, there remained.

23 ¶ So Joshua took the whole land, according to all that the LORD said unto Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel, according to their divisions by their tribes. And the land rested from war.

Ver. 5. [Merom is identical with Samochonitis of Josephus, and the modern Bahret el-Huleh. It is a lake, triangular in form, 4½ miles long by 3½ broad. It occupies the southern end of a large plain or basin lying between the ridges of Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon. It is fed by numerous streams and fountains, the largest being the Jordan, which flows into it at the north-eastern angle, and leaves it again at its apex on the south, 10 miles above the Sea of Galilee. P.]

Ver. 13. [Cities that stood still in their strength. 'The cities that stood on the hills' is a more accurate translation. The meaning seems to be this:—Joshua burned the cities on the plains, where the northern Canaanites' cavalry, like the East Indian Mahrattas, could maintain strongholds, for they could make sudden incursions. But the cities on the hills, as inaccessible to cavalry, he preserved, with the exception of Hazor, as garrison towns for his own infantry, and the protection of the people. C.]

Ver. 18. [Mount Halak is used by Joshua to denote the southern border of Palestine, as Beersheba is used by later writers. It was probably the line of bare white cliffs or hills which runs across the Arabah some 20 miles south of the Dead Sea. Baal-gad must have been at or very near the site of Paneas, subsequently called Cæsarea-Philippi. P.]

Ver. 22. [In Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod. These were not of the seven devoted nations, and were therefore permitted to abide. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How madly do sinners rush headlong into ruin, notwithstanding repeated warnings by the destruction of others! The strength and multitude of their confederacy do but make their ruin the more notorious. But the greater the dangers which surround his people, the greater supports should they ask and expect from God: and the more entirely their heart is fixed on him as their strength, the more certainly shall their spiritual enemies be subdued before them. That to which sinners flee for help is often but a trap to ensnare them: and their destruction is certain, though sometimes slow; and always just and wise, however severe: the most powerful not excepted. But sure is the victory of his people over all their enemies; and happy is it when God's exact fulfilment of his promises, and our upright performance of our duty, unite together. And blessed indeed must that warfare be which issues in eternal triumph and rest to Christ and his people!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 1. River Arnon. The Arnon rises in the mountains of Gilead, on the east of Jordan, and flows along the north border of Moab, separating it from the Ammonites, and empties itself into the Dead Sea. Burckhardt gives its modern name Modjeb, and assigns it a course of about 56 miles. In summer it is nearly dry, but in winter is an impetuous torrent. C.—The land from the Arnon to Hermon embraces the great plateau and mountain chains east of the Jordan. All the plain on the east is in Hebrew 'all the Arabah,' i.e. the deep valley of the Jordan, east of the river. P.]

Ver. 2. [Jabbok. In summer a brook, in winter a torrent, arising in the mountains of Gilead, near Rabbath Ammon, and running in a westerly direction, joins the Jordan about 35 miles south of the Sea of Chinneroth. C.]

Ver. 3. [Salt Sea. Dead Sea, the site of Sodom and Gomorrah, more salt than any other sea. This special geographical description was given in order to prevent any disputes about the boundaries of the two and a half settled tribes. See ver. 6. C.—The first part of ver. 3 should be rendered as follows:—'And the Arabah to the Sea of Chinneroth eastward, and to the Sea of the Arabah—the salt sea, eastward.' The meaning is, that while Sihon's kingdom extended on the highlands only as far north as the Jabbok, it embraced the whole eastern section of the valley of the Jordan from the Sea of Galilee to the Dead Sea. REFLECTIONS.—Former mercies from God, or services from men, must never be forgotten for the glare of present ones. How happy the saints who have possession of manifold blessings on this side the Jordan of death, even while their principal inheritance lies beyond it! How fruitful then was the promised land, which could support such multitudes of men! How fearful the guilt, and tremendous the curse, which for many ages have rendered it one of the most barren and useless spots on the earth! How confined was the ancient ambition of kings! and how good was God to Israel, who gave so many nations for their ransom, and people for their life!

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 3. Philistines. Descended from Mizraim, second son of Ham, Ge. 10. 14, by whom Egypt was peopled. They must have emigrated from that country at an early period. Though occupying a narrow tract of land bordering on the Mediterranean, and not above 60 miles in length, yet, through industry and arms, they soon became, and long continued, a famous people. They were the most powerful and the most inveterate of the enemies of Israel, whom they occasionally greatly oppressed. After the return from the captivity, the national animosities were revived; and they seem to have been finally conquered by the famous Maccabees. After this period, they either emigrated from the country, or became incorporated with the Jews, as they are never once mentioned in the New Testament, nor by any writer of ordinary history. C.]

Ver. 5. [Lebanon. Lebanon forms the basis of all the mountains of Palestine. Two parallel ranges of mountains descend from the north in Syria, inclosing a valley called Caele-Syria, or Hollow Syria. These form the Lebanon of the Bible, and the Libanus and Anti-Libanus of the Greeks. The Libanus, from its origin in Syria, inclines to the west, and terminates a few miles north of old Tyre. The Anti-Libanus, which is the eastern range, likewise inclines to the sea, and terminates in the noble cone of Hermon. Lebanon signifies whiteness; a name most probably derived from the snows which constantly lie upon the highest summit of the range. This would, in the climate of Palestine, give a probable height of 11,000 feet. C.—'Lebanon toward the sun-rising' is manifestly Anti-Lebanon; and the whole chain is here accurately described from Baal-gad (Banias) under Hermon on the south, to the entrance of Hamath—here signifying the opening from the valley of Caele-Syria to the plain of Hamath—on the north. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The most successful conquerors must quickly bow and pay their tribute to death, the king of terrors; and the best have need to be reminded of their latter end. God graciously and wisely considers the frame of his people, and will not burden them with work beyond their strength. But pleasant are extensive views of what God has promised, though we should never see it accomplished. And it is prudent and necessary that such a rule in church or state should exert themselves to the utmost for leaving all things in good order at their death. With what pleasure God repeatedly mentions the honourable deeds of his people, as an example and inducement to others

RACE OF FREIGHT BOATS, JAFFA—THE SEAPORT TOWN OF JERUSALEM IN TIME OF SOLOMON, AND FROM HIS DAY TO THE PRESENT. [JOSHUA, xiii : 2.]—"This is the land that yet remaineth : all the borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri." We give this illustration here because Jaffa was a city of Philistia. Palestine is said to have originally meant the district inhabited by the Philistines. Philistia embraced the coast plain on the southwest of Palestine, extending from Jaffa on the north to the valley of Gera on the south, and from the Mediterranean on the west to the foot of the Judean hills on the east. The picture we give above is of a scene which will be very familiar to all tourists who have ever landed at Jaffa. As soon as ever the great steamers anchor out in the sea the little boats from the shore begin a race to see which can reach the steamer first. Happy is the traveler if his arrangements for landing have been made previously.

3 As Moses was

of Levi, he gave a special proof that he

thority, in thus overlooking his own

tribe, for, though the Levites were well provided for, yet the security of that provision was so interwoven with Israel's adherence to the worship of God, that, had they universally

vites would have

whilst all the other tribes would have had possession of their estates; that is,

without some immediate divine interposition. . . . This,

however, implied,

that they had as

sites as their brethren had to their estates.—Scott.

21 And all the cities of the plain,⁷ and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, 'whom Moses smote with the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon dwelling in the country.

22 ¶ Balaam^a also the son of Beor, the soothsayer, did the children of Israel slay with the sword among them that were slain by them.⁸

23 And the border of the children of Reuben was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities and the villages thereof.

24 ¶ And^e Moses gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad, according to their families:

26 And from Heshbon¹ unto ⁱRamath-mizpeh, and Betonim; and from ^kMahanaim unto the border of ^lDecbir;

Canaan, "which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

2 By^b lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half-tribe.

3 For "Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and a half-tribe on the other side Jordan;^a but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.¹

4 For "the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, ^fsave cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

5 As^g the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in ^hGilgal: and "Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the LORD said unto Moses ^kthe man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses, the servant of the LORD, ^lsent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

8 Nevertheless^m my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt; butⁿ I wholly followed the LORD my God.²

9 And Moses swore on that day, saying, Surely^o the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as he said, these ^pforty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wandered³ in the wilderness; and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.⁴

11 As^q yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out, and to come in.

(3) So to provide for the Levites, that having little worldly property to occupy them, they might attend on the divine service without distraction. Ver. 6. [Caleb. The object of Caleb is to claim a right previous to the conquest, founded on God's promise, ver. 6, and Moses' oath, ver. 9, and so an exemption from the lot.—Note, Though the lot was a divine institution, it was not to be employed where the will of God is already declared. The sin of Balaam lay in knowing the declared will of God, and seeking by sacrifice to change it. God's will once declared, we must seek no other confirmation—God's will once known, we must allow neither delay nor evasion. C.]

Ver. 12. [This was a noble proposition upon the part of old Caleb. He had affirmed, on his return from spying out the land, that though the cities were strong, and the Anakim powerful and warlike, yet, by the help of the Lord, the Israelites could drive them out. Now he offers himself to put the truth of that affirmation to the test. Old as he was, he would lead the attack on the Anakim and drive them out. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Such as refer themselves to God to choose for them will never find cause to repent of their lot. Yea, it is not only useful but necessary to acknowledge God in all our ways, that he may direct our paths, and prosper the work of our hands; and to view everything that we obtain lawfully as coming from him.—How edifying is it to observe aged professors strong in the faith, giving glory to God! It is not pride, but due acknowledgment, to declare what a gracious God has done for us and by us. The more singular our fidelity has been towards God, it is the more commendable. And if we have served God in godly simplicity in our youth, we shall find the comfort and blessing of it when we grow old. The issues of our life are in God's hand. Neither age, nor sickness, nor sword can cut those who are faithful to Christ. Every year, therefore, through which we are spared is a new call for thankfulness to him who preserves our soul in life; and the death of others around should make us the more sensible of the mercy which preserves us. But indeed wonders of mercy and judgment will God work for performing his promise, in the most honourable manner, to such as by faith remarkably glorify him in an hour of temptation. Such as trust in him will never find themselves disappointed of their hopes. And with the utmost boldness we may insist upon having what he has promised, and dare to engage the most powerful opposer in order to obtain it.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 1. The lot of the tribe of the children of Judah. This lot to Judah seems disproportionately large, but is a fulfilment of Jacob's prophecy. Two things in it are very remarkable. (1) Two parts of it were subsequently given to Simeon and

7 And the border went up toward ^mDebir, from ⁿthe valley of Achor,⁴ and so northward, looking toward ^oGilgal, that is before the going up to Adummim, which is on the south side of the river: and the border passed toward the waters of ^pEn-shemesh, and the goings out thereof were at ^qEn-rogel.⁵

8 And the border went up by the ^rvalley of the son of Hinnom, unto the south side of the ^sJebusite, the same is Jerusalem; and the border went up to the top of the mountain that ^tlieth before the valley of Hinnom⁶ westward, which is at the end of the valley of the ^ugiants northward.

9 And the border was drawn from the top of the hill unto the fountain of the water of Nephtoah,⁷ and went out to the cities of mount Ephron;⁸ and the border was drawn to ^vBaalah, which is Kirjath-jearim.

10 And the border compassed from Baalah westward unto ^wmount Seir, and passed along unto the side of mount Jearim, (which is Chesalon,) on the north side, and went down to Beth-shemesh,⁹ and passed on to ^xTimnah.

11 And the border went out unto the side of Ekron¹⁰ northward; and the border was drawn to Shicron, and passed along to ^ymount Baalah, and went out unto ^zJabniel; and the goings out of the border were at ^{aa}the sea.

12 And the west border was to the great sea, and the coast thereof. This is the coast of the children of Judah round about, according to their families.

13 ¶ And unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh he gave a part among the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the LORD to Joshua, *even*⁷ the city of Arba, the father of Anak, which city is ^{bb}Hebron.

14 And ^{cc}Caleb drove thence the three sons of Anak,⁸ Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Tahmai, the children of Anak.

15 And he ^{dd}went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir: and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher.

16 ¶ And Caleb said, ^{ee}He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I ^{ff}give Achsah my daughter to wife.

17 And ^{gg}Othniel the son of Kenaz, the brother of Caleb, took it: and he gave him ^{hh}Achsah his daughter to wife.

18 And it came to pass, as she came ⁱⁱunto him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field: and ^{jj}she lighted off her ass; and Caleb said unto her, What wouldest thou?

19 Who answered, Give me a ^{kk} blessing; for thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs, and the nether springs.⁹

21 ¶ And the uttermost cities of the tribe of the children of Judah, toward the coast of Edom, southward,¹ were ^{ll}Kabziel, and ^{mm}Eder, and Jagur,

22 And Kinah, and ⁿⁿDimonah, and Adadah,

AND the lot of the children of Joseph ^afell from Jordan by ^bJericho, unto the water of Jericho on the east, to the ^cwilderness that goeth up from Jericho, throughout mount Beth-el,

2 And goeth out from ^dBeth-el to Luz,¹ and passeth along unto the borders of ^eArehi to ^fAtaroth,

3 And goeth down westward to the coast of Japhleti, unto the coast of ^gBeth-horon the nether,² and to Gezer: and the goings out thereof are at the ^hsea.³

4 Soⁱ the children of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

5 ¶ And the border of the children of Ephraim, according to their families, was thus: even the border of their inheritance on the east side was ^kAtaroth-adar, unto Beth-horon the upper;

6 And the border went out toward ^lthe sea to Michmethah on the north side; ^mand the border went about eastward unto ⁿTaanath-shiloh, and passed by it on the east to Janohah;

7 And it went down from Janohah to ^oAtaroth, and to ^pNaarath, and came to ^qJericho, and went out at Jordan.

8 The border went out from ^rTappuah westward unto the ^sriver Kanah; and the goings out thereof were at the ^tsea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Ephraim by their families.

9 And the ^useparate cities for the children of Ephraim were among the inheritance of the children of Manasseh, all the cities with their villages.

10 ¶ And ^vthey drave not out the Canaanites that dwelt in ^wGezer; but the Canaanites dwell among the Ephraimites unto this day, and serve under tribute.

which the district is still superior to all the rest of Judea. Had it been also remarkable for *palm*s, such a noble ornament of the landscape is not likely to have been omitted. If it be true, as many travellers affirm, that fish do not live in the Dead Sea, then, according to Eze. 37. 10, En-ge-di must have been situate on or near the banks of the Jordan. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is very necessary to have everything relating to property exactly fixed and distinguished, in order to prevent after-contentions. The Lord greatly delights to honour such as have honoured him in a day of general apostasy; to reward such as have followed him fully; and to assist such as have firmly trusted in him. Happy is that marriage where the union of hearts, the consent of parents, and the blessing of God, remarkably meet. And if children may ask the necessities or conveniences of life from natural parents in hopes to succeed, with what boldness may we come to God's throne of grace, to ask grace and mercy to help us in a time of need—to ask all the spiritual blessings of heaven and earth! Yes, large and delightful is the portion of such as are connected with Christ: and his spiritual brethren are blessed for his sake with the most extensive and everlasting blessings. But let us remember that the larger our mercies are, the more abundant is our work and warfare to improve and defend the same. And have we not reason to lament that our sinful sloth and cowardice should deprive us of part of that which the Lord our God giveth us to possess?

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 5. The border of the children of Ephraim. This is confessedly one of the greatest geographical difficulties in the whole Bible: and our attempt at solution is offered with much diffidence. The commencing point is Ataroth-adar, which, as we learn from ch. 18. 13, was near to Nether Beth-horon, which was not far west of Jerusalem. Following the translation of Boothroyd—'The boundary of their inheritance went on the east side of Ataroth- adar, to Upper Beth-horon,' from which point the boundary, passing on the north side of Michmethah—which town we conceive to be situate in the southern and not in the northern border, according to the maps—extends westward to the Mediterranean. From the same point at Ataroth-adar, the boundary line eastward passes by Taanath-shiloh, turning a little way south, so as to leave it on the east, and reaching Janohah, resumes its easterly course by Ataroth, Naarath, Jericho, to Jordan. Then, omitting the eastern boundary, the Jordan, the line commences at Tappuah in the north, and passing on westward to Kanah, thence makes its way to the sea. C.]

CHAPTER XVII. REFLECTIONS.—What a fruitful bough is Joseph now become, and planted in a goodly soil! The promise of God is a firm foundation of claim; and if in this wilderness we secure such a title to glory, we shall, when the warfare is over, enjoy the portion for ever. It is good for brethren to dwell

BEDOUIN CAMP, JEZREEL—WHERE CIDEON TRIUMPHED AND SAUL AND JONATHAN WERE OVERTHROWN. [Joshua, xvii:16.]—This is the great plain of Esdraelon. It extends across Central Palestine from the Mediterranean to the Jordan. It separates the mountain ranges of Carmel and Samaria from those of Galilee. The main body of the plain is a triangle. On the east it extends from Jenin to the foot of the hills below Nazareth. It is about 15 miles long; and the north side, formed by the hills of Galilee, being about 12 miles long. From any point of observation in this valley one may see the mountains Gilboa and Little Hermon. It is perhaps the richest valley in the world, and has also been called the great battlefield of the world. It is here that Gideon triumphed, and Saul and Jonathan were overthrown. It is the home of the wild Bedouin, and not more than one-sixth of its soil is cultivated.

to wit, for ^bMachir, the first-born of Manasseh, the father of Gilead:¹ because he was a man of war, therefore he had Gilead and Bashan.

2 There was also a lot for ^cthe rest of the children of Manasseh by their families; for the children of Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, and for the children of Asriel, and for the children of Shechem, and for the children of Hepher, and for the children of Shemida: these were the male children of Manasseh the son of Joseph by their families.

3 ¶ But ^dZelophehad,² the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters; and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

4 And they came near ^ebefore Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, ^f'The LORD commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren: therefore, according to the commandment³ of the LORD, he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

5 And there fell ^gten portions to Manasseh, besides^h the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan;

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons: and ⁱthe rest of Manasseh's sons had the land of Gilead.

7 ¶ And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to Michmethah,⁴ that lieth before ^kShechem, and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah.

8 Now Manasseh had the land of ^lTappuah: but Tappuah, on the border of Manasseh, belonged to the children of Ephraim;

9 And the coast descended unto the ^mriver Kanah, southward of the river: these cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh: the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea.

10 Southward it was Ephraim's, and northward it was Manasseh's, and the sea is his border; and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east.⁵

11 And Manasseh had in Issachar, and in Asher, ⁿBeth-shean⁶ and her towns, and ^oIbleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of ^pDor and her towns, and the inhabitants of ^qEn-dor⁷ and her towns, and the inhabitants of ^rTaanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries.

13 Yet it came to pass, when the children of Israel were ^cwaxen strong, that they put the Canaanites to tribute; but did not utterly drive them out.⁹

14 ¶ And the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am a ^d'great people,'¹ forasmuch as the LORD hath blessed me hitherto?

15 And Joshua answered them, ^e'If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood-country, and cut down for thyself there, in the land of the Perizzites, and of the ^f'giants,' if mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee.

16 And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us: and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley ^g'have chariots of iron, both they who are of Beth-shean and her towns, and they who are of the valley of ^h'Jezreel.

17 And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim and to Manasseh, saying, ⁱ'Thou art a great people, and hast great power; thou shalt not have one lot only:

18 But the ^j'mountain'² shall be thine; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down; and the outgoings of it shall be thine: for thou ^k'shalt drive out the Canaanites, though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong.

AND the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together at ^a'Shiloh,'¹ and set up the ^b'tabernacle of the congregation' there: and the land was subdued before them.

2 ¶ And there remained among the children of Israel seven tribes, which had not yet received their inheritance.

3 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, ^c'How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the LORD God of your fathers hath given you?

4 Give out from among you three men for each tribe; and I will send them, and they shall rise and go through the land, and ^d'describe it according to the inheritance of them; and they shall come again to me.

5 And they shall divide it into seven parts:

together in unity; yet unhappy is the union when they encourage one another in neglecting the Lord's work, and seem more anxious to enlarge their property than to improve what they have. But unbelief strangely heightens every difficulty, and often discourages from the good fight of faith, which necessarily lies in the way to the crown.

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is highly becoming when a serious regard to the worship of Christ and the church of God is intermingled with our most engaging earthly concerns; and it is dangerous to form families or kingdoms without the true worship of God. But what a blessing is it for a church or nation, when the Lord is a wall of fire round about them, and the glory in the midst of them! What mercies then are ours! We have his ordinances, not merely in the midst of our land, but near at hand, in every corner of it: and safely may we, in the midst of enemies, go about the Lord's work. Let us beware then how we are unconcerned about promised enjoyments or commanded duties; lest the sweets of present comforts, or the difficulties in our way to the Canaan above, should weaken our desire, or hinder our attempts, to obtain it. Blessed be God that, though the enjoyment of it be not equally soon obtained, yet it is equally sure to all believers; and that there, as well as here, Judah^e shall abide in their coast on the south, and the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.

6 Ye^f shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, that I may cast lots for you here before the LORD our God.

7 But the ^gLevites have no part among you; for the priesthood of the LORD is their inheritance:² and ^hGad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave them.

8 ¶ And the men arose, and went away: and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it,³ and come again to me, that I may here cast lots for you before the LORD in Shiloh.

9 And the men went and passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

10 ¶ And Joshua ^kcast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel, according to their divisions.

11 ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up⁴ according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth ^lbetween the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

12 And their border on the north side was from Jordan; and the border went up to the side of ^mJericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward; and the goings out thereof were at the ⁿwilderness of Beth-aven.^o

13 And the border went over from thence toward ^pLuz, to the side of Luz, (which is Beth-el,^q) southward; and the border descended to ^rAtaroth-adar, near the hill that lieth on the south side of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence, and compassed the corner of ^sthe sea southward,⁵ from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward;⁶ and the goings out thereof were at ^tKirjath-baal, (which is Kirjath-jearim,) a city of the children of Judah. This was the west quarter.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to the well of waters of Nephtoah;^u

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 1-48. From this, and the seven preceding chapters, it appears that the land of Canaan, into the possession of which Moses and Joshua put the Israelites, was pleasantly diversified with mountains and valleys, and well watered with a multitude of small rivers and brooks, which emptied themselves into the Mediterranean Sea on the west; or into Jordan, which, taking its rise in Mount Lebanon, at the north of the promised land, ran southward; and, after forming the two lakes of Merom and Chinnereth or Tiberias in its course, at last emptied itself into the Dead Sea, into which the country about Sodom was transformed, and which had no visible outlet. The length of Canaan, from Beersheba on the south to Dan on the north, was about one hundred and eighty miles.

Its greatest breadth, from the Mediterranean Sea to the river Jordan, was about fifty miles; and about thirty more to the eastern boundary of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites. On the east of Jordan, over against the territory of Benjamin and Ephraim, the Reubenites had their inheritance in a tract, including the mountains of Peor, Nebo, and Pisgah. On their north side lay the inheritance of the Gadites, in a soil more plain and fertile. Northward of Gad was seated the half-tribe of Manasseh, in that which was afterwards called Upper Galilee, or Galilee of the Gentiles, which was almost as large as both the two former portions. On the west side of Jordan, or rather the Dead Sea, lay the extensive inheritance of Judah. On the south-west hereof was the lot of Simeon; and on the north-west the lot of Dan. Eastward of the Danites, and northward of Judah, was the inheritance of Benjamin. The lot of the Ephraimites lay all along on the north of these of Dan and Benjamin. Next was the lot of the other half-tribe of Manasseh; and northward of them the inheritance of Issachar; and next to them was that of Zebulun. Each of these four last portions extended from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. Northward of Zebulun the tribe of Asher had their inheritance in the north-west of Canaan. The Naphtalites had their portion between the lot of Asher and the north end of the river Jordan. The Tyrians and Zidonians kept possession of a part of Canaan on the north-west of the Asherites. The Philistines kept possession of a narrow strip of territory on the west of the Simeonites and Danites. Egypt lay to the south-west of Canaan; Idumea on the south border of the lot of Judah; and still more southward was the country of the Amalekites and Arabians. On the east of the Dead Sea, and southward of the Reubenites, was the territory of the Midianites and Moabites. North-east of the Moabites, and eastward of the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites, dwelt the Ammonites and Hagarenes; and still eastward of these, beyond a large desert, and by the river Euphrates, the Chaldeans on the south, and Mesopotamia on the north. Persia was on the east and south-east of Chaldea, and Assyria on the east of Mesopotamia. North-east of Persia lay Media; and north of Assyria were Armenia, Cappadocia, Pontus, &c. On the north-east of Canaan lay Syria; on the north of which was Lesser Asia, which contained Mysia, Lydia, Ionia, and Caria, on the east shore of the Mediterranean Sea; on the east of which were Bithynia, Phrygia, Pisidia, Pamphylia, Lycia; and, still further east, Paphlagonia, Galatia, and Lycaonia, which bordered on the east with Pontus, Cappadocia, and Armenia. To the north-west of Lesser Asia, but on the north side of the Mediterranean Sea, lay the countries of Greece and Rome; the former of which is about 850, and the latter 1200 miles north-west of Jerusalem.—A careful attention to this note will be of use to assist the reader in understanding the parts of Scripture history.

Ver. 16. [The territory of Zebulun stretched across the country from the Sea of Galilee on the east to the maritime plain of Phœnicia on the west, embracing a large strip of Esdraelon, a portion of the plain of Akka, the whole of the rich upland plain of Battauf, with the fertile table-land between it and the basin of the Sea of Galilee. The beautiful wooded hills extending from Tabor by Nazareth westward were also in Zebulun. It touched Carmel on the south-west; and though it did not actually reach to the shore of the Mediterranean, its side joined the narrow maritime plain of Phœnicia, TIBERIAS—THE ANCIENT RAKKATH, ONCE THE CAPITAL OF THE PROVINCE OF GALILEE. [Joshua, xix : 35.]—"And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth." According to the Talmud, the city of Rakkath once stood upon the site now occupied by Tiberias. In the fourth century the Jews dropped the name of Tiberias and called the city by its ancient name of Rakkath. Herod Antipas built the Roman city and called it after the name of the emperor, Tiberias. It became the capital of the province of Galilee in which our Savior grew up, and was fortified by Josephus during the wars of the Jews. After the fall of Jerusalem, Tiberias was selected by the Sanhedrin as their headquarters. After that it became a principal seat of Jewish learning. Many of the most eminent Jewish rabbis connected with the history of the race lived and died here.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 ¶ And^h the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan, according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah,ⁱ and Eshtaol, and Ir-shemesh,

4 A city, not a tribe.—[The Sept. omits the name of Judah, most probably from supposing that as Asher, in the text, was a tribe, that Judah must likewise be a tribe. But that tribe having no possessions on the Jordan, the translators seem to have omitted Judah, supposing it to be the error of a transcriber. There is, however, no need of such unwarranted violence to the text. Judah upon the Jordan may well have been the name of a city or territory.—C.]

'Unawares' signifies unexpectedly, without previous plan to kill, while yet the act may be intentional—as if one in the dark, intending to give a salutary medicine, give instead a deleterious drug. 'Unwittingly' signifies that the action is done without consciousness that the injured person was in the way—as if one in the dark, necessitated to run speedily, believing his way clear, should inflict a deadly injury upon a child, of whose presence he was perfectly unconscious. The meanings, however, though distinct, may both meet in the same disaster, as in case of an injury inflicted by a person in the delirium of fever.—C.

children of Israel ^agave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them.⁸

50 According to the word of the Lord, they gave him the city which he asked, even ^bTimnath-serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

51 These^c are the inheritances which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the Lord, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

CHAPTER XX.

1 God commandeth, 7 and the children of Israel appoint the six cities of refuge.

THE LORD^a also spake unto Joshua, saying, 2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, ^bAppoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses;

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares, and unwittingly,¹ may flee thither: and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand ^cat the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall ^dtake him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

5 And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not before-time.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, ^euntil he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

to which Jacob gave the name of its chief city Zidon—'And his side will be to Zidon.' Its opposite extremity resting on the Sea of Galilee, the words of the patriarch were fulfilled—'Zebulun shall dwell on the coast of seas.' P.]

Ver. 21. [En-gannim, 'the fountain of the gardens,' lay at the northern base of the mountains of Ephraim, at the opening of a picturesque valley into the great plain of Esdraelon. It is still a large village, and is called Jenin. P.]

Ver. 22. [Tabor. This city was situate on a famous mountain of the same name. It is a solitary 'cone with the top struck off,' about a mile in height and half a league in diameter. It is richly covered with trees and odoriferous plants, and is ascended by a winding path cut in its sides. The top is covered with ruins of fortresses and palaces, and vast subterranean cisterns for holding water. It is generally supposed to be the 'high mountain' upon which our Lord was transfigured; but there is no certainty, and the probabilities are rather in favour of some other mountain, of which the country affords many. C.]

Ver. 30. [Twenty and two cities with their villages. The names are twenty-six. But Carmel was a mountain, and Jiphthah-el a valley; and it is probable, according to the interpretation of Michaelis, that Tyre and Sidon were only the boundary landmarks, and not included as cities to be conquered. This opinion seems to be fully sustained by ver. 29, where, after passing

Sidon, Tyre, and Hosah, 'the outgoings' of the line are for the first time stated to be 'at the sea from the coast to Achzib.' The chief objection to this view lies in Ju. 1. 31, where the Sidonians are mentioned as a people the Asherites did not expel. But this is not conclusive against the number of cities ceded to Asher, ver. 30; and may be well explained by the very natural supposition, that the Sidonians had colonized within the territory of Asher, from which they should have been expelled. C.]

Ver. 39. [The boundaries of Naphtali on the east were the Jordan and the lakes Merom and Galilee; on the south, Zebulun; on the west, Asher; and on the north, the river Leontes. The tribe possessed a greater variety of soil, scenery, and climate than any of the others. Its northern portions are the highlands of Palestine. The scenery is here rich and beautiful, presenting a marked contrast to the naked rocky hills of Judah and the south. P.]

Ver. 48. [Inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan. The territory allotted to Dan lay on the Mediterranean coast, south of Ephraim, including those strongholds of the Philistines Ashdod, Ekron, Gath, &c. Laish was situate in the extreme north of Canaan, near Mount Lebanon and the springs of the Jordan, and about 140 miles from the Danite settlement in the south. Alas! the moment Providence gave them a goodly land, they forgot the God of their fathers and established idolatry.—Note, While the advantages of emigration and colonization are many to an over-populated and commercial country, it is both the bounden duty and the highest interest of the mother-country to provide religious instruction to her colonies. Not a single Levite seems to have accompanied the emigrants. They accordingly fell from the Mosaic institutions, and commenced that idolatry which was perpetuated by Jeroboam, and extended from one tribe to ten, and finally brought on captivity and the other judgments of an offended God. Let Britain, the fruitful mother of so many colonies, take warning, and learn, that though colonization without religion may enrich a country, it may, and will, in the end ruin a country. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is useful and becoming when men look upon, and care for, the things of others, as well as their own, and give to such as lack a share of their superfluity, or even sufficiency. And it is a mercy to be connected with those who are in favour with God, and closely devoted to his service, though our outward accommodations should be smaller. For rare is that lot on earth in which there is not somewhat remarkable by an accurate observer of Providence. But it is honourable when rulers who do most for their people, covet least from them, and prefer the happy settlement of their subjects to their own.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—In these cities let me behold Jesus, God's holy One, made of God unto us sanctification; Jesus, on whose shoulder

7 ¶ And they appointed Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kirjath-arba (which is Hebron) in the mountain of Judah.

8 And on the other side Jordan, by Jericho eastward, they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

9 These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Eight and forty cities given by lot, out of the other tribes, unto the Levites. 43 God gave the land, and rest unto the Israelites, according to his promise.

THEN came near the heads of the fathers of the Levites unto Eleazar the priest, and unto Joshua the son of Nun, and unto the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel;

2 And they spake unto them at Shiloh in the land of Canaan, saying, The LORD commanded, by the hand of Moses, to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs thereof for our cattle.

3 And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

4 And the lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and the children of Aaron the priest, which were of the Levites, had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.

5 And the rest of the children of Kohath had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

6 And the children of Gershon had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half-tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

7 The children of Merari, by their families, had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

It is useless to describe their positions, as they cannot be comprehended without a map, and those who are furnished with that important companion to the study of the Bible do not need descriptions. It is, however, important to observe, that they were so dispersed throughout the land, that the manslayer in any part of the land might reach one of them in twelve hours or less.—C.

2 These three tribes furnish a greater number of cities for the Levites than any equal number of the other tribes; and that, both because their territory, especially that of Judah, was larger than that of the others, and because being near to Jerusalem, where God purposed finally to organize his church, his providence allotted to the servants of his sanctuary habitations near to the scene of their duties. Of these thirteen cities, Judah and Benjamin furnished twelve, and in them the whole sacerdotal family resided, even though at this time the tabernacle was in Shiloh, which was in the tribe of Ephraim. By this prospective arrangement, God provided for the future preservation of Judah and Benjamin from the apostasy of the other tribes, and for the consequent preservation of his word and ordinances.—C.

Je. 1. 23. 29. 27. 32. 7, is entitled to some more special notice than those other cities of which we know little but the name. According to Eusebius it was situated about three miles north of Jerusalem, and twenty furlongs according to Josephus; a discrepancy easy to be accounted for by the difference of the points from which each calculated the measurement: say one from the temple, another from the north city wall.—Note. Though great cities often attain an infamous celebrity for their luxury and wickedness, villages have no patent of exemption from a proportionate share of the same character. Anathoth stands a sad example of religious privileges abused, poverty endured, wickedness practised, and judgment inflicted.—C.

8 And the children of Israel gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

9 ¶ And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, these cities which are here mentioned by name,

10 Which the children of Aaron, being of the families of the Kohathites, who were of the children of Levi, had: for theirs was the first lot.

11 And they gave them the city of Arba, the father of Anak, (which city is Hebron,) in the hill-country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.

12 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son of Jephunneh for his possession.

13 ¶ Thus they gave to the children of Aaron the priest Hebron with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and Libnah with her suburbs,

14 And Jattir with her suburbs, and Eshtemoa with her suburbs,

15 And Holon with her suburbs, and Debir with her suburbs,

19 All the cities of the children of Aaron, the priests, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

20 ¶ And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim.

23 And out of the tribe of Dan, Eltekeh with her suburbs, Gibbethon with her suburbs,

Let me behold him as a divinely appointed, a near, an accessible, ever-open, large, well furnished, and eternally safe refuge from the power and deep guilt of sin, the destructive and awful remorse of sin, the fury of a raging devil, and the ruinous challenges of a guilty conscience—a refuge to sinners of mankind, who have ignorantly, and in unbelief, spiritually murdered themselves, their neighbours, and even the great God their Saviour! And, oh, what profitable instruction and complete peace we have in him! Haste then, my soul; escape to him for thy life; tarry not in all the by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were, by their lot, twelve cities.

42 These cities were every one with their suburbs round about them: thus were all these cities.

43 ¶ And the LORD ^kgave unto Israel all the land which he swore to give unto their fathers;⁴ and they possessed it, and dwelt therein.

44 And the LORD ^lgave them rest round about, according to all that he swore unto their fathers: and there stood not a man of all their enemies before them; the LORD delivered all their enemies into their hand.

45 There^m failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 The two tribes and half with a blessing are sent home. 10 They build the altar of testimony in their journey. 11 The Israelites are offended thereat. 21 They give them good satisfaction.

THEN ^aJoshua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh,

2 And said unto them, Ye have kept all that Moses, the servant of the LORD, ^bcommanded you, and have obeyed my voice¹ in all that I commanded you:

3 Ye ^chave not left your brethren these many days² unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God.

4 And now the LORD your God ^dhath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them: therefore now return ye, and ^eget you unto your tents,³ and unto the land of your possession, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, gave you on the other side Jordan.

5 But ^ftake diligent heed to do the com-

children. And it would seem a contradiction to the statement so frequently made both by Moses and Joshua, that the Levite had 'no inheritance' in Israel. But let it be remembered, that though what in modern phrase may be called the lordship of those cities was granted to the Levites, yet whether it was exclusive, does not appear. David dwelt in Hebron with all his court, and it is not likely a king would be a mere tenant in his own monarchy; Saul not merely dwelt in Gibeah, but it is called 'Gibeah of Saul.' These considerations will lead to such deductions as will reduce the possessions of the Levites to very moderate bounds. But the best answer to any cavil upon the subject is, that the Israelites themselves—a people that seldom overlooked grievances—never made any complaint, but gave the cities cheerfully for the service of the tabernacle and the temple. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Those pleadings are ever successful at a throne of grace which are founded on God's promises. God largely provides for his ministers, that they may attend on his service disentangled from the cares of this life. And yet it becomes them to be modest and reserved in seeking for themselves. It is prudent, indeed, that ministers' incomes should be connected with the welfare of the church; but it is likewise proper that all such as are taught should communicate to their teachers in all good things. God can easily turn a well-deserved curse into a distinguished honour and blessing: and make the scattering of the Levites in Israel an honour to themselves and a certain mean of instruction to the other tribes. How commodiously the priests are settled for their future attendance at Jerusalem, where God did not place his name till about four hundred years after! But inviolable are the promises of God, who cannot lie; and it is pleasant, profitable, and dutiful to trace out in providence the exact fulfilment thereof.—But was not this Canaan, now disposed of to the Hebrew tribes, a figure of the gospel rest in the New Testament church; a figure of a spiritual state, and of our better country above? These are the lands which are chosen and provided by God for us: remarkably, under his inspection and care, watered with his heavenly rains and dews, and fertile of the choicest blessings, flowing with milk and honey. How holy! how pleasant! how inhabited by God and his children! And by what marvellous grace, wisdom, and power are we brought into them, through much tribulation! Not our bow, nor our sword, but JEHOVAH's arm, favour, and countenance, get us the land: and he that truly enters it shall in no wise, nor ever, be cast out.

CHAPTER XXII. [Ver. 8. Divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren. Such texts form the perpetual targets of infidelity, and although no arrow can pierce them, yet still the bow is bent anew, and another shaft expended, not in the hope of gaining a victory, but with the mere expectation of raising a fool's laugh, or giving annoyance to pious minds. Such men delight to represent Joshua as a robber. Now the answer to such misrepresentations is plain. Joshua was God's avenger against nations sunk into hopeless wickedness. See, ye infidel objectors, the indictment of your protégés, Le. xviii. passim, and especially ver. 27: and when he had cast them out, or rather when 'the land had spued them out,' for their wickedness, such things as were left behind must, as matter of course and necessity, find possessors in the present occupiers of the country. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—However desirable our home may be, God's work must be preferred to it. Yea, we ought to stay contentedly out of heaven itself, till our work on earth be finished, and Jesus dismiss us from our warfare with his blessing. And O! what abundant honour and extensive happiness shall we then obtain, as the gracious reward of our exact fulfilment of our dangerous but dutiful engagements! Our right to fellowship with God and his people should be clearly but prudently attested and commemorated, that neither we nor our posterity may lose or neglect the means of grace. And with godly jealousy professors mandment, and the law, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, charged you, to love the LORD your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul.⁴

6 So Joshua ⁹blessed them, and sent them away:⁵ and they went unto their tents.

7 ¶ Now to ^hthe one half of the tribe of Manasseh Moses had given possession in Bashan; but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them;

8 And he spake unto them, saying, ⁱReturn with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment: divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.⁶

9 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of ^kShiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go ^lunto the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, whercof they were possessed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, ^mbuilt there an altar by Jordan,⁷ a great altar to see to.

11 ¶ And the children of Israel ⁿheard say, Behold, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at ^othe passage of the children of Israel.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, the ^pwhole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them.⁸

13 And the children of Israel ^qsent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, into the land of Gilead, ^rPhinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, house⁹ a prince, throughout all the tribes of Israel; and each one was ^aan head of the house of their fathers among the thousands of Israel.

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,¹

16 Thus saith the ^twhole congregation of the LORD, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to ^uturn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the LORD?

17 Is^x the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD, 18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, ^yseeing ye rebel to-day against the LORD, that ^zto-morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be ^aunclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the ^aLORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us: but ^brebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar, besides the altar of the LORD our God.

20 Did^c not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity.

21 ¶ Then the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, ^danswered and said unto the ^eheads of the thousands of Israel,

22 The ^fLORD God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and ^gIsrael he shall know; if ^hit be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD,² (save us not this day.)

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt-offering or meat-offering, or if to offer peace-offerings thereon, ⁱlet the LORD himself require it:

24 And if we have not ^jrather done it ^kfor fear of this thing, saying, In time to come³ your children might speak unto our children, saying, should watch over one another. But all, especially ministers and magistrates, ought to manifest a warm but charitable zeal against every appearance of evil, particularly false worship; for who knows how far and wide, if once admitted, it may spread its baleful influence. And such as have smarted for sin may justly dread the thoughts of renewing their provocation. In this state of imperfection, even in zeal for God, heavy charges are often brought against the innocent: and therefore with great meekness and candour, and, if need be, with solemnity, ought we to explain our conduct, for the satisfaction of our brethren who have mistaken it: and be concerned, not only that our intentions be innocent, but that our brethren may have no occasion to mistake us. And with readiness and pleasure should we receive men's candid exculpation of themselves, and thank God for it. Happy would it be for churches and nations if all their differences were conducted with so much prudent zeal for the glory of God, that it should be, as here, hard to find fault with either party.

CHAPTER XXIII. [Ver. 7. Neither make mention of the name of their gods. Christian legislators and judges do not hesitate to introduce superstitious and idolatrous modes of swearing, on the principle that every man is to swear in the mode that will most bind his conscience. This is a plausible but unsound argument, as it renders a judicial respect to superstition or idolatry that never should be rendered, and tends to elevate and perpetuate those evils which every true Christian must, by all means, labour to root out. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy is that nation, the rulers of which not only establish the true religion, but also mightily promote it with their example and advice.—Accurate observers of providence may in every age remark manifold grounds of thankfulness, and reasons for exactness in holy obedience: and God's kind favours, as well as his fearful judgments, whether past, present, or future, ought powerfully to influence us to holiness and circumspection of life. But while we are surrounded with temptations, we had need constantly to watch and pray; and to maintain a constant love to God as a mean of preservation from evil. Scarcely any snare is more fatal than affinity or intimacy with

SECOND VIEW OF THE SOURCE OF THE JORDAN. [JOSHUA, xxii:25.]—"For the Lord hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad." It is about 200 miles from this particular source of the Jordan which flows from the roots of Anti-Lebanon to the Dead Sea, about 136 miles in a straight line. It is the river of the great plain of Palestine. The view we get here of the source of the Jordan is in the ancient city of Casarea Philippi. Frequent mention is made of the River Jordan in the Scripture, as a boundary. It was the limit of the Holy Land on the eastern side. The Jordan has several sources near Casarea Philippi. It passes through the lakes of Merom and Galilee. Two remarkable features about the Jordan are its descent and its windings. Between the Lake Galilee and the Dead Sea there are 27 rapids. At Lake Galilee the river is 653 feet beneath sea level, and at the Dead Sea it is 1316 feet beneath sea level.

What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben, and children of Gad; ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt-offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a witness between us and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt-offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace-offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us, or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern³ of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt-offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

29 God^m forbid⁴ that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt-offerings, for meat-offerings, or for sacrifices, besides the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

30 ¶ And when Phinehas the priest, and the princes of the congregation, and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the children of Manasseh spake, "it pleased them."⁵

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: now⁶ ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

32 ¶ And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, and the princes, returned from the children of Reuben, and from the children of Gad, out of the land of Gilead, unto the land of Canaan, to the children of Israel, and brought them word again.

33 And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel blessed God, and did not intend to go up against them in battle, to destroy the land wherein the children of Reuben and Gad dwelt.

5 A disposition to give explanation or make apology is a striking characteristic of a godly mind. Paul explained both privately and publicly his whole manner of preaching the gospel, and Peter explained his conduct in the case of Cornelius, Ga. 2. 2. Ac. 11. 4. So the tribes here do not angrily take fire at the mistaken charge of their brethren, nor doggedly refuse an account, but calmly explain their conduct till they fully satisfy their brethren. No less characteristic of a pious mind is the disposition to be satisfied when reasonable explanation is given of mistaken conduct, or sincere apology offered for offence.—C.

Note. The chief character of religious ordinances is to witness between God and the soul, either by calling up the memory of past events and recognizing the feelings, obligations, and derivative duties, as in the Lord's supper; or the commands, objects, and promises, as in the ordinance of baptism. Our free-will engagements with God, when scriptural, as in the case of the tribes, come under the same description, and require the same literal and faithful observance.—C.]

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Joshua's exhortation before his death, 3 by former benefits, 5 by promises, 12 and by threatenings in case of disobedience.

AND it came to pass, a long time¹ after that the LORD had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua waxed old, and stricken in age.²

2 And Joshua called for all Israel,³ and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and said unto them, I am old and stricken in age:

3 And ye have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto all these nations because of you; for the LORD your God is he that hath fought for you.⁴

4 Behold, I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the great sea westward.⁵

5 ¶ And the LORD your God, he shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight; and ye shall possess their land, as the LORD your God hath promised unto you.

6 Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that ye turn not aside therefrom to the right hand or to the left;

7 That ye come not among these nations, these that remain among you, neither make mention of the name of their gods,⁶ nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them:

8 But cleave unto the LORD your God, as ye have done unto this day.

9 For the LORD hath driven out from before you great nations and strong: but as for you, no man hath been able to stand before you unto this day.

10 One man of you shall chase a thousand: for the LORD your God, he it is that fighteth for you, as he hath promised you.

11 Take good heed therefore unto yourselves,⁷ that ye love the LORD your God.

12 ¶ Else, if ye do in any wise go back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even these that remain among you, and shall make marriages⁸ with them, and go in unto them, and they to you:

13 Know for a certainty, that the LORD your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish unbelievers; and it often happens that our tempters are arrested in sin, and our knowledge and remembrance of the mercies which we rejected a mean of tormenting us when we are deprived of them. It is therefore greatly unbecoming for professed Christians to regard so little the religion of those whom they marry or make their intimates: or to lard their speeches or writings with the names of idols, or even to deck their houses or gardens with their images for ornament.

from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

14 And, behold, this day I am going the way of all the earth: and ye know in all your hearts, and in all your souls, that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

15 Therefore it shall come to pass, that as all good things are come upon you, which the LORD your God promised you; so shall the LORD bring upon you all evil things, until he have destroyed you from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

16 When ye have transgressed the covenant of the LORD your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourselves to them; then shall the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you.

⁵ The mention of anger in God has often been subject of infidel or (so-called) philosophical reprehension. For this, however, there is no ground. The Scriptures attribute not to God the unreasonable anger of men, but a holy displeasure at sin and sinners; of which, if there be a philosophy, that would deprive God, there is then a philosophy that deprives him of glory. A God that does not abhor sin cannot love holiness; and the moral agent that loves not holiness is himself wicked, and cannot be God.—C.

¹ It will be remembered that the first great national assembly of the Israelites in Canaan was held in the valley of Shechem, between Ebal and Gerizim. That locality was much better adapted for such an assembly than Shiloh. Shiloh stood on the rugged side of a hill, with a deep winding glen beneath it, and no spot capable of accommodating any large number of people met for a common object. The valley of Shechem, on the other hand, lying between Ebal and Gerizim, forms a great natural amphitheatre, and would afford ample space for a vast multitude met in council. There is no valid reason, therefore, for attempting to disturb the Masoretic text, or for supposing that Shiloh was meant, and not Shechem.—P.

^s Did those great signs in our sight? How long Joshua survived the passage of the Jordan is not particularly recorded. Josephus reckons it 25, the Jewish chronology 27, Dr. Hales 26 years. We learn from ver. 29 that he died in his 110th year; from which deducting 26 after the death of Moses, and 40 years in the wilderness, we find he left Egypt in his 44th year. There fore every man now present who was above 66 years of age had been in Egypt and had seen the signs which God wrought there; the rest had witnessed with their own eyes all that he wrought in the wilderness. These miraculous events, witnessed from the first in the most public manner, and inseparably intertwined with burdensome national institutions, family privileges, and personal rights, form a mass of evidence for the divine commission of Moses and Joshua, which no history can furnish for the human commission of any of its distinguished characters.—C.

them; and your eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt: and ye dwelt in the wilderness a long season.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other side Jordan; and they fought with you: and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land; and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and sent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you:

10 But I would not hearken unto Balaam; therefore he blessed you still: so I delivered you out of his hand.

11 And ye went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I delivered them into your hand.

12 And I sent the hornet⁴ before you, which drave them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites; but not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat.

14 ¶ Now therefore fear the LORD, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt,⁵ and serve ye the LORD.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served, that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD.

16 And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods;

17 For the LORD our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed:⁶

18 And the LORD drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land; therefore will we also serve the LORD, for he is our God.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. Shechem. Several commentators of high repute are for displacing Shechem in this and every other part of the chapter except ver. 32, and supplying Shiloh, because the ark was at Shiloh and not at Shechem. Various reasons are assigned for this proposal, which we hold it unnecessary to repeat. There is no sufficient authority for the proposal, except the conjecture of the proposers, founded on an imaginary difficulty, which can have no weight against the almost uniform evidence of the Hebrew MSS. and early translations. If the ark was necessary to this great transaction, where was the difficulty in its 19 And Joshua said unto the people, 'Ye cannot serve the LORD: for he is an holy God; he is a jealous God; he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

20 If ye forsake the LORD, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good.

21 And the people said unto Joshua, 'Nay; but we will serve the LORD.

22 And Joshua said unto the people, 'Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you the LORD, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses.

23 Now therefore put away (said he) the strange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Israel.

24 And the people said unto Joshua, 'The LORD our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

25 So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem.

26 ¶ And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold, this stone shall be a witness unto us;

8 A Jewish commentator remarks upon this passage that Joshua says this to them in order that if their hearts had been enticed by any of the idolatries of the people of the land, they should put away the pernicious thoughts that were in them; and Augustine seems to take the same view of the meaning of the passage. It must be admitted, however, that there does seem to be a reference to idols actually retained among them; and these in conformity 28 So Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-serah, which is in mount Ephraim, on the north side of the hill of Gaash.⁹

temporary removal to Shechem, and its subsequent restoration to Shiloh?—Presented themselves before God. Upon the expression 'before God' the idea of the presence of the ark at Shechem is founded. The subsequent use of the phrase, and which in Scripture is generally the best resource of interpreters, does not warrant this conclusion. See Ac. 10. 33. C.]

Ver. 23. [Put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you. We cannot too often repeat our astonishment at the obstinate adherence of Israel to idolatry; nor too carefully draw the comparison between Jews and Christians in this point of view. Idolatry is a pliant sin, and can take many forms. The idolatry of the understanding—the idolatry of the imagination—the idolatry of the passions, are forms more common, and therefore less noticed, but not therefore less real nor less hateful in the sight of God, than the idolatry of the senses. He that places upon any object one particle of the love he owes to God, is as much an idolater as he who bows down to the sun, or worships a beast or an image of wood or stone. C.]

Ver. 26. [The word 'there' must necessarily refer to the place named immediately before; that is, Shechem, where the assembly was held and the covenant made. We may therefore conclude that the ark and tabernacle had been removed temporarily from Shiloh and set up at Shechem. There is, however, another probable explanation given by Masius:—'I think that that spot is called the Sanctuary of God which was the first in all Canaan to be consecrated by Abraham, when he erected an altar and offered worship by the tree which was standing there, and when he received from God his most welcome announcement '—'The Book of the Law of God' is undoubtedly the Pentateuch, and we gather from the statement here that the words written by Joshua were considered of equal authority, and therefore a continuation of the divine oracles. P.]

Ver. 31. [Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua. That is, Israel as a nation served God all the days of Joshua and the elders who outlived him. As individuals Joshua's own words testify that many were idolaters, of which fact they soon gave melancholy evidence. C.]

Ver. 32. [The bones of Joseph. The entire stream of history bears records of the tomb of Joseph. It is mentioned by Jerome, and continues to be pointed out to every modern traveller. It is now a Turkish oratory, with a whitened dome. It lies in the opening of the valley of Shechem, between the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, and only a few hundred yards north of Jacob's Well. C. and P.]

Ver. 33. [About 5 miles south-east of Nablus, on the side of the ridge which bounds the upland plain of Mukhna on the east, stands the village of Awertah. In it is the traditional tomb of Phinehas, surrounded by a rude wall, and partially covered by the branches of a great vine. Some distance from the village, on a hill, stands the tomb of Eleazar, with a cave beside it, to which the name of Elijah is attached. It is overshadowed by large oaks, probably the remains of an ancient sacred grove. These tombs are held in great veneration by both Jews and Samaritans, a fact which goes far to prove their authenticity. Mohammedans also esteem them sacred. The district around them may thus be the place called by the historian in this verse the hill of Phinehas. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers and magistrates are loath to leave this world without spending their last breath in the service of God, and manifesting a deep concern to have religion flourish among their friends after their death. Marvellous and gracious are the transactions of God with respect to his people: and great cheerfulness and gratitude ought to take place in our service of him and in cleaving to him alone. And the most solemn engagements, with a deep sense of the purity, power, and profitableness of religion, should always be maintained, to render us duly diligent and constant in it. It is pleasing to see those who inculcate religion upon others, from choice become noted patterns of it themselves and in their families, and daring to be singular therein; and when people, the greatest not excepted, seem fond of attending solemn opportunities of fellowship with God, and edification to their souls. The glory indeed and influence of the great and good on earth is quickly stopped by death. But when our fathers fail, and since our prophets do not live for ever, what a mercy is it that our Redeemer liveth, and will be with us always, even unto the end of the world!

And was not Joshua a noted type of him, our Captain of salvation, who brings many sons and daughters to glory! God solemnly called him to, and fitted him for, his mediatorial office: and in his baptism at Jordan's banks began to magnify him before the people; nor did he ever fail him or forsake him. Made under and trained up in servitude to Moses' broken law, he became fit for his work; and even his name is pregnant with manifold and everlasting salvation. Through what Jordans of trouble and death does he bring his church into her gospel form, and her true members into their spiritual and celestial state! He circumcises their hearts, and feasts them on his flesh and blood, to prepare them for their spiritual warfare on earth. He powerfully intercedes for them, and makes up all breaches between God and them. Miraculously and wisely he conquers all their enemies, treads them under their feet, and enriches them with their spoil. He purchased and prepares for them the promised, the heavenly Canaan; and in due time puts them into the full and quiet possession thereof, according to his Father's purpose and promise. Having come into the bond of the covenant, he weans them from their idolatry, and makes them serve the Lord, and walk as he also walked.—Readily he receives returning harlots and prodigals—accursed sinners of the Gentiles—and consecrates them to the service of God. But no obstinate and hardened opposer is able to stand before him all the days of his life. Fire, hail, and furious storms he did and will rain upon his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other implacable enemies. Nor till his victories be finished shall the luminaries of heaven, or those of his church, withdraw their shining.
